Traffic Smashups, Water Mishaps Kill 83 Over Holiday

Seven Die at Sutton When Uprooted Tree Falls on Car

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A blistering outbreak of traffic smashups and water mishaps pushed Canada's accidental death toll to at least 83 during the Dominion Day holiday.

Forty-eight persons died on highways clogged by thousands of vacationers and picknickers. Another 26 were drowned and five died in miscellaneous accidents. This compared to a total of 98 dead in the Dominion Day holiday last year.

Ontario, which recorded 10 fatalities in two accidents alone, led the provinces with a total of 42 deaths. A Canadian Press survey for the three-day weekend showed this breakdown for Ontario:

Twenty-four traffic deaths; 16 drownings; a youth who was struck by lightning and a six-year-old boy who was fatally injured in a fall from a streetcar.

Ontario's toll was swelled when a 70-foot-tall elm tree, uprooted by high winds during a vicious thunderstorm, crashed to a car near Sutton Sunday and killed seven persons. Among the dead were two infants and a 20-year-old boy. There were no survivors.

TRIPLE FATALITY

The survey, made from 6 p. m. local standard Friday to midnight Monday, also recorded a triple fatality at Stonecrofts, near Ottawa, Sunday night. Three young women were killed in a two-car crash.

British Columbia had 13 deaths; Quebec 12; Alberta two; Saskatchewan two; Manitoba one; New Brunswick four; Nova Scotia four; Prince Edward Island three.

Newfoundland was the only province to record a fatality-free weekend.

Ontario traffic deaths:

Alanley Gloster, 29, his wife Alice, their children, Allan, 4, Donald 18 months, and Mrs. Gloster's mother, Mrs. Frederick Jones, parents of Mrs. Gloster; and their son Roy, 10, of Toronto all killed when a huge elm tree crushed their car near Sutton, Dunlop Sunday.

Janet Sheppy, 17, Doreen Ryan Jr. and Jacqueline Duquette, all of Ottawa in a two-car collision at Spencerville Sunday night;

Mrs. Edith Agnew, died Saturday in Toronto of head injuries suffered in a traffic smash on the Queen Elizabeth Way.

Andrew Ranger, 73, of Sudbury Friday night on Highway 69 near Parry Sound;

Finds Watch' Bought for $5 Real Bargain

CHICAGO (AP) — Last November a stranger on Madison Street asked desperately to sell a Cash Boy, 15, a ladies' watch for $5.

Because Boy's wife, Arteluar, 16, had a birthday within a few days, he bought it.

Recently, the catch on the bracelet band broke and Boy took it to a shop for repairs. The watch aroused some speculation and other jewelers were asked to appraise it. Then the police were called in.

They made a check of watch thefts but none of the timepieces tallied with the one Boy bought. They said if no one claims the watch, Boy may get to keep it. The jeweler valued the watch at $3,500. It has a platinum case, 70 diamonds, seven sizes and 21 rubies on its face, case and band.

Not Impressed By Kremlin's Explanation

WASHINGTON (AP) — American officials said today they are not impressed by explanations of the Russian Communist bosses' explosive denunciation of Premier Joseph Stalin's dictatorship.

They described the 6,000-word document, issued Monday in Moscow, as a hastily drafted "alibi" and said it probably would not satisfy the outspoken complaints by Western European Red chiefs.

The central committee of Russia's Communist party, led by secretary Nikita Khrushchev, came up with a triple-barreled alibi, officials said, and it should be broken down this way:

1. Any more he says Stalin was impossible because he had successfully fooled the Russian people, the party and personally was responsible for the war victories against Nazi Germany.

2. Opposition to Stalin's rule would have risked disunity at a time when "capitalist encirclement" threatened the future of Russia.

3. Many of Stalin's alleged crimes were not exposed until after he died.

LESS RESTRICTIVE LIQUOR LAWS FOR INDIANS STUDIED

Province and Bands Must Approve

OTTAWA (CP)—A proposal to give Canada's 150,000 Indians less restrictive liquor laws now is before the Commons.

It is likely will be the most controversial of a series of amendments to the Indian Act introduced Monday by Citizenship Minister Pickersgill.

The proposed amendment would give Indians approximately the same liquor rights as now enjoyed by white men, provided their home province and band approve.

During discussion of a resolution preliminary to introduction of the measure, John Diefenbaker (PC — Prince Albert) recommended establishment of a royal commission to study the "tremendous problems" of the administration of Indian affairs.

These problems, he said, would not be solved by piecemeal haphazard amendments to the Indian Act.

SPEAKER RESIGNS

Earlier in the day, Speaker Rene Beaudoin dropped a bombshell in the House of Commons announcing his resignation, climaxing a period of controversy in and out of the Commons over his conduct of parliamentary debates.

The proposed new law for Indians would allow Indians to buy goods in liquor stores, provided the provincial governments agree.

A referendum of Indian bands would have to be held to authorize Indians to buy liquor purchases onto their reserves.

At present, Indians may consume liquor only where provided the provincial administration does accept this provision of the Indian Act.

That is the situation in British Columbia, Ontario, Nova Scotia and the Yukon. Manitoba has asked for the this privilege apply to its Indians.

INDIANS FOR SENATE

Mr. Pickersgeer said a royal commission on Indian administration should enable Indians to air their views on the proposals.

He said Indian treaties should be implemented and guaranteed and there should be a greater degree of self-government for the Indians, officials said, with elected posts in the field and in Ottawa later.

Canadians Celebrate Dominion Day By Staging Mass Exodus from Cities

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Canadians celebrated the Dominion Day holiday in what is becoming traditional fashion as they left cities and towns in a mass exodus to swim at cottages, beaches, picnic grounds and the United States.

Weather across the country was generally not conducive to holiday-making. Although temperatures were in the 70s and 80s in most provinces the air was humid and skies were covered with scattered clouds.

Southern Ontario reported the worst July 1 weather—a severe electrical storm that brought high winds, hail and rain Sunday night, which caused at least 10 deaths and untold damage to crops and buildings.

Ontario police in all provinces struggled with bumper-to-bumper traffic which clogged the roads over the long weekend.

Four centres in eastern Ontario went back past 1867 for their celebrations as they held commemorative ceremonies at Champlain monuments, honoring the French explorer and statesmen of the early 1600s.

Orillia, Ottawa, Quebec City and Sault Ste. Marie, N.S. all cooperated with the Champlain National Society of Quebec in conducting the ceremonies.

In the capital city there was no official ceremony at the monument Monday. They returned to the House of Commons to hear Speaker Rene Beaudoin announce his wish to resign.

Governor General Massey broadcast a radio message Sunday to all Canadians and inspected the 1st Canadian Infantry Division at Camp Gagetown in New Brunswick.

Canadians abroad also honored their homeland with the customary Brigade took over the Dominion Day ceremonial duties. Following a 21-gun salute, sports events, log-sawing contests and a wild-west show watched by 20,000 Europeans.

Canada's geography was toasted in champagne at a reception held in the Canadian Embassy at Moscow, and in Italy good wishes were cabled by Foreign Minister Gaetano Martino.

Investigators Seeking Cause Of Crash in U.S. Killing 128

GRAND CANYON, Ariz. (AP)—Treachérous Grand Canyon winds today threatened to again restrict removal of remains of the 128 persons who died when two airliners crashed three days ago.

Only heavy recovery flights were made to the grisly scene before the air currents forced suspension of operations Monday. More of that same turbulence was forecast for today.

Meanwhile, pressure mounted to find the cause of the disaster, presumed to have been a collision in flight, and to effect a preventative against similar tragedies.

The Civil Aeronautics Administration reported that two airliners — a TWA Super-Constellation with 70 aboard and a United Air Lines DC-7 carrying 26—were off their courses when they went down. Senator Charles Smathers (Dem., Fla.) demanded in Washington that the CAA, which controls airways in the U.S., be investigated. Changes in aviation regulations were foreseen as an aftermath of the tragedy.

Stableman Accused in Death Of Eccentric, Wealthy Spinster

NEWMARKET, England (Reuters)—A 26-year-old stableman today was accused of murdering eccentric Miss Rachel Parsons, 71, reputed to be one of Britain's wealthiest women whose only known love was for horses.

In a three - minute hearing, Denis Pratt, a married man with two children, was charged with the murder. He was ordered held in custody for a further hearing next Thursday.

Miss Parsons' battered body was found Monday night in the cobwebbed mansion where she lived alone and normally locked and barred herself in at night. A blood-stained iron bar was found near the body.

Miss Parsons, who wore a red wig and clothes 20 years out of fashion, was well known to the track crowd in this centre of British racing. She devoted her life to her string of horses and was known as "the grand old lady of racing."

Once, the wealthy spinster threw gilt-edged invitations attended by royalty, in her fashionable London mansion, formerly the residence of the Duke of Kent. Her famous father, Sir Charles Parsons, who invented the steam turbine, left her a fortune of £340,000 (then worth more than $4,000,000) upon his death in 1931. Her grandfather was the third Earl of Rosse.

GRIEVED FOR BROTHER

After the death of her only brother in the First World War, Miss Parsons gave up her gay life as a society hostess in London and moved here for a solitary life.

She also left behind an inherited genius for engineering. In her youth, she had become a qualified engineer and naval architect and held a master mariner's certificate.

At Lansdowne House where her body was found, Miss Parsons lived in the only furnished room of 14 in the mansion and did her own cooking. Yet, her stables

Model Says She Murdered Husband, But Then Repudiates Her Statement

TORONTO (CP) — A beautiful Toronto model, charged with murdering her husband whose death 18 months ago was ruled accidental, Monday repudiated a statement which led police to charge her.

Mrs. Leonard Bicknell, 20, was charged with murder in the death of her husband Bruce, 22, on Jan. 25, last year.

She appeared in court today and was remanded in custody.

Police said she called them late Sunday and said she had "something to tell." She told police she was preying on her mind and she wanted to make a statement. When she learned of the murder charge three hours later she repudiated her statement.

In January, last year, Mrs. Bicknell told police she had shot her husband in the face when a rifle accidentally discharged.

When an autopsy revealed the bullet had entered the back and come out through his chin, she had said her husband might have rolled over on his back just as the gun went off, "everything

RAILS, FREIGHT HAULERS FEEL STRIKE IMPACT

Chief Govt. Mediator To Meet Steel Operators

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Railroads and other freight haulers felt the growing economic impact of the United States steel strike today as union and company negotiators awaited talks with the government's chief labor mediator.

The Pennsylvania and Baltimore and Ohio Railroads posted furloughs affecting some 23,000 workers. And it was indicated more unemployment would follow if the strike continues.

Even as the layoffs were announced, Joseph Finnegan, director of the federal mediation service, arranged to meet separately here Thursday with steel workers and the industry leaders in an attempt to get deadlocked negotiations under way again.

The nation's summer cutback of 18,000 workers was announced by the Pennsylvania Railroad, the largest in the U.S. The B. and O. said 5,000 employees were put on furlough.

Due to lack of steel business, many river barges were tied up at dock in steel regions. Four ships of the Great Lakes ore-carrying fleet went out of service. There were scattered reports of slight setbacks in the trucking and fabricating industries.

STOPS ORE TRAINS

At Scranton, Pa., the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific railroads announced 330 employees would be laid off. By the end of the week following the movement of a backlog of 600,000 tons of iron ore off the Mesabi range to Great Lakes ships, Runs of ore trains to the Minnesota mines stopped when the strike started.

Fifteen ore dock workers already have been laid off. The number is expected to increase as the current supply of ore is cleared out during the week.

Meanwhile, small groups of pickets patrolled the gates of steel plants. All was quiet.

The walkout, shutting off 90 per cent of the country's teel production, climaxed the breakdown of fruitless negotiations in New York over a new contract.

Shortly before bargaining collapsed, the union rejected an industry offer of a package deal which management officials said would have given workers a package increase of 17 2-3 cents an hour the first year, including an immediate 5-cent hourly raise. Average hourly earnings had been $2.46.

The union never publicly put a price tag on the 25 demands it presented to the industry at the opening of negotiations last May. It was reported the fringe demands were far above what the companies were willing to give.

Wants To Regain Freedom Of Speech On House Floor

Prime Minister Will Deal With Matter on His Return

OTTAWA (CP) — Speaker Rene Beaudoin, in an unprecedented move, has handed his resignation to the Commons "to regain my full freedom of speech."

Once he gets that freedom, he may take an early opportunity to reply to the storm of opposition criticism which blew up around his chair during the bitter pipeline debate more than a month ago and which has continued intermittently ever since.

"Never was I motivated by any partisan feelings and my conscience is perfectly clear," Speaker Beaudoin said Monday as he rocked the Commons with his surprise tender of resignation.

"I place now my resignation before the House to take effect at the pleasure of the House. I would wish that it be accepted as soon possible."

WAIT FOR PM

His dramatic announcement made it clear he did not make his resignation effective immediately because of the absence in London of Prime Minister St. Laurent, who has the prerogative of nominating new speakers.

Acting Prime Minister Howe, the only person to reply to the Speaker's statement, said Mr. St. Laurent will "deal with the situation" when he returns to the Commons next Monday from the Commonwealth prime ministers' conference.

It was learned the Speaker's decision was made during the holiday weekend and communicated to the government Monday morning. Mr. Howe informed Mr. St. Laurent of it by telephone before the Commons opened its momentous Dominion Day sitting.

"I am anxious to regain my full freedom of speech," said the 61-year-old Speaker, who was chosen unanimously on Dec. 12, 1955, to act as impartial arbiter of Commons proceedings throughout the life of the Parliament elected that year.

WILL SIT AS MEMBER

It is understood he will continue to sit as a private member and seek re-election at the next election in his home constituency of Vaudreuil-Soulanges which hi has represented since 1945.

Mr. Beaudoin, a veteran Liberal member for Provencher, in Manitoba, is being mentioned as a possible successor for the balance of his Parliament. Tradition calls that the leadership alternates each Parliament between French- and English-speaking members.

The Speaker's chair has been left vacant in mid-session only five times since Confederation, but never under comparable circumstances. On the other occasions it was because of death or ill health which never while Parliament was actually sitting.

Through two sessions, Speaker Beaudoin came to be regarded as one of the best Speakers the Commons ever had. Only one of his many rulings was challenged.

Monday night there was a big bang in the living room. Mrs. Zilm found a shattered bottle and a floor wet with champagne.

Worst Disaster In Commercial Airline History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

As a single tragedy, the Grand Canyon plane crashes rank as the worst disaster in commercial airline history. They miss by one equalling the nation's worst toll since man took to airplanes.

By itself, the big Trans World Scheduled passenger that fell into rugged northern Arizona Sunday with 70 aboard would constitute the nation's commercial flying mishap on the U.S. mainland. The other plane, a United Air Lines DC-7 carried 28 persons.

The grim world commercial record had been set only 10 days previously. On June 20 a Venezuelan airliner fell flaming into Atlantic Ocean 32 miles out into bury Park, N.J. Seventy-four persons died.

Eighty lives were lost when a plane carrying second man-made from a game in Ireland crashed near Cardiff, Wales, on March 32, 1946. Only two persons survived not a scheduled commercial flight. WORLD'S WORST

A military crash accounted for the world's biggest airplane toll. It occurred on June 3, 1953, when an air force C-124 Globemaster carried 129 U.S. servicemen to their deaths near Tokyo.

The worst commercial plane disaster in the United States was in the United Airlines DC-4 which plunged into Medicine Bow Peak, near Laramie, Wyo., on July 6, 1955. Sixty-six persons died.

The nation's worst air disaster occured Jan. 26, 1950, when a U.S. Air Force transport crashed in the Yukon with 52 persons, all persons who were en route from Anchorage, Alaska to Great Falls, Mont.

Talks 'Auntie' Into Accepting Car as Gift

Selling ice-boxes to Eskimos is going to be no problem for Stephen Ormsby — when he grows up.

Last Thursday Stephen's mother, Mrs. John Ormsby of the Avondale Road, won the Klusmen Club's new Plymouth at a draw at the Memorial Arena. Naturally Mrs. Ormsby was delighted, but she sought some way to share her good fortune with her next door neighbor, Mrs. Thos. Legacey, who had arranged the purchase of the winning ticket and whose name appeared on it. The Ormsbys already had two cars, a 1950 Morris and a 1949 Chevrolet. Mrs. Ormsby tried to persuade Mrs. Legacey to accept the Chevrolet as a gift. Mrs. Legacey declined. But Stephen solved his mother's problem. He talked Mrs. Legacey, his Auntie Lou, into accepting the car from him as a gift.

P.S. — Stephen's only a year old.

Police Blotter

Rounding a corner on Cannifton road yesterday a woman driver wrecked both the gas pumps from the Holgate's service station. The pumps were thrown through the front of the building when the car caught fire.

Quick action in removal of the pumps saved the station from possible serious fire damage. Reels of the Belleville fire department were quickly on the scene.

Driver of the car was Yvonne Kitts, of Cornwall, who was able to proceed on her way shortly after the accident. OPP constable James McBride investigated.

Several other minor accidents were reported by provincial police over weekend. Damage in each accident was slight.

Besides investigation of a fatality on Dundas street no reported elsewhere — city police had little save routine matters brought to their attention.

Sunday Storm Cuts off Power For 36 Hours

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Southern Ontario farmers and hydro linemen worked overtime today as a result of the brief but violent storm which ripped across the area Sunday night.

Four farmers his high winds, lightning, hail and rain meant damaged farm buildings and crop losses, already heavy because of a late spring.

The linemen who began Sunday to repair power lines and poles blown down in the storm were still working today in some centres which had been without power for 36 hours.

CAUSES TEN DEATHS

At least 10 deaths were directly attributed to the storm. Seven died together near Sutton, when their 40-ton tree uprooted by the winds crashed down on a passing car.

One person died when struck by lightning, and two others drowned after boating when their crafts capsized in waters set to a boil by the wind.

The storm covered an area from Windsor to Oshawa. Winds reached velocities of 60 miles an hour, with gusts up to 84 miles an hour.

FIFTH HIT HARD

In St. Catharines the storm was called the worst in the city's history. The entire community was without power Sunday night, and 24 hours later 25 per cent of the city's homes were still in the dark.

During the height of the storm police barricaded the streets as 75-mile-an-hour winds sent live wires whipping over the pavement.

Guelph, Kitchener, Brantford and Stratford also felt the weather's wrath. Brantford was blacked out for two hours, 10 breaks in hydro lines were reported in Kitchener and two-thirds of Guelph was without electricity for three hours. Stratford's partial blackout was caused when a transformer blew out.

CROPS DAMAGED

All southern Ontario centres reported extensive damage to trees. Main thoroughfares in Brantford were blocked by uprooted trees, in Guelph more than 100 were toppled and St. Catharines reported more blown down than during Hurricane Hazel.

Fruit farmers in the Niagara Peninsula reported peach orchards most severely damaged but young fruit of all varieties suffered. Tobacco still in fields that had caused a 20 per cent loss in Brantford tobacco crops.

Wind and hail flattened, tangled and twisted whole fields of grain almost ready for the reaper.

At Forest, 25 miles northeast of Sarnia, trees were lifted off of combination apartment building, and grocery store, and a restaurant.

SOME INJURIES

Several persons narrowly escaped death and several were injured when trapped in falling buildings or cars damaged by falling trees.

The savage weather also left its quota of macabre incidents and freak escapes.

In Stayner a garage was ripped from the house it was attached to and flung to the ground, yet the car inside was untouched, and in the Kitchener area winds overturned a cemetery's tombstones.

BROWNS NEAR SEATTLE

SEATTLE (CP)—Grant Hopkins 22, of Tobermory, Ont., was drowned Sunday when he tumbled into Lake Sound near Seattle from a sailboat. He was sailing to Seattle with a friend in a 25-foot sloop.

Boy, 4, Finds He Can't Drive With One Hand

SCHENECTADY, N. Y. (AP)—A 4½-year-old boy borrowed the family automobile Monday and returned it with a crash.

Michael J. Mangino, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Mangino, backed the family car away from the curb in front of the house, sideswiped a parked car and hit a tree. Then he started into low.

He plowed over three front lawns, through a hedge and back to his own lawn, where the front porch stopped him.

And, oh yes, Michael was driving with one hand. His left arm was in a cast and sling.

You might say Michael was accident-prone. Last month:

His arm was broken in a mishap with a neighbor's horse.

He was bitten by a dog.

And he was stung by a bee.

French-Canadian Players Delight Stratford Crowd

By BILL ROSS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

STRATFORD (CP) — French Canada's La Theatre du Nouveau Monde took over the Shakespearean Festival Monday with their one-act farces by Moliere.

Already acclaimed for their participation in the festival's two major English-language productions, Shakespeare's "Merry Wives of Windsor, the Montreal company gave an acclaimed curtain-raiser to the audience Monday night all the festival company for their presentations.

Word had gone out from the dress rehearsals that the French group had something to show. Overnight the box office swelled from a thin demand to a three-quarter-filled house.

LESSON IN FARCE

The Moliere' major triumph appeared to have been to show Stratford, which in the Merry Wives had a farce with a thin plot, how ingenuity, skill and downright slapstick, deftly used, help farce to make sense.

A command of French wasn't necessary to get the drift, while the French-speakers in the audience were in stitches throughout the afternoon.

All the Moliere performances are to be matinees only S, 11 and 13.

The musical aspect of the festival gets under way Saturday with the first Canadian stage performance of Benjamin Britten's opera The Rape of Lucretia, conducted by Thomas Meyer at Hallfax, followed by a galaxy of concerts, serious, classical and jazz, through June and August.

TEENAGERS BANNED

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — The Crystal Beach Transit Company Sunday announced it will ban teenagers from the Canadian, Canadiana, on the Fourth of July holiday. Although the company did not explain, the move was apparently taken to prevent a repetition of the rioting by teenagers which took place on the vessel June 30 on its run between Crystal Beach and Buffalo.

Examine 200 After Blasts In Atomic Lab

NEW YORK (AP)—More than 200 technicians and clerical workers undergo routine checks for radioactive contamination today in the wake of a double explosion in an atomic research laboratory.

Nearby residents, worried about the possibility of radioactive fallout, swamped police stations with calls.

But the Atomic Energy Commission said there was no threat of radioactive contamination outside the room where the blast originated.

Jaycees Want Federal Aid for Some Children

WINNIPEG (CP)—The Junior Chamber of Commerce of Canada has asked that the federal government help those mentally-retarded children.

The organization planned today to consider a proposal asking for more aid for Canada's adult blind persons.

The junior chamber, at its annual convention Monday, approved a resolution requesting that the government launch a research program designed to study the causes and possible prevention of mental retardation and develop a training scheme for afflicted children.

Another resolution requests establishment of private television stations in major Canadian cities and a covering body to control both the CBC and private broadcasting stations to prevent an undemocratic situation whereby the CBC is controller and competitor."

The resolution passed Monday said that roughly three per cent of all children born in Canada were blind, deaf or mentally retarded. It adds that research in other countries has shown X-ray be possibly responsible or prevent some of the afflictions.

Girls Refusing Robbed, Thrown Into Streets

PARIS (Reuters)—Seven young girls have been arrested in Paris on charges of attacking and robbing girls who refused to take part in group lovemaking, police sources said today.

They are accused to have won the confidence of attractive young girls in the bars and cabarets of Boulevard St. Germain-des-Pres, then invited them to ostensibly innocent surprise parties at which took place either in a fashionable flat near the Bois de Boulogne or in a country villa outside Paris.

Highlight of these surprise parties was what was called "the St. Germain baptism"—an orgy of pagan love rites, the police sources said.

Girls who refused to take part were attacked, robbed of their money and thrown out into the street, it is alleged.

'Open House' For Canadians

LONDON (AP)—Norman Robertson, Canada's high commissioner in London, held open house Monday in his Canadian headquarters overlooking Trafalgar Square.

It was a well-attended affair marking Canada Day, a national holiday back home. Canadians vacationing in Britain joined those who live here to celebrate the anniversary.

Labor Minister Milton F. Gregg was to address the Canada Club at the Savoy Hotel Monday night. Prime Minister St. Laurent, External Affairs Minister Pearson and many Victoria Cross winners in London for last week's centenary celebrations were also to attend.

In Edinburgh, William Nickle, Ontario minister of planning and development, addressed a similar Canada Club gathering.

Nothing Illegal In Nudist Camp

ST. THOMAS (CP) — Elgin County's controversial nudist camp today seemed to have satisfactorily laid to rest the doubtful legality of its existence.

Police Chief Ernest Councillor John Charlston conceded he had found nothing illegal about the venture.

As a result of some vague, written complaints Monday night, township council decided — not too enthusiastically — to look into the matter. Councillor Charlton said he would do the investigating.

But after Tuesday he had interviewed the operators, scrutinized club rules, the Criminal Code and by-laws, and found nothing wrong.

Mr. Charlton said the camp rules bar liquor, frivolity and gambling, and restrict facilities used by mutual agreement only.

Appeal Considered

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP)—Defence lawyer Henry E. Ryan said Monday an appeal to the Supreme Court of New Brunswick is "definitely being considered" in the case of Clifford Edward Ayles, sentenced to be hanged for the 20. murder of David Allison Graves.

A Supreme Court jury returned the guilty verdict Saturday after less than two hours' deliberation and made no recommendation for mercy.

The 25-year-old Athol ville, N.B., native had pleaded not guilty to fatally stabbing Graves, 47, 16 times during the hijacking of a tuberculosis hospital truck carrying an $11,500 payroll.

Big Forest Fire Blazes on Cyprus

NICOSIA (CP) — Fresh groups of firefighters today were being rushed to battle a blazing forest fire in western Cyprus that has defied the efforts of 1,200 Cypriot firefighters. The fire was officially described as the biggest the island has known in years.

Even women were helping fight the blaze which was devouring timber near the area where 21 British soldiers died in a forest fire blamed on Cypriot terrorists two weeks ago.

No casualties were reported from the blaze.

Firefighting, however, did not stop British army units from continuing to search for terrorists. Today they combed another two Nicosia suburbs and searched all houses and cafes in an effort to find hidden arms. They also questioned 31 girl students detained on their arrival at the port of Limassol Monday from summer vacations.

CAN YOU DRINK WITH A FRIEND?

Is it illegal to enjoy a drink in the home of a friend? Col. C. E. Woodrow, solicitor for the Liquor Control Board of Ontario, does not believe so.

Magistrate R. I. Blain of Cookville believes that it is. He fined three men $25 each for having liquor in a place other than their residence. The place other than their residence" was the home of a friend, according to the story they told the court. The liquor they had, said the accused men, was given them by the same friend.

Probably the magistrate did not believe their story. The owner of the house had been suspected of selling liquor and the three men fined for "having" were found in the house when the police raided it. That does not alter the fact that, in the opinion of Magistrate Blain, the section of the Liquor Control Act under which they were fined is broken whenever any person accepts a drink of liquor in the home of a friend.

Col. Woodrow's interpretation of the law is slightly different. In his opinion it is quite legal to accept a drink of your friend's liquor in your friend's home. On the other hand, you cannot take a bottle of liquor to the home of a friend and there share it with him — on this point there is no difference of opinion and this fact has been widely known for years. Infractions of the law in this regard are widespread. If more than a half a dozen friends are gathering, it has become a widely observed custom for the guests to bring a bottle, for the average man cannot afford to "set up the drinks" for all his friends.

Regardless of this point, the fact that the solicitor of the Liquor Control Board and a magistrate should differ, so many years after the Liquor Control Act was first enacted, as to whether or not that act prohibits a man from drinking with a friend in that friend's home is disturbing. Nor is Magistrate Blain unsupported in his interpretation of the law. "It is only the leniency of the authorities that allows drinking among friends," says W. E. McDonald, a New York lawyer.

If this is so, the question which Ontario citizens ought to decide is whether they want to be beholden to the police chief to learn to drink in a friend's home, or whether they want the law changed so that this social custom is legal.

The laws are told, was designed to thwart the excuses of bootleggers that their customers were friends invited in for a drink.

If Magistrate Blain's interpretation of the law is right, it does much more than that. It makes every person who accepts a drink in a friend's home a law-breaker.

It leaves the decision whether he should be punished or not to the law-breaking up to the police, not to the courts. If the police have a grudge, any magistrate who holds with Magistrate Blain's interpretation of the act has no option but to convict.

Any law which makes thousands of people lawbreakers, but which can be broken with impunity by the vast majority, is a bad law.

This section of the Ontario Liquor Control Act ought to be studied, and, if Magistrate Blain is right, changed, while the legislators are at it they might take a close look at the remainder of the act. They might find other provisions which prevent temperate, reasonable habits.

For instance, it is almost certainly illegal to enjoy a drink in your own garden.

INGENIOUS GARDENER

Among the puzzles which summer brings in its wake is that of finding a circular spray of water into a rectangular front lawn, without overshooting the sidewalk.

There are some householders who just disregard the whole problem, dousing the lawn to its edges and pedestrians from the knees down.

Those who bruise easily settle for a circular patch of green edged with varying shades of brown.

The ingenious try and hold the hose.

None of these solutions is wholly satisfactory.

The heart gave a lift, therefore, when we spotted a simple and highly ingenious method invented by one Belleville citizen. The lawn in question was high above the sidewalk, from which it was separated by a stone wall. Any attempt to use a standard sprinkler would have splashed passers-by not merely from knees to heels but literally from head to toes.

So what did this resourceful citizen do? He took his hose, equipped with a standard nozzle, and hung it from the eaves in the nozzle is pointed down. The water soaked a well defined area, falling with no greater force than that of a hard rain. Rising and falling pressure in the city's water system would make not a particle of difference to the area covered. Providing the inventor had devised some suitable system for altering the aim of the nozzle it would be possible to water the whole lawn without splashing a drop on the sidewalk, and without doing any work other than adjusting the trajectory of the fire.

If that system could be patented, it ought to be worth a fortune.

THE RIGHT OF WAY

"Why do you drive at such a speed?"
I asked a motor chap.
"I would go hard with you,
Indeed,
In case of some mishap.
"For a collision there should be,
You'll have no time to pray."
But he just looked at me and said,
"I've got the right of way."

One day the while he sped along
He felt a sudden jar,
But in a second came a throng
To pick him from the car.
Something with pain my body fills,
They heard him feebly say,
And round the other man the hills
I had the right of way."

Oh, sorry was the moment when
The doctors came to tell
His wife and little child of ten
That he could not get well.
Their grief was pitiful to see,
Their sorrow could not stay;
Nor did it help to know that he Had had the right of way.

A widow now is robed in black,
A child is fatherless.
The comforts and the care they lack
That they should still possess.
Nor does it make one moment glad,
Nor light one gloomy day,
Because their reckless father had
The legal right of way.

July 1st Means Much More Than Just Another Holiday

Text of address broadcast by Governor-General Vincent Massey on Dominion Day.

"I am speaking to you on Dominion Day. Ninety years ago in 1867, Canadians, French and English, came together to form the Dominion. Sometimes, but not usually, not carelessly, but believing that our country, with its diversions they were to find a common destiny. They came together in faith and courage, to build, in that vast and difficult north of North America, a nation; a nation to be the heir and guardian of high traditions cherished by the small and scattered communities which gave it birth. Let us pay tribute on this day, to those Victorian statesmen whom we call the Fathers of Confederation. They have left us a great, but also a demanding, legacy; their memory calls us to no less devotion than they gave to institutions, customs, historic names which, as our Canadian inheritance, it is our duty to preserve. Let me speak frankly. I am afraid that we in Canada have become careless and, indeed, are insufficiently aware of our traditions — the traditions that give us our own unique character and quality.

"Since the beginning, the 1st of July has been set apart as a great day of festivity, a holiday, a day of recreation and that is as it should be. But it is also a day for reflection and for the renewal of loyalties. Dominion Day may not seem to possess the romance of national anniversaries in other countries which recall many of them, a picture of armed conflict.

Our day does not remind us of the clash of arms; it conjures up a picture of ordered, free and educated gentlemen around a table, drinking the health of queen and continent which made us a Dominion. Ours is a tremendous moment in our story. It marked a new step, a break with the past; but there was in it, as in all the acts of the Fathers of Confederation, much of the past. The joint effort of men very different in their origins, customs and traditions, to find something new on old and good foundations. They sought freedom without enmity, unity without sameness.

"There are some who find confederation dull. They lose sight of the vision of those quiet men, those dedicated Canada, in the name of compromise and civilization. In the reconciliation of old quarrels, to the recognition of Mrs. Right to be different, to the resolution to stand as one before the world.

"These men broke the barriers of language and religion, of local interests, even of prejudice and greed. They believed that none of these could divide those people who had chosen to live under the forces of the past and of the present to live as one. There is no more moving monument in Canada than that erected in Quebec to the memory of the men who there ordered together, Wolfe and Montcalm. Their choices stand for all that is best in Canadian life. Confederation, one of its fathers said, was a treaty of peace between two races which had fought for a century ago, when we achieved confederation, there was wise statesmanship on both sides. We inherited a happy combination of tolerance and understanding in England, and vigor and determination in Scotland. Their collaboration was unique. Before, in the history of mankind people ever received its freedom from a willing mother country? I think not. This is the great, the unique, the moral victory which leaves no scars.

"It is Canada's strength that she is the only nation where just and Anglo-Celtic peoples live in an equal partnership. Here are many millions of men and women from other countries have received the privileges and responsibilities of a citizen. We have two nationalities and no national culture and this enriches our life as we learn to use each other's speech. But this is not enough. Canada has two languages, she has two minds and two hearts. We must not obey."

BETTER PEOPLE

Someone once asked the Massachusetts wonder-a philosopher Henry David Thoreau if he did not agree that the railroad, then in its infancy, was a real improvement over the stagecoach. Thoreau's answer was significant. "Provided it carries better people; otherwise it is only meanness going faster."

This is a good answer to remember in assessing the improvements in our life. Most of us continually look forward to some sort of change. We are going to save more money; we are going to have more time; we are going to move into a new house, get a new job, make new friends, or even write a new book.

Important as all these changes are, they may make no change in what kind of person we are. And this is where improvement is most significant. We ourselves, not the framework of home, work, and other activities, are what counts. If we are to change our lives significantly, we must start in with ourselves, not with our framework.

We live in a world which is being rapidly improved by science. We live longer, travel faster, have more physical labor, eat more healthful foods, enjoy more leisure and entertainment. But let us be sure, for ourselves, at any rate, that we keep from the railroad into the jet plane, that it is not just "meanness going faster."

Navy Safer With Buttons

(Montreal Star)

The United States Navy is going back to old - fashioned pants for sailors, the kind the American Revolutionary Navy wore, covered the British Navy, New-fangled doo hickies or pants like Buck Privates caught on. The American seaman, like his British counterpart, is really old-fashioned; he values tradition more than convenience in keeping his pants up.

The pants worn by all seamen as regulation issue until 1913 were perpitiously since, are known as bell-bottomed trousers with a broad-flap front. They also had thirteen buttons. Doubtless it was an ordinary seaman who introduced the sniper in 1918. The laced gusset in the back had ensured a snug fit at all times. The new order introduced a belt.

Sailors quietly protested against this order. They took the sippered and belted pants to a tailor who restored them to the traditional form. After all, a man can't fight properly with no buttons to open and what if a zipper became stuck while he was answering the call to action stations? Nevertheless, they might take more time to do up, but all thirteen are useful to pop off at the same time. Buttons bring a sense of security the zipper never attains. And, after all, the Chief of Naval Operations says in forbidding the "belt order," there's no use issuing orders that men will disobey.

Sloppy Work With H-Bomb

(Milwaukee Journal)

Whether the first hydrogen bomb that America has exploded from an aircraft missed the target by two miles as the air force director of information says, "some-what less than four miles" as Secretary Quaries concedes, or by the seven miles claimed by a technician listed at Eniwetok, it was plainly sloppy work.

Here was a test drop under perfect conditions. A 200-yard bull's-eye was clearly laid out on Namu islet at Bikini. The B-52 jet bomber and its complex bombing equipment were functioning perfectly. A presumably competent crew was in control.

Yet the bomb missed by two miles or more. Scientists simply forgot to run on a "memory switch" that corrects an aircraft's wind-drift.

Not many months ago Secretary of State Dulles pointed enthusiastically to "baby" atomic bombs that could be dropped so precisely that one of them would wipe out an airfield without damage to neighboring property or injury to civilians.

Admittedly the H-bomb is no "baby." But even in the "construction" of a bomb the size of that dropped at Bikini is more than a ton-and-a-half, there is room for 110 miles from an H-bomb detonated two years ago are still suffering from it.) Still the margin of error is distressing.

And the effort to try to hush up the facts on this sloppy bit of work does even greater discredit to the airforce and the Defence Department.

Personal Health Talks

By DR. W.W. BRADY

Heart and Nerve Tonic

In the place recommending the combination of vitamin B-complex, including B12, with iron glucosate and manganese as a real heart tonic, especially for those poor souls who have been persuaded a diet low in digitalis is absolutely necessary to keep the heart beating. It will help. B-Nutron not only promotes or restores tone to the weak or flabby heart, but it also improves the tone (firmness) of the muscle wall of the entire gastro-intestinal tract, especially that of the colon (large bowel). Thus it improves appetite, digestion, assimilation and elimination.

Some of the old-time medicinal "nerve tonics" contained enough alcohol or other narcotics to make the victim "feel better" for a half hour or so after each, as the drug disappeared from the blood. Some contained mineral elements such as iron, phosphorus, iodin and calcium, which are essential for good nutrition. The caucal presence of such nutritional elements in the medicine accounted for the good effects noted in some instances, although, this became apparent after weeks or months, not after a dose.

The nutritional deficiency disease known as beriberi (Singhalese word meaning extreme weakness) was formerly called polyneuritis or multiple neuritis and is a worldwide affliction of many varying degrees of deprivation of vitamin B1 and other B vitamins. In the Orient — China, Japan, the Philippines, Ceylon, Indian where bare subsistence, or semi-starvation reigns, beriberi is a common affliction, as from time to time it has been in the course of weeks or months this weakness spreads upwards, and the victim can hardly walk at all. Finally he or she becomes bedridden.

In the comparatively mild accidental beriberi—the affliction is endemic in America, too—a correct diagnosis is made in only a few cases, for reasons difficult to explain. The severe initial stage of the condition is rare, providing the right doctor the opportunity to explain.

Only because I'm sure a daily ration of B-Nutron can do no harm in any circumstances, I recommend such a daily ration for a period of not less than three months, if these manifestations of mild beriberi occur:

Dyspepsia, "pins and needles," fatigue, shortness of breath on moderate exertion, palpitation, slight edema (puffiness) around the ankles, pain in the calf muscles are squeezed in the hand, inability to walk a block without resting without using the hands inclination, the squatting position if child to be painful for one with beriberi.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

In a restaurant last evening the table next to us was taken by a fine looking man and his two small sons around eight and eleven years of age. They were all in "T" shirts and shorts and were obviously on a motor trip, hearty, tanned, unkempt.

It always interests me to see what children will order when they are very picky and choosey. There is so much fancy food in this wonderful modern world.

Father and sons each seized a menu and studied it eagerly.

"I'll take a hamburger," announced the eleven year old.

"Hot dog — chow line for younger brother," declared the seven year old.

"Nothing doing," said their father. "You will both take T-bone steaks and like it."

"And French fries," the boys added, a little aggrieved.

When the waitress came, they ordered two T-bone steaks, French fries and a mixed green salad.

The mixed green salad was for Dad.

I thought what a fine father this was, confining himself to a mere green salad but ordering big cuts of T-bone steaks for his boys.

The food came. The boys, a little intimidated by the large steaks, and drawing out the chief's knife and fork for the hot dogs and hamburgers, respectively. I have, started dabbing at the meat, and munching heartily on the fried potatoes.

Dad quietly nibbled at his salad. The boys looked at him. The boys shoved their plates away with only a few bites taken out of the edges of the steaks, and the French fries half consumed.

"Dad," one began, "Dad reached over and drew first the one plate and then the other, and calmly finished both T-bone steaks, with good grace, right down to the last shred. The waitress was recalled, and the boys ordered the large sticky sundae and Dad had pie a la mode.

And they went on their way rejoicing.

TODAY'S TALK

INTERESTS

How many times I have talked about interests and how important they are in keeping us all in a healthy, balanced state of mind. And by interests I mean largely hobbies that have no direct relation to one's chosen life work.

Many folks have hobbies, but worry and a lack of those hobbies are bring new joy and a renewal of hope and courage. Some collect all of antiques, rare books, and works of art in quantity large enough to be efficient worker. What it will be gets out of the discovery of an item which he has perhaps spent years trying to locate!

I once met a great American publisher who collected art and rare Americana. He always had a few treasures on hand at his office of which he habitually presented to his visitors something to take in to spiring friend. When he died he left a provision in his will for hundred-dollar bill to be put in a coffin with him.

The greater part of my life has been devoted to many an interest that had no bearing whatsoever on the selection of my life work. Primarily I am interested in people (I am.) I have found that this has been a valuable idea that has brought me in touch with people I might never have met or known. I have been a collector of many things. Stamps are a wonderful educational hobby and could have given me many a period of mental peace. Stamps are a wonderful educational hobby and could have given me many a period of mental peace. Stamps are a wonderful educational hobby and could have given me many a period of mental peace.

Thousands of men have made gardens a hobby and a most profitable one it is. Herb Shriner is fascinated with gadgets, and these are well known for test and trial all over his home.

I think that they must be a kind of "off day" study and recreation.

Honorary Elder Turns Sod

Rev. J. W. Flatt, honorary elder of the new Eastminster United Church, turns the first sod at the site of the congregation's new church at the corner of Bridge Street and Herchimer Ave., as members of the congregation look on. The sod-turning ceremony was held Sunday noon after the regular morning church service at the home of Jacob Synagogue. Taking part in the ceremony were: Mr. Bruce Besley, student minister (left), and Rev. R. A. Rowley, chairman of Belleville Presbytery.

Silver-Plated Shovel Presented

Harold Farrow, recording steward, of East-minster United Church, presents silver-plated shovel to Rev. J. W. Flatt, who turned the first sod for the congregation's new church. On the left is Robert Gillian and on the right Mr. Bruce Besley, student minister. Other members of the church Session are shown in background. New church is to be built in two units, the first unit costing $60,000.

Eastminster United Church Members Witness First Sod For New Building Turned

Some seven years and months after the congregation was constituted, members of the Eastminster United Church in East Belleville, Sunday saw the first sod turned for the first unit of their new church.

The new church, to be built at the Bridge Street corner of Bridge Street and Herchimer avenue, is being built in two units, the first of which is the auditorium and Sunday School.

Excavation for the new building will get under way in the near future by The Tetham Company, contractors.

Sunday after the regular morning service held at Zion of Jacob Synagogue on Victoria avenue, members of Eastminster congregation gathered at the site of their new church where they saw the Rev. J. W. Flatt, honorary elder, turn the first sod.

"We are gathered together here to turn the first sod for the erection of a building which we humbly trust may in due time be consecrated as a house of God," Mr. Flatt said.

"The efforts attending this new enterprise, observing it grow and the meeting and overcoming of difficulties have brought a new and enriching experience to us all, and with it, we trust, abide with us and carry us forward with enthusiasm in the work to which, under God, we are all now committed."

Also taking part in the sod-turning ceremony were the Rev. R. A. Rowley, chairman of Belleville Presbytery, minister of Tabernacle United church, and Mr. Bruce Besley, student minister for the Eastminster congregation.

200 MEMBERS AT PRESENT

The Eastminster United Church congregation, now 200 members strong, had their first meeting back in September, 1955, gathering at the Masonic Temple.

Three months later the congregation was constituted at a gathering under the direction of the Belleville Presbytery with Dr. George Pigeon, first moderator of the United Church as the speaker.

No sooner had the congregation been duly constituted than it was decided a new church would be necessary and early next year the decision was made to go ahead. The site at the corner of Bridge and Herchimer avenue was purchased and the architectural firm of Watson and Wiegand was authorized to draw plans.

The new, strikingly modern in design, will be built in two stages, the first unit scaled at $60,000 to be 70 ft. x 30 feet in size and will seat about 250.

The main church auditorium to be built at a later date will seat over 400 persons.

MINUTE IN RARENTRY

When the entire church is completed the first unit will be used as a Christian educational centre. In the meantime Sunday school classes will be held in the basement of the first unit.

The first unit of the new church is expected to be completed by the end of December, just a year after the congregation was constituted. Eastminster congregation, in conjunction with Kingston Road United Church, has called a new minister and Rev. Alexander McDowell, of Prince Edward Island, will take over duties as pastor August 1st.

In preparation for his arrival the two congregations have purchased a new manse on Rose-wood Ave., in the Parkwood Heights district.

Urges Revision Of Teaching At Deaf School

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Association of the Deaf Monday urged the Ontario education department to revise its methods of teaching at the Ontario School for the Deaf at Belleville.

In a resolution to be forwarded to Education Minister Dunlop, delegates at the association's convention said deaf teachers and counsellors should be engaged to guide pupils at the school. They criticized the government for hiring only hearing teachers.

Howard Lloyd, association vice-president, said the education department's policy of teaching deaf pupils exclusively by oralism is narrow minded. Lip reading was a skill attained by few adults. Not more than 20 per cent were good lip readers.

G. M. Brigham of Ottawa was elected president and C. O. Demers of Belleville was chosen as vice-president and Howard Lloyd a director.

Bowling Notes

The Aluminum trophy tournament at Kingston on the holiday attracted 37 rinks from Prescott, Brockville, Kingston, Belleville, Trenton, Campbellford and Brighton. Six rinks from the Belleville club were on hand including Harold Parker, Glen Dobbs, Gordon Edwards and Jerry Hyde, skip; Ken Ashley, Walter Elliott, Gordon Vince and J. W. Davison, skip; Ken Bulford, Bob Holland, Orlo Smith and Percy Graham, skip; Ernie Jones, W. Wright, Gordon Watkin and Austin Watkin, skip; W. Hazzard, Jack Smith, Jack Johnston and D. Wannacott, skip, and Jack Fitzgerald, Wilfred Price, James Hanna and A. E. Wannacott, skip.

As usual the Belleville rinks came home with some of the prizes, Austin Watkin and his rink winning third three-game high scores, Jerry Hyde and his rink winning second two-game high, while J. W. Davison and his rink won the second one-game high, while Ab Wannacott won the spider and received a beautiful shirt. Most of the Belleville rinks won at least two games, while one rink had the high score in the first game. The greens were exceptionally heavy and being long greens the play was not as keen as usually expected at the Kingston Club. Dick Edney of Kingston was the winner of the Trophy, with Art Armstrong, also of Kingston in second place. Jim Duncan of Kingston was fourth.

The Provincial playdowns start Friday at the local greens, when the district rinks gather to declare a winner for the zone finals to be played in Kingston on July 18th. Clubs with over 50 members are entitled to two rinks, two doubles and two single players. It is expected that Belleville will enter at least one rink, a pair of doubles and one single. Kingston, Campbellford, Trenton and Belleville will be represented for sure with Stirling and Madoc possibilities.

On Thursday afternoon the weekly women's section tourney was held with Mrs. Agnes Hurst, Mrs. Al. Wardhaugh, Mrs. Orlo Smith and Mrs. Gordon Vince, the first winners in bowling. Mrs. J. Shaw, Mrs. B. There were prizes for all and again thanks for a wonderful evening. Tomorrow night a pot luck supper will be held at six sharp after which the usual two games will be played with suitable prizes. George Watkin will be the convener of the tournament.

Smart Hearing Help

BY TRACY ADRIAN

Modern science has advanced in almost miraculous ways in the last few years in creating aids for deficient hearing in attractive and inconspicuous ways.

One of the latest innovations is this one which we found most charming and practical. It is in the form of a curious jewelry pin which features an outside microphone. We were told that the advantage of the outside "mike" is that it picks up sound without rubbing noises or muffling caused by covering fabric.

BEAUTY

By MME. QUI VIVE

FASHION FADS SHOULD NOT BE FOLLOWED BLINDLY

Flounced with frothy loveliness, petticoats are certainly pretty, but they're not flattering to all types!

The beauty and fashion conscious women will always keep up with "la mode", of course. And that's as it should be. But there's nothing smart about a stick-in-the-mud attitude toward change. The woman who wears her hair the same way year in and year out, always affects the same colors and sticks to hats which were gay numbers in Queen Mary's time, not only dates herself but cheats herself out of a lot of fun — to say nothing of the dulling effect upon her looks. To be young, one must feel young. And one of the attributes of perpetual youth is adaptability. So change your hairdo now and then, keep up with the styles and experiment with new colors in make-up, nail polishes — yes, even hair colorings. But be smart about it!

If a new look is unflattering to you, don't follow it blindly. You can always vary it so that it will be becoming and smart at the same time. It takes just a little imagination and a little know-how. And, in some instances, it's better to ignore fads entirely. Let's consider some of today's fancies and you'll see what we mean.

Take the matter of petticoats, for example. They're swirls of frothy laciness, just as lovely and feminine as they can be. But they're not to be worn by everyone. The overly-plump damsel, for instance should avoid them as she would the plague, for her own proportions hold out a dress adequately. In stiff petticoats, she looks like an inflated balloon. The short girl should forget them, too. In both these cases, slim-fitting slips do much more for the figure.

Then there are the popular sheath dresses. How lovely they are on the slender svelte woman. How dreadful on the woman with the wide waist line and a midriff corrugated with "spare tires!" Heavy women should never wear clothes that are too tight — whether in the midriff or in the hips or over the bosom. Just because she can just about squeeze into a half size smaller than her normal size makes many a woman feel that she looks slimmer. But it's a delusion. Actually, she looks heavier. Soft, full blouses, skirts with a bit of draping, bolero jackets and other figure-concealing devices are far more flattering. And, of course, even better is to diet and get rid of the excess poundage so that the dividual silhouette can be worn.

And hats! There seems to be two extremes in the present vogue — the large cartwheels and mushroom shapes and the tiny cloches. But why, oh why, do so many gals seem to pick the wrong ones? Tall girls with round faces seem to go for the tiny affairs which do absolutely nothing for them and the petite types can't wait to put on the cartwheels which make them look top-heavy. It makes no sense.

The same lack of imagination is frequently shown in the choice of cosmetics. With such a wide range of colors in all popular brands, every woman should experiment with colors which are attractive to her — no matter what shade the Flaming Mamie in the color ad is wearing. Don't forget that the shade the Flaming Mamie is wearing was picked for her particular style of beauty. That's why it looks so attractive. So choose cosmetic colors to accent your particular charms and you'll be attractive, too.

GOOD MANNERS

ETIQUETTE QUESTIONS CONCERNING AIR MAIL PAPER

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please answer two questions for me concerning the use of air mail writing paper.

1. Is it correct to use an engraved first sheet (mine is engraved with my address, street, city with zone number, state) with other sheets not engraved? I have a supply of each, but to me it doesn't make sense to use all engraved sheets, when I write a very long letter to go air mail.

2. I'm very fond of this new air mail paper of mine, which I think is particularly good-looking. Would it be correct for me to use this air mail paper even if the letter is not going by air mail? — Claire M.

1. Yes, indeed it is correct to use an engraved sheet first (with monogram or address) with other sheets not engraved. And I agree with you — this makes sense. Also it leaves more writing-space on the engraved sheet, and is especially desirable for foreign air mail letters.

2. Yes — it is entirely correct for you to use your air mail paper even if the letter is not going by air mail. But not, of course, for formal correspondence, such as replying to invitations to wedding receptions.

SHOULD FEATURE ANTIQUE COFFEE URN AT COFFEE PARTY

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Your column has always appealed to me because of your common sense answers. Now myself would so much appreciate your help. I am a business woman, with little time for home entertaining. However, I am contemplating giving a Coffee Party for a young, recently-married friend. We have a large, antique coffee urn, also an old coffee pot and an old tea pot, plus a silver tray. But our sugar bowl and cream pitcher are of modern design, and decidedly do not complement the other pieces. What do you suggest about this? And do you suggest we serve tea as well as coffee? — A.M.

Thank you, very much, for your good words about my columns.

If I were you, I would feature your large, antique coffee urn, making it the dramatic highlight of your table-setting. (And a large, antique coffee urn can be attention-compelling and very dramatic!) Since it is to be a coffee party and since you can feature the coffee urn, I suggest you serve only coffee, unless you are sure some of your guests prefer tea. Use the urn on the silver tray, if its tray has any decorative affinity with the urn. If not, perhaps you have (or could borrow) a tray, maybe painted (muted-colors) tray, that would be more in harmony. Then you might use the sugar bowl and cream pitcher, of modern design, on the silver tray. Don't worry that the accessories are of different designs — just think that your guests will be so taken with the charm of your antique coffee urn that they won't pay too much attention to the other pieces.

GROOM'S GIFT TO CLERGY-MAN CAN BE CHEQUE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Please settle our discussion. My brother, who is to be my best man, says I should give the money for the clergyman in cash. I think it should be a cheque. Who is right about this? — Groom-to-be.

Either form is right. The money usually is cash, a hand-over fist (or bills) enclosed in a plain envelope. (This envelope is presented to the clergyman by the best man immediately before or after the ceremony). If you prefer to give a cheque instead of money, make the cheque payable to the clergyman.

TIP: "walking equipment" at that sandy or rocky beach should certainly be equipped with foot protectors of some kind. Special beach shoes are available, or canvas, but an old pair of sneakers or even rubbers will do the trick. Keep them just for beach wear.

Women's Activities

QUINTE BRANCH OF THE W.I.

Thirty-two members of the Quinte Branch of the Women's Institute enjoyed a bus trip to Ottawa. Taking No. 2 Highway through Kingston and on as far as Iroquois. This town is being moved to a new site because of the St. Lawrence Seaway.

The old town will be flooded or made into parks, whichever the people choose. The group was taken on a lookout tower and shown the seaway route. The old buildings are being torn down, and the good ones moved to a new location.

The houses are all erected on new foundation with a heating plant installed. They are painted and papered however the owner prefers and the owner also receives 10 percent of the value of the old home in money.

The beautiful funeral homes was already completed. This consisted of a chapel at one end and living quarters at the other. They are also tearing down all churches and schools and erecting new ones. A complete shopping centre is being built.

From Iroquois, members continued on to Ottawa, arriving at the Lord Elgin Hotel to freshen up before going to the Parliament Buildings. There, the group was escorted to the assembly room where Parliament was in session. From there, they drove to the garden party to hear the president of the Associated Women of the World, Mrs. Berry, of Australia, who said, "There is much to be done by the women of the world. Do what you can where you are. Mrs. Berry owns 40 thousand acres and raises Merino sheep. This fall she will attend the Triennial convention in Ceylon.

Mayor Whitton of Ottawa also spoke to the group.

Refreshments were enjoyed, consisting of cookies and cake-sandwiches and coffee.

Leaving Ottawa at 6 p.m. via Highway 2, stopping at Perth for supper, which all enjoyed the remainder of the trip by singing the new and old time songs, accompanied by the jovial and courteous bus driver, Mr. T. Taylor, who was presented with a silver collection.

ADVICE To the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS ABOUT DATING

Dear Beatrice Fairfax:

I would like to have answers to the following questions:

How old should a girl be before dating a boy? How old for double dates, movie dates and writing letters to boys? M.E.R.

Dear M.E.R.:

If by "dates" you mean going out with boys in the evening, then I think a girl should be at least 15 years old before beginning them. And she shouldn't stay out too late then, either. The same age would hold for double dates.

As for movie dates, I can't see any reason why a girl of 13 or 14 shouldn't go to an afternoon movie with a boy, provided her mother approves. And if there is some boy to whom she'd like to write interesting letters, there is no reason why she shouldn't do that, either.

Whatever her age, a girl should have the good sense to be just good friends with a boy and not let herself get too romantic about them until she is old enough to know what romance means.

STOP MAKING FOOLS OF YOURSELVES GIRLS!

Dear Beatrice Fairfax:

We have in our office a young man who, for some time now, has been dating four of us girls.

All this time he is in the office he is a perfect gentleman, but when he takes me out he seems to change his personality completely. He has told me that while he likes the other girls he does, I'm the one he loves, but I've learned that he has told the other girls he loves them.

All this has caused quite a few arguments among us, and we are always suspicious of each other. This fact doesn't seem to bother him at all. In fact, he is indifferent about it to other office personnel.

The four of us who are involved have talked things over, and we have agreed to draw straws to see which one will get the picture. I would appreciate your telling us if this is wise, or if we should just wait and let him make the choice.

Please help us find the solution to our problem. — P.A.S.G.

Dear P.A.S.G.:

I simply can't imagine why any one of you girls should want to have anything to do with a character such as you describe.

What's the matter with the four of you, anyhow? Are you so hard up for dates that you're taking anything that comes along? The idea would be that no date at all would be better than one with a light-headed, conceited, hypocritical fellow who has two personalities. He is not the type of actor such as you describe.

Why don't you girls use

WANTS TO REGAIN

Then came this session and the controversial gas pipeline bill which the government jammed through the Commons after successive debate-limiting closure motions to meet a June 7 deadline for passage.

Progressive Conservative and CCF members, fighting the bill, threw up repeated procedural roadblocks. Repeatedly Mr. Beaudoin, Deputy Speaker W. A. Robinson and Deputy Chairman E.T. Applewhaite ruled against the opposition.

On June 1 the Commons broke down in complete disorder as opposition members revolted against Mr. Beaudoin's suthing in a riotous scene of fist-shaking and shouting. They called the Speaker a "dictator" and "puppet."

The following week Mr. Drew presented an unprecedented censure motion which was voted down 109 to 33.

SEVERAL THOUGHTS

Monday Mr. Beaudoin said that "more than once" during the pipeline and censure debates he had intended to resign "for the purpose of regaining my full freedom of speech both in and outside this House."

He had felt that time might bring about a situation in which it would be possible to finish out his term.

But when a Montreal newspaper published parts of a private letter he had written "I knew I had to take immediately the course I had in mind."

He referred to a letter he wrote to Alonzo Cinq-Mars, 75-year-old editorial writer of Montreal La Patrie, stating "my accusers distorted the facts for their own political ends" and saying it had been able to speak in the censure debate he could have confounded his accusers.

RAISED CRITICISM

Mr. Drew and CCF Leader Coldwell criticized the Speaker last Friday for the letter. Mr. Drew said it removed "any suggestion of impartiality" from the Speaker. He demanded that the government call an election.

Mr. Beaudoin's 15-minute statement, read to a hushed Commons from a handwritten text, ended on a note of conciliation.

"This is my farewell speech," he said, and then paused for long moments.

"I shall always remember with pleasure my term of office as Speaker. I have enjoyed every moment of it, even the most difficult parts, because I know that deep down in their hearts members understood certainly much more perhaps than they were indicating. . . .

CONSCIENCE CLEAR

"Now, I have no animosity against anyone.

"Throughout my term of office, I assure you, I have never acted nor have I been motivated by any other interest but the best interests of the House itself.

"Unintentionally I might have done something wrong or I might have done something offensive to honorable members. I want to ask them—and I do say this is the last favor, if I may be deserving of a last favor—that if I have done anything offensive or anything wrong to any honorable member, that an act of oblivion will be passed."

Although no opposition member replied to his statement, one of them shouted a fina accusation—Speaker.

Julian Ferguson (PC — Simcoe North) declared: "I believe that the Liberal government has crucified one of the finest men that was ever here. One of the finest young men who ever walked into the House of Commons has been put on the cross and crucified by this government."

headquarters of the Indian affairs branch.

Indians who committed offences should be lodged and fined like white men instead of being subject to summary convictions before a justice of the peace appointed by the Indian affairs branch.

Mr. Diefenbaker called on the government to give Indians direct representation in Parliament through the appointment of one or more of their leaders to the Senate.

One of the proposed amendments to the Indian Act would increase from $350,000 to $2,000,000 the maximum amount the government may lend to Indian bands.

H. A. Bryce (CCF—Rumbold-Melfort) said Canada needs a Colombo Plan for its Indians and more instruction and supervision in the field of agriculture.

Are Testing Alaskan Blackfish For Stocking in Ontario Waters

TORONTO — Exotic Alaskan blackfish may soon tempt anglers in Ontario waters. Experiments are prefacing their possible introduction here as a goodfish for recreational purposes. Lands and Forests Minister the Hon. Clare E. Magidrson has announced.

"For experimental purposes, the Department's Division of Research has received 100 live Alaskan blackfish, a fish native to Alaska. The fish were collected for the Research Division by personnel of the Arctic Aeronautical Laboratory in Fairbanks, Alaska, under command of Col. Howard P. Currie, U.S.A.F.

"The blackfish were taken in nets from the Kuskokwin River near Bethel on the coast of Alaska by natives in the course of obtaining fish for food for themselves and their dogs. A party from the laboratory flew to Bethel in a CAT (Dakota) aircraft, a 3½-hour trip, on April 13 and transported the fish by truck to the landing field. Several days later, the blackfish were trans-shipped to Toronto by plane and settled into a tank at the Department of Lands and Forests southern research station at Maple, just north of Toronto.

"The blackfish is not actually black. It is a beautiful mottled dark olive green and is characterized by graceful butterfly-like pectoral fins. It is a small fish, growing to eight or nine inches at maturity. It resembles its only relative native to Ontario, the smaller central 'mudminnow, biologists say.

"The Alaskan blackfish is remarkable in that it requires little oxygen to survive, in contrast to most other fishes. Because of this, it withstands freezing solid in ice during the winter months in Alaska," research officials explain.

"During the summer months, on the other hand, it survives drought just as well, and is reported to live when sustained only by moistures in the bottom of dried-up ponds. The durability of the blackfish was demonstrated by the two-day trip from Alaska. The fish were shipped 25 to a can in five gallons of water, and all arrived in excellent condition".

The Department is interested in studying the suitability of blackfish for introduction to Ontario waters as goodfish. Many small, shallow farm ponds are now being built in Southern Ontario for recreation, irrigation, fire protection and watering stock. Most of these small ponds are unsuitable for native fish because of the depletion of oxygen under the ice in winter. The blackfish might be able to survive the inhospitable winter conditions here. It remains to be seen whether Ontario summer temperatures would kill them.

Miss Supertest in Flight

Roaring up the Bay of Quinte Saturday afternoon, Bill Braden piloted Miss Supertest II to a new record to qualify for the Canadian entry berth of the Harmsworth Trophy to be held later this summer. Miss Supertest averaged more than 90 mph to set a new course record. (Photo by Lilley).

Miss Supertest Unlimited Class Winner at Picton; One Boat Still at Bottom

PICTON (Special) — Canada's sole entry in the unlimited class inboard hydroplane, Miss Supertest, from London, Ontario, proved to be the best of eight entries at Prince Edward Yacht Club regatta on Picton Bay, Saturday afternoon.

Thus she definitely stamped herself as a serious threat in the Harmsworth race to be held in Detroit in August. Here, she defeated seven of Detroit's best Unlimited hydroplanes. If she can win in Detroit the Harmsworth Trophy is likely to be raced for at Picton.

The thousands of spectators saw speeds of up to 140 miles an hour on the straightaway.

It was no walk-over for Miss Supertest, driven by Bill Braden, of Watertown, In. the hard-driven boat proved to be a contender. Many visitors stated that race exceeded Detroit river races for speeds and thrills.

Fans on the waterfront had a perfect view of the course from the banks of the High Shore road, saw not only Canada's pride win a special trophy, put on by Major F. J. McFarland, but they saw a huge hydroplane, "What-a-Pickle" plough into her bow and into seventy feet of water after the driver and engineer, Dennis Deneau of Detroit leaped into the water.

They saw "Such Crust III" campaigned by Jack Shaffer, Detroit, and driven by Fred Alsbo, also disabled when she lost a drive-shaft and then filled with water. The driver was able to bail into her but she was half under water until Sunday when she was refloated and towed back to the dock.

STILL AT BOTTOM

"What-a-Pickle" is still at the bottom of the bay. Divers from Kingston were unable to locate her as she sank before a line could be attached.

BOAT RUNS WILD

Fans were handed another thrill when the driver of an outboard called "Scuse Me Too", Pete Clark of Ottawa, was thrown from his little craft in the fourth side of the course. Driverless, and with throttle open, it shot north to the High Shore at 30 miles an hour. One outboard driver ran to the race attempted to head it off but found it "too hot to handle". Another driver in the race left the course to chase it and both boats crashed on shore, head - on against the bank. Damage was not serious.

Adding to the great day was the Deseronto to Picton marathon swim, which saw only two of six starters finish, the last at 3 a.m. Tommy Hood of Deseronto had been in the water 17 hours, yet a crowd awaited her. Winner over the other finisher was Helena Moravick of Belleville.

WIDE PUBLICITY

Never has a sporting event in this district been so widely publicized. Every major daily newspaper was represented, including Detroit and London; television and radio stations and sport magazine were on the job.

NO MILE TRIALS

It had been expected that there would be mile trials for world records early Sunday morning but these were cancelled as change-over of motors would have been necessary and efforts were concentrated on locating the sunken boat valued at around $30,000. Tom Mix Supertest wanted to return to London to prepare for the Harmsworth race, the blue ribbon classic for unlimited boats which has never been won by Canada.

DIVIDED INTO CLASSES

As only six boats may start in each heat, and there were eight entries, the race was divided into two sections with a final heat to determine the trophy winner.

Entries in the first section were Miss Supertest, Gale V, owned and driven by Gordon Thompson, London, Ont., driven by W. Braden of Watertown, Ont; Such Crust, owned by Jack Shaffer and driven by Fred Alsbo, Detroit; Miss U.S., owned by George Simons, Detroit, and driven by Jack Barlow.

SET CANADIAN RECORD

In the first heat, the first race, Miss Supertest set a Canadian lap record by 83.721 miles per hour, winning the heat by a quarter of a mile over Miss U.S. Gale IV conked out in the first lap but was able to start again and finish third. Such Crust conked out in the fourth lap and was partly beached before sinking.

In the second heat, a thrilling battle developed between Miss Supertest and Miss U.S., as Gale IV conked out on first turn; Miss Supertest displayed a burst of speed in the home stretch to win by a scant two feet as they averaged 90.766 miles an hour. Third lap saw this battle still the same with Miss U.S. ahead with speed of 93.1 m.p.h. hour. In fourth lap, Miss U.S. averaged 93 miles per hour to keep just ahead of the Canadian entry, and she held this to finish 200 yards ahead of Supertest, the final lap being at 80.57 m.p.h. The entire 15 miles was covered at an average speed of 90.300 m.p.h.

This race gave Miss Supertest and Miss U.S. each a first and second for 700 points and presented a battle in the final. Miss Gale's (IVth) third gave her 325 points.

SECOND DIVISION

Coming up for the second division of three heats were Gale V, My Sweetie Dora, What-A-Pickle, Miss Wayne. In the first lap, What-A-Pickle beat the gun and was disqualified. Miss Wayne took the lead and showed the speed by taking all five laps, the first at 81.26 m.p.h., and the five miles at an average 79.063 m.p.h. Miss Gale was a close second and My Sweetie Dora third.

In the second heat, My Sweetie Dora showed the class which won the Maple Leaf race at Detroit a week previous. She did the first lap at 83.070 m.p.h., followed by Miss Wayne, What-A-Pickle and Miss Gale V. But in the second lap Miss Wayne moved into the lead for the last four laps with average speeds, of 80.769, 79.356, 81.103 and 82.690 miles per hour. Average over the 15 miles was 82.190 m.p.h. Final lap saw Miss Wayne the winner with What-A-Pickle second, disabled by engine spray, My Sweetie Dora third, Miss Gale V, third. This gave Miss Wayne 425 points for two firsts; What-A-Pickle 300 for a second; Miss Gale V, 460 for 1-3; My Sweetie Dora, 450 for two-thirds.

FINAL HEAT

Thus the final brought together three heat winners and supreme was the class. My Sweetie Dora was delayed getting to the starting point. Gale was first over the line but Miss U.S. took the lead and won first lap with average speed of 82.350 miles per hour. Miss Supertest was a close second followed by What-A-Pickle, Gale V. Miss Wayne conked out to lose a great chance to win.

Second lap saw the boats end in the same order with Miss Supertest trying to grab the lead. She succeeded in the third lap by brilliant driving by Braden on the turn, and led half a length over Miss U.S. at the finish. Miss Gale V was fourth. What-A-Pickle conked out and sank.

In this heat, saw Miss Supertest widen her lead over Miss U.S., followed by Gale V. In the first lap, the Canadian boat finished a quarter mile in front. Sensational was the final two bursts of speed in the home stretch by Miss Gale. In the last 100 yards as the driver opened her up, she flew into the air, nearly tipped and skipped her stern. Hit by Miss U.S. and came second by three lengths. Miss U. S. was third and "My Sweetie Dora", a late starter, finished the course. Average speed of final heat was 93.364 miles per hour.

In the point system, this gave Miss Supertest 1700 points, Miss U.S. 925 and Miss Gale 762.

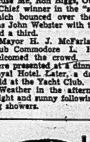
My Sweetie Dora had suffered bull damage before coming to Picton and was not a serious threat.

Miss Supertest is powered with a Rolls Royce Griffon engine developing 3000 horsepower. The U. S. A. boats have Allison motors.

COURSE PLEASES

Most of the drivers were visiting Picton for the first time and were high in their praise of the Picton course which is so much larger than that on the Detroit river. Commodore Cook of the Canadian Boating Federation called it "brilliant racing, the fastest speeds ever on Picton Bay, and that the races packed up with thrills and excitement."

The water was overly rough for the first two heats but calmed down later.



OUTBOARDS RACE

Block hydroplanes were forced to race after the Unlimited due to rough water. Those entered were Lil' Mac, Ed Kavanagh, Perth; Lil' Robin, L. Robinson, Toronto; My Expense, Harold Huck, Westport; Mr. Chips, Ted Devey, Toronto; "Scuse Me Too, Pete Clark, Ottawa; Hoo-Doo, Ken Bland, Toronto; Four Bits, John Webster, Jr., Toronto; Sherry Ann, Jack Partridge, Highland Creek; Air Born, Jan McLean, Perth; Alcuette, Charles Thornton, Lake Placid; Peppernane, Art Phillips, Kingston; Bits O'Trouble, Robert Lewis of the Canadian Boating Federation called it "brilliant racing, the fastest speeds ever on Picton Bay, and that the races packed up with thrills and excitement."

Chief winner in the "sea flea" which bounced on the ripples was John Webster with two firsts and a third.

Mayor H. J. McFarland and Club Commodore L. Hutchings welcomed the crews. Trophies were presented at a dinner at the Royal Hotel. Later, a dance was held at the Yacht Club.

Weather in the afternoon was bright and sunny following morning showers.

Leafs Regain Third Place in International

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The International League race stays a two-team scrap simply because the other six clubs keep knocking each other for a loop whenever one of them starts looking like a contender.

Miami Marlins, most recent club to make a run on front-running Montreal and runner-up Rochester, became the latest victims of the dog fight Monday as Toronto Maple Leafs thumped them out of third place 18-4 and 3-1 in a doubleheader.

The Leafs took over the No. 3 spot, by one game and 13 percentage points, and moved to within five games of Montreal Royals, who split a pair with Havana. The Royals trimmed the seventh-place Sugar Kings 7-1, then lost 1-0.

The two Dominion Day twin bills were the only games scheduled Monday.

CURFEW SAVES LEAFS

Toronto outlasted Miami 10-9 in a slugfest Sunday before curfew halted the second game with the Marlins ahead 3-0. Other Sunday games saw Montreal win the nightcap to Havana sweep, dropping the first game 10-3; Columbus split with Rochester, dropping the first 6-5, then winning 10-6; and Buffalo defeat Richmond 13-9 before losing 5-2.

Saturday the Marlins edged Leafs 3-2, Montreal defeated Rochester 3-1, Richmond downed Buffalo 7-3 and Rochester beat Columbus 8-3.

Toronto scored in all but the second and eighth innings of the runaway opener. Ray Boone, who Stevens banging a pair of two-run homers, his 12th and 13th of the season, and Bill Wilson driving in five runs with four hits in five trips.

Loren Babe, with three-for-five batting behind Stevens' five RBIs. Max Jethroe also homered for the Leafs as Lynn Lovenguth, who's now 11-3 in the third inning. Southpaw Seth Morehead was the loser for a 2-2 record, with right-hander John Reid claiming his fourth victory in seven decisions. Bob Bowman's 10th game for Miami's run in the first inning.

Havana scored all its home hits off Montreal's Leo Cristante in the nightcap, but the final safety was the payoff single-hitting double by Hal Bevan following one of four walks allowed by Cuban right-hander. Joe Hatten, winning his third, gave up six singles and fanned seven in the scheduled seven-inning game.

Highlander Chuck White had given the Sugar Kings only four hits in the opener for a 7-1 record. The Royals backed him up with 13 hits, including home runs by Oscar Sanders and John Hetzel's boro. Reseborn's homer capped a six-run stanzaing at Charlie Rabe lost his 12th in 14 decisions.

TWO SOX STARS

Stengel's remaining pitchers are Billy Pierce and Jim Wilson of Chicago White Sox, Ray Narleski of Cleveland Indians, Cleveland Indians and Tom Brewer and Frank Sullivan of Boston Red Sox. Left - hand catcher Ford and relief handers.

Chicago's Sherman Lollar was chosen by Stengel to back up Berra behind the plate.

Boston's Mickey Vernon at first, Chicago's Nellie Fox at second, Detroit's Harvey Kuenn at short and Philadelphia's Clevelan Eddie Joost at third are the starting infield.

Behind his starting outfield of Mantle, Duke Snider, Williams and Al Kaline of Detroit, Stengel has Washington's Jackie Jensen of the Tigers, Harry Simpson of the Athletics and Jim Piersall of the Red Sox.

With five of the slugging Cincinnati Redlegs picked for the starting lineup, Alston added three more, as well as four members of his world championship Brooklyn era, whom the fans overlooked entirely.

LAWRENCE TOP HURLER

Alston's pitching lineup will consist of unbeaten Brooks Lawrence and southpaw Joe Nuxhall of the Redlegs; his own ace relief man, Clem Labine, righthander Johnny Antonelli of New York Giants; Warren Spahn of Boston and Milwaukee Braves; Robin Roberts, ace of Philadelphia Phillies' staff and Pittsburgh righthander Bob Friend.

Alston has three more catchers behind Cincinnati rookie Ed Bailey, Sal Maglie of the Dodgers' Ed Campanella and Milwaukee's Del Crandall.

For a starting infield consisting of Dale Long of Pittsburgh, Milwaukee's Red Schoendienst of Cincinnati and Ken Boyer of St. Louis Cardinals Alston added Chicago Cubs' slugging shortstop Ernie Banks and Milwaukee third baseman Eddie Mathews.

The National League skipper picked four extra outfielders—his own Duke Snider, Hank Aaron of the Braves, Pete Rapolet of the Cards and Willie Mays of the Giants. His starters are rookie Bailey, Robinson and Joe Adcock of Cincinnati and Stan Musial of St. Louis, dean of the skaters with 12 previous appearances.

Widow and Children Receive $10,000 on $5,000 Policy

This young businessman's death came only a few months after he took out a Confederation Life Policy for $5,000, with an Accidental Death & Dismemberment clause. He chose this policy because of the low cost. Double Indemnity guarantees in case of accidental death.

It was a wise choice because Confederation Life promptly paid his widow twice the face value of the policy.

A $5,000 policy with Confederation's Accidental Death and Dismemberment Benefits pays:

- Liberal cash payments for non-fatal dismemberment accidents and
- $5,000 if you die from natural causes.
- $10,000 if you die by accident.
- $15,000 if you die by accident while a passenger in a commercial bus, street car, train or ship, or in a fire in a public place.

Authorizes Export

WASHINGTON (AP)—The federal power commission Monday authorized the Eastern Pashandis Pipe Line Company to export up to 18,500,000,000 cubic feet of natural gas annually to Canada for ultimate distribution in southwestern Ontario.

The export authorization permits Pashandis, to deliver to Union Gas Company of Canada through an existing connection in the Detroit area. The ruling reverses a decision by a commission examiner last March denying the export proposal.

SALUTE TO PICTON, CANADA

Shove over you bluebloods of speedboats' 400. Make way for a Canadian upstart!

Give room, you Red Sanks, Sextics, Detroits, Washingtons and Uhlahs, for a Canuck cat has not only looked at your Gold Cup quests but earned the right to wear the royal ermine.

The phenomenal success of Canada's first "Unlimited Class" speedboat epic held on Saturday, elevated Picton to the seats of the nautical rooseve mighty. It was well-earned and so well-deserved.

The mighty-powered queens of America's lead were drivers whose names are emblazoned on the archives of world speedboat racing, throttled their speed demons in thrill-chilled epics of racing that had the thousands watching them in a spine-tingling of excitement.

Gold Cup veterans like Such Crust, Miss Wayne, Doreen? Miss U.S., Gale V and others gave enaugural salute to Picton's acclaimed course in a thunder of mighty engines.

Fittingly on Picton's day of days, and Canada in general, a Canadian boat emerged the winner from this million-dollar marina spectacle.

Proud wearer of Canada's first "Unlimited" laurel wreath, "Miss Supertest II" of London, Ontario showed a foaming arc of rooster-tail woke to her rivals in an epic battle that proved a smashing climax to Picton's nautical show of shows.

Bill Braden, one of Canada's crack speedboat pilots who drove "Miss Supertest" to her record last year, added his most laurels feather to an already well-adorned cap of achievement.

His rocketed the London water - which at an average speed of nearly 94 MPH, sometimes reaching 160 on the straightaways. Bill reached his zenith of driving glory in the final heat when the Canadian hope for the Harnsworth Trophy roared the finish line the winner.

As was said, it is fitting that a Canadian boat should win Canada's first "Unlimited Class" race and the handsom. McFarland Trophy that goes with it. It was fitting that it was won on American driver's first choice of a Canadian course.

But all the honor and glory should not go to "Miss Supertest" and her Yankee counterparts. Save a large juicy share for the Picton Edward Yacht Club for the outstanding organizational job it did. Not forgetting the well-known Picton hospitality.

And just to correct some false impressions. Saturday's marine classic was not the Harnsworth Trophy race. That is being run off Detroit late in August. The trophy for Saturdays epic was a "special" donated by H. J. McFarland. The F.E. Xacht Club will donate a challenge trophy next year.

And so a columnar salute to a gallant boat, a courageous driver, the men of Picton, an outstanding regatta, and the men who made it so.

HEARTBREAK AND TRIUMPH

There was heartbreak and triumph in that 16-mile marathon swim in Quinte's fickle waters on Saturday.

There was heartbreak for two, triumph for one and both for another. The fifth lasted triumph and satisfaction. The crowning triumph added a pinch of victory cans to a veritably unknown swimmer.

To a green-eyed, blonde-haired Cosche-Slovakian beauty went the accolade of final triumph and the cash and glory that goes with it.

Helena, Marcvitz pauned her inaugural test of marathon swimming with a brilliant display of stamina, courage and sheer guts. The 18-year-old Belleville stenographer, modest to the point of shyness plowed her way steadily over the course in who after her second heartbreak Tommy Pedder had been pulled from the water practically within sight of the goal.

Heartbreak was etched on the drawn features of Pedder when he was taken out after leading the field all the way.

But later, in the warm seclusion of a Prince Edward hospital room he had his moment of triumph. It entitled to a great extent his extreme disappointment. His inability to finish. For his prowess whom he had carefully coached and trained paid victory - tribute to his ability as a mentor. Had mastiest stood the finish would have been a fine tribute to pedder as swimmer and coach for he and protege Helena would have finished one-two.

There was heartbreak and disappointment too for Picton's Dorothy Wight and Deseronto's challenger, Betty Berry who were pulled from the water. Berry was forced out after eight miles, Wight later. The sport pages carry the detailed story.

Mrs. Florence Trombley, veteran CNE swimmer gallantly plodded her way over the course to finish official second without benefit of publicized wheels and shattered record. This 55-year-old swimmer deserves a lot of credit in definite evidence that middle age is still a swim force to be reckoned with.

Cincinnati Redlegs on Top In National League Race; Chicago Sox Closing Gap

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ted Williams wasn't just batting the breeze the other day when he said Boston Red Sox were ready to make their move in the American League pennant race. Red Sox are hot and Williams' bat is booming.

The Bostons have won five of their last seven—including a decision that put an end to Chicago's winning streak last week—and although they remain in fourth place, 6½ games back, they are turning on the heat.

It was Williams lifting his average to .374, who touched off a six-run, two-out rally in the seventh inning Monday night as Red Sox clipped Washington 3-2. He Delock, the big man in Boston's bullpen, came through with another splendid relief job, giving up only a pop-fly double over the last four frames.

BOX BEST DETROIT

In the only other American League game scheduled, the second-place White Sox scored seven unearned runs and backed into a 9-3 victory over Detroit, trimming New York Yankees' lead to 3½ games.

Sunday Baltimore beat Boston 5-3 and Cleveland took two from Detroit 4-3, while in doubleheaders New York took two from Washington, 3-2 and 8-6, and Cleveland won twice over Chicago, 7-4 and 6-1.

Detroit's Jim Bunning lasted into Saturday, while Chicago defeated Cleveland 5-4 in 10 innings. Yesterday New York 5-1 and the Red Sox sweps a doubleheader over Baltimore 4-3 and 7-2.

Red Sox came from behind Monday when Willard Nixon slid off relief loser Bud Byerly was followed by singles by Jackie Jensen and Jim Piersall.

Jensen (.320) is one of five Red Sox batters over .300 and is .500 for his last 36 times at bat. Piersall has not only seven hits in his last 25 at bats, but has driven in nine runs—including two Monday night—in 10 games.

Delock, a 26 - year - old right-hander, came up with his second straight game relief job to keep Boston close after Senators had clipped starter Frank Sullivan for two first-inning runs. Delock, who pitched four innings of hitless ball last Friday against Baltimore, worked out of his only tight spot in the Seventh. That's when Don Nats had runners on third and first with none out and Ted Lepcio, Jim Lemon and then got Tony Roig and Ernie Oravetz on foul pops.

White Sox scored two unearned markers in a five-run second to overhaul a Tiger lead, then frolicked with five unearned runs in the eighth. Harvey Kuenn batted in two runs with a homer, but erred twice as Detroit had its 12th straight game at home. Virgil Trucks lost his third while Mill and Howell won in relief.

Dutchmen Slip Further Down In Standings

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Kitchener - Waterloo Dutchmen slipped farther down in the Senior Intercounty Baseball League standings Monday when they lost two games, one to Brantford Red Sox, the other to St. Thomas Elgins.

London Majors and Oshawa Motors split a Dominion Day doubleheader at Oshawa.

In an afternoon game Kitchener was defeated 8-4 by Brantford. In a night game Bob Gingerich gave Dutchmen dropped a 6-1 decision to Elgins.

At Oshawa, London won the seven-inning game 7-2 and was edged out in the nine-inning nightcap.

Brantford defeated Kitchener 14-2 Saturday at London with the aid of 17 runners for a total of six runs. Pitcher Bob Gingerich gave up only six hits for the win.

GOOD SUPPORT

Red Sox rightfielder Danny Wooden gave up eight hits in the afternoon game Monday. He was given good support as teammates pounded out a 12-hit attack which included the first win of the season. Wooden struck out nine batters and issued two walks.

Insanity struck in the Brantford attack with two singles and a double by Gene Kitchener batters. Bobby Fisher went the distance for the losers, giving up nine hits.

At Oshawa Dutch Perkins went the distance for Oshawa in the first game to win on a five-hit pitching performance. Ron Newmarch started for Oshawa but was replaced at the end of the fifth inning after being tapped for five runs.

Ken Balazovic tripled with two out in the fourth and scored on George Brahm's single. Each had two hits in the game.

Oshawa pitcher Cec Hall clashed up his fifth win of the season as he allowed only six hits in the nightcap and struck out six batters. He did not issue a walk.

Only the fact that London scored three unearned runs enabled Majors to threaten Oshawa.

Hodges hit a home in the bottom of the fifth on a walk and three singles. They came back in the next inning with a sixth and added a sixth in the seventh.

Don Lajoy went the distance for London giving up 11 hits.

Last Unseeded Players Ousted From Wimbledon Tennis Crown

WIMBLEDON (CP) — The last unranked players have reluctantly bowed out of the men's singles in the all-England tennis championships, exhibiting to the end - a wholesale disregard for the seeds.

After taking a toll of four of the eight seeded players in the early rounds, the commoners refused anity yielded the four semi-final berths to men who figured in the difficult ratings. Coincidentally, the four survivors were the men who are likely to be playing all the singles matches in the Davis Cup challenge round next December. The outsiders declined to depart gracefully. Top-seeded Lew Hoad of Australia lost his first set of the tournament and was carried to 24 games in another before he got rid of Mal Anderson, a fellow countryman who rates no better than seventh in his country's listings.

Anderson fought off two set points before he finally managed to put him away 4-6, 6-1, 6-4, 13-11.

RICHARDSON WINS

Slim-seeded Ham Richardson, Hoad's semi-final opponent Wednesday, also dropped a set in subduing Neale Fraser, the stubborn Aussie southpaw, 6-3, 9-11, 7-5, 6-4.

Philadelphia's Vic Seixas, the 1953 champion who is seeded 8 and appeared headed for trouble with Allen Morris, the blond university who is ranked No. 17 in the United States, finally gave Seixas a battle in the fifth set and subsequently a hip injury in the second and went down 6-4, 6-4, 6-8, 6-4, 6-2.

Only Ken Rosewall, listed No. 3 seed, through his quarter-final match without undue difficulty, defeating Sweden's Ulf Schmidt 6-1, 6-3, 6-2 in less than an hour. Lew Hoad, he has lost only one set thus far.

Third-seeded Angela Mortimer of Britain joined Mrs. Dorothy Head Knode of the U.S., the No. 7 seed, among the discards in the only women's singles match played Monday. Pat Ward, an unranked compatriot, won the final semi-final berth by whipping Miss Mortimer in straight sets 6-2, 6-4.

The women's doubles continued to go according to plan as Lesley Brough and Shirley Fry, the top-seeded pair from the U.S., breezed over a South African team without losing a game in their third-round match.

Ben Steen's Colt Wins Canadian Derby at Wpg.

WINNIPEG (CP) — Argent, three-year-old bay colt owned by Ben Steen of Toronto, Monday breezed to a seven-length victory in the $70 running of the Canadian Derby, the last of eight stake race.

Ridden by Hamillard, 50-year-old veteran jockey flown in from Toronto for the race, piloted the colt to victory in the mile and quarter in 2:07 3-5, one second off the track record set by Bean Grass in 1951. A crowd of 18,000 turned up for the event at Polo Park.

Hamillard's win netted him $11,-320.

Lover's Maze, owned by R. T. Cooper of Saskatoon was second and Fay Again, owned by Bar Ranch of Calgary, third.

The large holiday crowd established a one-day betting record for the Prairie circuit when it passed $347,778 through the parimutuels during the eight - race card. The previous mark of $345,-000 was set in Edmonton last August.

Argent returned $2.80, $2.70 and $2.10 while Lover's Maze returned $2.50 and $2.30 and Fay Again paid $2.30.

Helena Moravick, 18, Wins Gruelling Deseronto-Picton Marathon Swim

Mrs. Tremblay, Campbellford Only Other One to Finish; Other Three Pulled From Water

By HARRY HULBERT

PICTON (Staff) — A youngster and a veteran of marathon swimming figuratively, were the only two to finish the first mass Bay of Quinte swim here.

Winner of the 18 miles Deseronto-Picton water race was Belleville's pretty Helena Moravick, 18-year-old city stenographer, who completed the course seconds over 12 and one-half hours. Her hours behind her doggedly game Dorothy Tremblay, Campbellford, at 53 years of age a veteran of many Cobalt water marathons.

But if the swim turned into triumph for these two it also was tinged with bitter disappointment for another long-time distance swimmer — Tommy Pedder of Belleville.

Tommy had a half-mile to go and the possibility of adding a second time of about 10 hours for the swim, Tommy was hauled from the water unconscious — his magnificent surge up the Picton reach halted within sight of victory.

When the contestants hit the reach at Deseronto, water temperature was reported at 69. However, as the swim progressed the temperature gradually dropped until it was estimated to be in the 60s near Picton.

At first those who hauled him out gave low water temperatures as the reason for his upset. However, Tommy thinks it more likely fumes from the powerful lighter planes taking part in the famous Picton regatta were more to blame for his defeat.

"It was just one of those things you cannot help," he said yesterday. "The trouble must have started after we hit those log booms. I admit it was cold but I never passed out like that in my life before for no reason."

COLD WATER BLAMED

Cold water was blamed for the defeat of another entrant Mrs. Dorothy Wight, daughter of Picton barrister, H. R. Nourse. Mrs. Wight was hauled out about a mile and one-half from the Picton dock, some 13 hours after the start of the race at Deseronto.

Central figure of the swim and first conqueror of the Bay of Quinte, Betty Berry, 25, of Deseronto, also went under to the unexpected when a tipped muscle forced her to leave the water eight miles out from Deseronto.

With the official field of five went a wild-cat entry, George Wlakin, 18, of Oshawa and Toronto. Wlakin led the pack for about eight miles when cramp is reported to have forced his retirement.

CONQUEROR'S RECEPTION

The conqueror's reception was given Helena at the dock, when she boosted local hopes at 9.40 p.m., 13 hours, 36 minutes and 13 seconds after she left Deseronto. An estimated 10,000 along the Picton waterfront hailed her feat as she was hauled from the cold waters of the reach.

The crowds gathered in the twilight to watch the plucky youngster pit her last ounce of energy against fatigue and cold in the chilly waters of the home stretch of Picton reach.

The desperate battle for victory began about a mile off the dock of the Picton Edward yacht club-official finishing point for the race. There it is where the lake waters mingle with those of the reach, causing a chilling drop in temperature. Almost instinctively, the youngster strove desperately to stay in the water between herself and land.

Surrounded by boats carrying patrol officers, newsmen and spectators, she answered with dogged spurts the cheering and wheedling of her brother, Igor, and Bill Fraser, who piloted her through the entire swim. When it appeared she was flagging, a hurried call to shore by two - way radio by Jack Devine, CJBQ sportscaster, brought Gus Pitts of CKLC Barry Ogden. Ogden replaced Fraser as pacer in the water beside Helena for nearly a half-hour.

ENCOURAGED ON

With her approach to the end of the battle, thousands joined their voices to those in the launch flotilla surrounding the lone swimmer to encourage her. Fire and TV camera crews and their powerful spotlights as a beacon on shore to mark out the finish line, and motor hooters and sirens joined in the salvos of encouragement from the waterfront.

For the last few paces before her hand touched the dock she was joined by brother Igor who guided her through the last few metres to victory.

Helena can't remember too much beyond the bright lights that flashed at the dockside to guide her path.

Seated in her Front street home with her family yesterday all she could say was "I just can't believe it. I thought I would finish last."

TORN LIGAMENT

Feeling fine, the only marks she carries from her gruelling effort is a torn ligament. This occurred in the excitement when she was being pulled from the water at the swim's end.

A prodigy of Tommy Pedder, she was greatly disappointed at Tommy's ill-luck. Knowledge of Tommy's failure might have resulted in her own defeat at the critical moment, Helena admitted.

"Had I thought he was out I would not have made it." I wanted him to be first and myself second."

She confessed to the probability of entering the 22½ swim next year, but "there I go again," she said, "talking marathons."

Tommy despite his ill-fortune finds much consolation in the success of his protege.

"I feel really proud of her. I think we should go a long way with her," he said yesterday.

So much so, he says, he would like to speed up her handling her future efforts and looking after her training.

Helena came in in good time ahead of the first record set for the swim by Deseronto's Betty Berry. Last year, swimming from Picton to Deseronto Betty was the first to conquer the Bay, finishing in just over 13 hours.

Saturday night she appeared at the yacht club shortly after Helena had touched ashore. She had just one regret for her feelings: "Disappointed."

IN FOURTH PLACE

Betty, who got off to a strong start, stayed behind for much of the distance she covered. When she pulled from the water short-ly after 4 p.m., she was in fourth place, about 150 yards ahead of Dorothy Tremblay. She was taken back to Deseronto.

The winner for second place docked in Picton at about 1.37 a.m., ending a marathon sixteen and one-half hour push through the water, much of it seeing some spirited swimmer from the Campbellford veterns, the last part of it being finished in total darkness. Despite the late hour many people knotted on the little dock to see her finish. Ambulance men wrapped blankets around her and hustled her to a waiting ambulance by John Helms and Tommy, under the Picton Rotary Club's Crippled Children Fund.

Gradually, the crowd thinked away, leaving only a few weary newsmen scrambling last details of the first mass swim of the Bay of Quinte.

As the first marathon swim of the season the Deseronto-Picton attempt was widely publicized. At the race's start batteries of newspaper, film and TV cameramen lined the Deseronto dock to snap the starters.

The contestants splashed into the water at 9.07 under grey skies that later greyed the area with heavy rain. Temperature of the reach waters at Deseronto was 68 degrees.

From the start Pedder and Moravick forged ahead leaving the other three closely bunched together behind them.

An hour after the start the line-up was the wild cat entrant Wlakin, Pedder, Helena, Trembay with Berry and Wight close together.

Just before one p.m., Wight passed by her sister, Barbara Pretty, had passed Mrs. Tremblay to gain third place while Wlakin had been removed from the water.

By p.m., Pedder, forging through choppy water had made the Rich Point Bay Bar and had just about half the marathon completed. An hour later the line-up was still the same with Helena holding a lengthy lead and swimming strongly with Wight still in third and Mrs. Tremblay and Betty Berry about neck and neck.

SWIMS STRONG STROKE

Before four p.m., the redoubtable Tommy had entered the home stretch, marked by a long flying trail-plumes of regatta boats in the Picton stretch. At this point he was about two miles ahead of Helena.

Twenty minutes later Betty Berry about 150 yards ahead of Dorothy Tremblay succumbed to a tipped muscle, was pulled from the water and taken home to Deseronto.

By 5 p.m., Tommy's margin was increased still further and was well ahead of Helena by 50 strokes a minute. However by this time he had entered the part of the reach where the waters mingle with those of the reach, causing a big drop in temperature. At this time he appeared to be swallowing a lot of water.

Suddenly, CBC cameraman Ed Hilgingson following Pedder, reports that, suddenly, Tommy began to go unconscious, and could neither hear nor see. Being pulled from the water, he was rushed to the yacht club then taken by ambulance to Don Stringer of Sudbury Canoe Club, North Bay, won the 10,000-and 1,000-metre senior singles championships, did as expected by winning the 1,000 singles by 100 yards over Otto Argos with a time of 3:34.

Brockville Crew Holds Workouts On Thames River

HENLEY-on-THAMES, England (CP) — Canadian oarsmen from Brockville held five stiff workouts on the Thames here Monday and coach Ralph Gifford said his crew is ready "to go all the way."

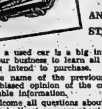
The Brockville Rowing Club's eight-oared crew used a racing shell belonging to Reading College for the workouts. They left their own shell in Canada because they could not make arrangements to have it shipped back in time for the Canadian Henley and Olympic trials scheduled for Fort Dalhousie July 24.

"The boys fit nicely into the Reading shell and it is the one we will use in the Thames Cup race," said Gifford. "It is not the same as our own shell, but the boys like it."

Gifford said his crew is in top condition and rowing well.

"I am confident we will win the cup."

Gifford said he had cancelled earlier plans for the crew to travel to London today to meet Prime Minister St. Laurent.



Wednesday the Canadians will race against the Thames R club in the first of the Thames Cup lightweight eights.

Bill Stevenson of Toronto, He Hopes to be one of the leading candidates for an Olympic Games berth.

Another top Olympic prospect from Sudbury, Luis Lukonovich, stepped into senior class and whipped Lloyd Rice of Toronto in double-blade heavy singles. Lukonovich is Canadian junior champ.

In the rowing events Ottawa took the open heavyweight fours to beat St. Catharines and Toronto Argos with a time of 3:34.

Balding and Leonard Among Leaders in Qualifying Round

HOYLAKE, England (CP)—A record-breaking 68 by South Africa's Gary Player stood all by itself at the halfway mark as a mammoth field of 220 golfers continued their fight today for the 100 qualifying spots in the British Open golf championship.

Willie Player's three-under-par performance broke the competitive record on the tough Hoylake championship course by one stroke, the scores were generally high. Only two other players broke 70, Britain's Charlie Ward and Belgium's Flory van Donck both shooting 69s on the easier Wallasey professional was set to tackle Hoylake today, when the players switch courses.

Veteran Stan Leonard of Vancouver and Lachute, Que., toured Hoylake in 74, three over par, to place among the top 41 at the halfway mark.

CHAMP SHOOTS 71

Defending champion Peter Thomson of Australia, gunning for his third straight open, shot a relaxed par 71 at Wallasey, a score matched on the same course by Henry Cotton, the English veteran who won the first of his three Opens 22 years ago.

Not all the ex-champions fared as well. Dick Burton, the 1939 titleholder, was bracketed with Ireland's Fred Daly, the 1953 amateur champion, at 73. Bobby Locke of South Africa, another three-time Open winner, had 75 together with England's Harry Weetman and Dai Rees of Wales.

Gene Sarazen, the 1932 champion, had a 77 while Mike Souchak of Berwick, Pa., rated as the second favorite behind Thomson, blew to a 78 along with the highly fancied Frank Stranahan of Toledo.

District Soccer League Results

Les Digby, president of the Bay of Quinte soccer league, announced this morning that Picton Army will default their last two league contests.

They were scheduled to meet Trenton Merchants tonight and the G.R.D. squad on the 11th but both games have been defaulted by Picton. Several of the Picton players will be absent from this district for a month, forcing the Army squad to halt activity. They will be back in time for playoffs however.

Monday night, the T.P.T.s swamped Deacon's 34-8 and Orphans shaded Lloyd's 7-6.

Merchants Down Trenton Jrs. 8-2 Behind 3-Hitter

FRANKFORD (Special) — Frankford Merchants tightened their grip on third place in the Belleville and District Baseball League last night by handing the Trenton Juniors an 8-2 setback under the lights here.

The winners spotted Trenton one run in the top of the second but came back with three in their half to take the lead for good. They added two other five markers in the next three frames.

Bobby Green went the route to gain the victory, tossing a neat three-hitter. He struck out a dozen and all the way striking out 24 batters while walking half that many. He whipped the side in the second and seventh innings.

G. Marcey and Ron Warnemaker shared hurling duties for Trenton, between them tagged for 14 hits. They fanned five, while passing two and hitting one batter.

Don "Tuck" Barclay spearheaded the Merchants' attack, smashing a two-run homer and a brace of singles. Mike Cosgrove picked up a trio of three baggers while two each went to Bill Rankin, Harry Wickson and Gib. Gilmour. Claude Carr and Ron Dafoe each had one safety.

Trenton scores came from Roger Drake in the second, Doug Alexander in the seventh and Wannamaker in the ninth.

Drake's single, an error by two wild pitches gave the Juniors their short-lived lead in the second. Merchants exploded in their half of the frame, hits by Barclay, Cosgrove, Wickson and Gilmour plating three runs.

Hits by Rankin and Wickson added one in the third while Cosgrove, Dafoe and Rankin helped account for the fourth-inning tallies. Gilmour's single in the fifth and Barclay slammed his circuit blast in the seventh gave Frankford scoring. A base-on-balls, a sacrifice and a Leider's choice netted Trenton a single marker in the fifth.

The line-up:

Trenton—Alexandrr, W. Kennedy, Austin, M. Kennedy, Drake, Burns, Whitney, Cole, Wannamaker.

Frankford — Barclay, Cosgrove, Dafoe, Carr, Rankin, Wickson, Green, Armstrong, Gilmour, Kemp.

Umpires — Ethier and Bawden. Scorer, Thomas Stiles.

Drew Favors Upping Pensions Of Civil Servants

OTTAWA (CP)—Pensions of retired civil servants and members of the Armed Forces and RCMP personnel must be adjusted upwards, Opposition Leader said today in the House of Commons.

He said the pensions now paid were fixed when the dollar was worth more than it is today.

Mr. Drew spoke on a resolution preliminary to introduction of a series of amendments to the Public Service Superannuation Act.

The amendments would widen the scope of the act to include persons not covered at present by the pension plan, said William Hamilton, parliamentary assistant to Finance Minister Harris.

Mr. Drew asked Canada should give its retired civil servants "a minimum of security" and "not just in keeping with their length or service to the country."

CORONATION DECIDED

At the night sitting, Mr. Drew said an announcement should be made immediately and a royal commission appointed to look into the whole question of pensions to civil servants.

A. M. Nicholson (CCF — Mackenzie) said some adjustment must be made for the 1,400 civil servants now receiving less than $60 a month in pensions. There were 212 receiving anything less than $30 a month.

J. T. Richard (L—Ottawa East) said additional benefits should be paid to low-pension government employees who were forced to retire early through illness, abolition of their jobs or similar reasons.

Howard Green (IC—Vancouver Quadra) termed "severe treatment" a provision of the act which reduces the pension of the widow of a retired civil servant if she is 20 years younger than her husband.

ALBANIANS JAILED

Polish Communist Party Cracks Down on Lax, Cowardly Officials Following Revolt

By REINHOLD ENSZ

BERLIN (AP)—Poland's Communist party cracked down today on "lax and cowardly" officials it accused of failing to head off the bloody workers' revolt at Poznan.

ADN, the official news agency of Communist East Germany, said Polish leaders have launched investigations to find out why party members in Poznan "displayed such a lack of vigilance." It said they were not prepared to "counteract the planned provocation in time."

Premier Josef Cyrankiewicz of Poland's Communist Party Central Committee, official organ of the Polish Workers (Communist) party, rapped into party officers' it says scampered to safety when the uprising exploded Thursday and "did not return from hiding until order had been restored."

NEARLY 1,000 DEAD

Meanwhile, estimates of the death toll in the Poznan party uprising continued to mount. Eyewitness accounts put together in Vienna almost total at "close to 1,000." The Polish government has admitted no more than 48 killed.

Radio Warsaw said on Monday night 424 persons were treated in Poznan hospitals and ambulance stations after the outbreak. It said 289 were released after receiving first aid.

The attacks by the Communists' organs indicated the Polish Communist Hierarchy was deadly hurt by the Poznan upheaval, was hunting for scapegoats.

Reports reaching Berlin led to speculation the party are already "purging" against some top army and government officials.

"There may be some changes in the Polish leadership," said a Communist journalist on his arrival here from the riot city.

The Warsaw government was reported to have ordered out thousands of steel helmeted troops to cordon off the East German frontier and block the westward flight of workers who managed to get out of Poznan.

FIRING HEARD MONDAY

A British businessman who flew from Copenhagen to Copenhagen, Denmark, said gunfire was still sounding in the suburbs of the Polish Monday morning. He said he was told by an ambulance driver that more than 1,000 dead and wounded had been taken to hospitals during the first night of the fighting.

Communist newspapers and radio in Russia, Poland and neighboring Soviet bloc countries kept up their effort to fix the blame for the uprising on what they called the Western - linked "fascist underground."

Denying any hand in the uprising, the United States state department said in a formal notification touching off the fighting between Russia and Yugoslavia that a surge of "pent-up bitterness on the part of oppressed and exploited people."

Violent Death Of Triple Slayer Lifts Fear

WARREN, Ohio (AP)—The violent death of triple-slayer Alfred (Red) Wilson has lifted the fear which clouded lives of residents in this northeastern Ohio area for 12 days.

Wilson, clutching the Luger pistol he used in three murders, toppled from a tree Monday, two bullet holes in his brain and shotgun wounds in his chest.

The 37-year-old truck driver, in the half hour he lived, was trapped, told a little of his story to his brother-in-law, James Lawson, to whom he gave the gun and men tracked him.

He said he had three bullets left in his Luger and was going to make Lawson drive him here so he could kill the man responsible, wife, Juanita, and his brother-in-law, Lawson Hixon Botts.

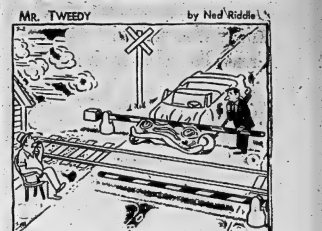
It was anger at his wife that started Wilson on his murder tour. She had left him and had charged him with beating her. He started out to look for her and shot her two sisters, Brown's wife Gertrude and Mrs. Hixon Botts. Then, during his flight, he chanced upon 16-year-old Nancy Worthington and kidnapped and killed her.

Little Benny's Notebook

I was waiting to be sent to bed, and ma said to pop, William, I was reading Mr. Shakespeare's book on Modern Child Reering, and he has some interesting things to say about children and their early relation to religion through the nightly prayer. Mr. Shakespeare says the first principal to teech a child is that he should never pray for anything that he can accomplish by his own ernest efforts, she said.

I'm sure Shakespeare is right, dont you, Benny? pop said, and I said, sure, if it's going to help people for things, it must be ever here to beg heaven.

Well, that's the ruff idea, pop said, and I said, Would it be wrong to pray for better marks in school?



That depends on the approach, pop said, and I said, Well of course, naturally, if you pray for marks in application to studying your lessons, your marks will automatically get better.

Is it wrong to pray for 8 times 8-ap make, 69 instead of 64? I said, and ma said, Yes, I think it would, because it's right for 8 ates to make 64. That's a true law of life and one of the foundations of arithmetic. Why should you even want to make it 69? she also said.

Because that's the mistake I made in the arithmetic examination today, and the papers haven't been marked yet, I said, to pray said. Yee gobs, do you think it would be fair for the boys who got the right result to have their problems marked wrong?

Why no, but how about if I just made 69 for about a minute while my teacher was not being marked? I said, and pop said, How about if you go to bed and pray for a little more sense?

Govt. Plans to Develop System To License Power Boat Owners

OTTAWA (CP) — The government plans to develop a system of licensing for operators of Canada's growing fleet of pleasure power boats, patterned after the licensing system for motor vehicles.

Once effective, it will mean that the power boat operator will need an operator's licence to run his craft.

Leopold Langlois, parliamentary assistant to Transport Minister Marler, told the Commons Monday that, in addition, navigation regulations governing operation of motor boats on minor waters will be extended to all Canadian waters.

The regulations now governing motor boats on minor waters, such as small lakes and rivers, forbid excessive speed or dangerous operation. They are enforced by the RCMP.

Mr. Langlois was explaining to the Commons provisions of amendments to the Canada Shipping Act.

OTHER CHANGES

The bill makes other changes pertaining to registration of ships, seizure requirements of engineers on fishing boats and makes a part of the act an international convention for the prevention of dumping of oil at sea.

The bill, which met no criticism, was approved in principle. The Senate approved it after deleting section that would have required masters and mates of fishing vessels to hold certificates of competency.

Mr. Langlois said there are 100,000 power boats of 10 horse power or more registered on the Great Lakes alone. This presented a growing problem of public safety.

Many power boat operators were responsible persons, consideration with master-mariners. But it was apparent there were a great many others who were not aware, in fact, irresponsible and foolhardy.

Steel Situation In U.S. Will Affect Canada

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian steel-using industries will be seriously affected by the United States steel strike, Murray Cotterill, United Steelworkers of America (CIO) spokesman, said Sunday night.

He predicted that some industries may have to halt production altogether, while others could be forced to slow down. Canada produces two-thirds of the steel it uses and imports the balance from the U.S.

Imported steel is mainly heavy-gauge structural steel, steel pipe for the trans-Canada pipeline and specialty steels not made in Canada, he said.

The Canadian public relations director said he saw the steel situation in the U.S. sending out ripples of unrest into the Canadian labor scene. Canadian companies in past negotiations usually have been unwilling to strive at a contract settlement until U.S. steel prices are determined, he said.

Mr. Cotterill said he foresaw difficulties in the building industry and the laying of the trans-Canada pipeline should the U.S. strike be a protracted one.

Trinity Women's Guild Honors Grand Old Lady's Anniversary

SHANNONVILLE — On Wednesday evening members of Trinity Church Guild, with their minister, the Rev. L. Arthur Hagerthar friends and relatives, surprised Mrs. Robert Kincaid and a most enjoyable evening was spent, in honor of her 80th birthday, at the residence of her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Willis Wilson, with whom she makes her home.

Two other daughters, Mrs. Bruce Hamilton and Mrs. Lewis Cummins were present for the occasion, after spending the day with their mother. Neighbors also, called to wish her "Many happy returns of the day."

She received many birthday cards from friends and other gifts; also a card from Missionary Guild, where she was a former member.

Although Mrs. Kincaid is 80 years old, she is quite active and besides helping with the regular household tasks, she pieces quilts, makes rugs, as she likes to keep busy. She is always ready to welcome friends, when they call.

Her maiden name was Elizabeth Ann Grills and after her marriage to Robert Kincaid, they farmed for 47 years on their farm near Roslin until their retirement 11 years ago, when they came to Shannonville to make their home with Mr. and Mrs. Wilson.

Her husband pre-deceased her eight years ago. Besides three daughters, she has nine grandchildren.

When the guests arrived to the evening an address was read by Mrs. Fitzgerald, president of the Guild, wishing Mrs. Kincaid the best life could give her.

On behalf of those present, she was asked to accept a small gift from the members of the Women's Guild of Trinity Church, who wished her to enjoy them and to think of the Guild as she did.

She was also presented with lovely red and white carnations by Mrs. Fitzgerald and later in the evening was also presented with a box of candy by Mrs. H. Honion, on behalf of the Guild. Mrs. Kincaid voiced her thanks for the lovely gifts.

During the evening, amusing contests were enjoyed; singing of old-time songs which brought back the pleasant times of yesteryear, and "Abide With Me," was also sung.

Mr. Page gave a short address and spoke of the kind hospitality received when visiting Mrs. Kincaid, as it was always a pleasure to visit at that home.

Those in charge served most delicious refreshments that included a lovely birthday cake, decorated in white, pink and green, with the words "Happy 80th Birthday."

The cake was presented to her by Mr. and Mrs. Wilson, and Mary Elizabeth, as a birthday gift.

Thinks A-Bomb Radiation Makes Children Bright

WOLVERHAMPTON, England (Reuters)—A children's psychiatrist is putting hundreds of youngsters through intelligence tests to back his theory that radiation from atomic and hydrogen bomb tests is making them brighter than their parents and sisters were.

Dr. J. Ford Thomson began his investigation after education authorities here noted that children born here since the war showed surprising progress at their lessons.

Thomson, a consultant children's psychiatrist, told a press conference that he stumbled on his "theory by accident when he "remarkably clever" scrapbooks were sent to him for behavior trouble. He believes the mind of a growing child is stimulated by atomic radiation.

Driving on Wrong Side Accounts For Many Mishaps

TORONTO (CP)—One of every four accidents on Ontario highways in the first three months of 1956 was caused by driving on the wrong side of the road, Ontario highways department said Tuesday.

Speeding and losing control accounted for another one in four of the accidents, a department report shows.

The number of accidents from January to May increased to 8,109 from 8,387 but the same period last year. The number of highway fatalities decreased to 348 from 373.

Other accident causes were blamed on failure to yield the right of way, improper passing, improper cars at intersections, disobeying signals and unsafe equipment.

The department also said that 50.3 per cent of driving licence applicants from March to May failed. A stiffer examination, including a written test, was started in March as one result. The new examination also includes vision tests and sign recognition.

MONTREAL (CP) — Police reported today three armed men held up a jewelry store in Montreal's Rosemount district Tuesday night and escaped with about $60,000 in cash and jewelry.

Police said the men arrived disguised as workmen and tied up a clerk after binding and gagging the owner of the Mountain Blue Diamond and Gloria Watch Company and another jeweller in the store at the time.

They said two of the men toldthe owner, J.P. Emery, that they were interested in purchasing rings for their wives and would drop in to the store to examine the stock.

The men then looked over the jewellery and left, telling Emery they would call half an hour later. Emery drew revolvers and ordered Emery and his assistant, R. Massey, to sit down. The men then taped their hands and feet and gagged them.

Police were called after Emery and Massey managed to work themselves loose, about half an hour after the men escaped.

Fly Swiss Mountaineers to Arizona To Climb Butte Where Plane Lies

GRAND CANYON, Ariz. (AP) Expert mountain climbers today prepared to make a precipitous butte to reach the main wreckage of a United Air Lines DC-7, one of two airliners which hurtled into the Grand Canyon in a disaster that took 128 lives.

The climbing team's main assignment was to look for remains of the 58 persons who were aboard the DC-7 when it smashed into the canyon Saturday in mysterious circumstances after colliding in flight with a Trans World Airlines Super-Constellation.

The shattered remains of the Constellation, which carried 70 persons, lies less than a mile from the wreckage of the DC-7.

The team will be joined Saturday by five Swiss mountaineers who are expected to arrive at the canyon tonight or Thursday morning. They are being flown from Zurich.

All the remains that could be found in the wreckage of the Constellation have been removed from the canyon and flown south to Flagstaff for possible identification.

CANADA BUYING MILLION BARRELS CEMENT OFF REDS

Communist Poland Is Seller Says Howe

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP) — Communist Poland, a buyer of Canadian wheat, has said 1,000,000 barrels of cement to this country, Trade Minister Howe says he helped arrange the sale.

He said Tuesday he also would be willing to help another wheat buyer—Russia—transact business in Canada. But he had his doubts Russia was in a "peculiar position." Her price and terms of exports were fixed by a state organization.

Still, even if Russia failed to make headway in selling goods to Canada he was ready to talk to Commons agricultural committee, that Canadian wheat sales to the Russians will rise to a maximum of 500,000 tons a year—about 19,500,000 bushels.

Russia has agreed under a trade pact with Canada to buy a minimum of 400,000 tons—14,500,000 bushels—annually for three years. She now has agreed to raise this to 500,000 tons if she found Canadian markets for her goods.

COMMUNIST DEALS

Both he and George McIvor, chairman of the Canadian wheat board, thought the Communist bloc deals with the Communists as the commitment began a study of the wheat board's 1954-55 report.

Mr. McIvor said Canada in the current crop year which ends July 31 will sell about 40,000,000 bushels to the Soviet Union, 350,000 tons to Poland, at least 30,000 and possibly up to 150,000 tons to Hungary, 320,000 tons to Czechoslovakia and at least 400,000 to Russia. There are 37 bushels in a ton of wheat.

All deals with the exception of that with Russia involve some form of federal credit. The Russians are expected to pay cash.

Mr. McIvor said even without the Communist bloc deals exports for the crop year this year would be higher than the 252,000,000 shipped a year ago. And this despite the impact of the U.S. giveaway program which Canada had deplored. The Americans ship wheat as straight gifts, under barter deals and to Iron Curtain countries under long-term credit, in some cases up to 40 years.

Nickel and Copper Located 30 Miles East of Bancroft

BANCROFT — Ed Welchstahl, of Hardwood Lake, in Raglan township, Renfrew County, is wondering today whether he struck it rich—twenty years ago.

Joining him in that wonderment are some of the country's biggest mining operators.

They are investigating what may prove to be a rich nickel and copper strike in Raglan township, which lies to the east of Carlow township in Hastings county and is some thirty miles east of Bancroft and northeast of McArthur Mills.

Welchstahl two score years ago discovered what he took to be iron pyrites. Although he thought the ores worthless, he took some samples. Recently, according to this story, somebody saw rich ore in a store and remarked that it did not appear to be pyrites but seemed more like nickel and copper. That remark led Welchstahl, Earl W. Pregman of Madoc, a Mr. Varrin of Griffith and a Mr. Henderson to make a further study of the Raglan township area from which the "pyrites" came. They found a nickel and copper ore-body 100 feet wide and 700 feet long on the surface, with the ore of a good grade.

What was for a time a well-kept secret is now public knowledge not merely in this area but in mining circles in Toronto. A tremendous amount of staking of claims has taken place in the past week. Caddilacs are a common place sight on the bush roads of the area. Little Long Lac Gold Mines Ltd., is reported interested in the original find—one report is that the option has obtained an option on it. Rockingham Mines is also active in the district.

An area about five miles wide and close to ten miles long, running from Hardwood Lake to the little community of Ireland, is reported to have been staked. This area covers both Crown and private lands.

Cause of the excitement is a recent showing about three miles northwest of Hardwood. The length of the actual deposit which is said to contain nickel and copper is undetermined, and interest activity is believed to be coming around purchase of options on land containing the deposit.

About 2,000 acres private land is concerned in dealings between business interests and private owners. Those in the Hardwood district believed to have been staked are Welchstahl, Adolph Gentile, Arthur Gerrick, Wallace and Herb Welchstahl, Arthur Hogan, Moses and Noah Brezack, and Ed Welchstahl.

Ed Welchstahl claims his knowledge of the deposit started while running a trapline through the district. Game warden Ferguson as the man who actually broke news of the deposit—which resulted in the staking rush.

Consumer Price Index Jumps By Over a Point During May

OTTAWA (CP) — Living costs made their biggest month-to-month rise in five years during May, boosting the consumer price index by 1.2 points to 114.6 per cent.

The sudden sharp rise was almost entirely due to a jump in food prices, although other components of the index also increased slightly, the bureau of statistics reported today.

The price index, based on 1949 prices equalling 100, now has reached the second highest level in history, but two-fifths of a point below the record 115.3 reached in December, 1951.

The increase of 1.3 points during May was the biggest monthly rise, on a point basis, since June, 1951, when the index increased by 1.5 points.

In the last few years the index usually shifted by fractions of a point. It had remained unchanged in April after increasing by one-fifth of a point in March and a year ago it stood at 115.9.

As unexceptionally strong seasonal rise in the price of potatoes, combined with increases in coffee, fresh fruits and vegetables and all meat items propelled the big May increase.

Rents and home-ownership costs also increased slightly along with industry, clothing, footwear, furnishings, utensils and equipment, home repairs, men's clothing, bus fares and personal care and men's shoes.

Only the seasonal decline in the price of coal, along with lower prices for women's and children's wear, camera film and gasoline.

The big jump in food prices boosted the yardstick's food subindex by almost 3.2 points to 112.5. The shelter column, covering rents and home-ownership costs increased by one-half point to a high of 132.6; household operation rose by one-fifth of a point to 116.7; and the miscellaneous column increased by one point at a point to a high of 120.6.

Only segment to drop was clothing which eased by one-fifth of a point to 108.8.

U.S. Govt. Intends to Freeze Many Critical Steel Supplies

By WILLIAM A. SWARTWORTH

PITTSBURGH (AP)—The government intends to freeze certain critical steel supplies for a while to keep defence production unhampered as long as possible during the country-wide steel strike, already hurting other segments of the United States economy.

An order instituting the freeze has been drawn up and will be issued Thursday, taking effect Friday. It is expected to remain in force for only a short period and possibly no longer than two weeks.

The action is designed to channel to defence producers selected steel items now stockpiled in warehouses.

During the freeze period, contractors of the defence department and the Atomic Energy Commission can acquire or put under order such items as stainless steel tubing and carbon plate to take care of foreseeable future needs.

Once these needs are met, the government intends to release the remaining supply for general purchase. Also, producers generally who can demonstrate special urgency will be permitted to obtain small quantities of the selected steel items.

Meanwhile, the U.S. Independence Day holiday weekend saw layoffs and business cutbacks resulting from the 10-day strike of members of 600 United Steelworkers members against 81 per cent of the basic steel industry.

Unemployment in allied industries stands at nearly 47,000. The figure is expected to climb higher as the effects of the steel negotiators will confer here separately with both sides in "exploratory" discussions preceding the dead-locked contract negotiations.

Cyrus S. Ching, head of the federal mediation service, will meet first with David J. McDonald, steel union president, and later with representatives of the industry's Big Three—U.S. Steel, Bethlehem and Republic.

Railroads and other freight carriers—trucking companies, river barge firms, great lakes shippers and ferries felt the pinch most.

More than 33,000 railroad employees already have been placed on furlough or notified of impending layoffs. The trucking industry accounts for about 11,000 of the total made idle.

On another front, two small steel firms have increased the price of their products $8 to $9 a ton in anticipation of higher labor costs once the strike is settled. The Cooperweld Steel Co., a specialty producer, and Alan Wood Steel Co. near Philadelphia, a small producer of sheet and plate, announced the increases.

PC SPOKESMAN IN HOUSE WANTS TAX CUTS NOW

Fleming Claims Govt. Will Have Fat Surplus

OTTAWA (CP) — A Progressive Conservative spokesman says the government's fat budget surplus calls for tax cuts now instead of next year.

Donald Fleming said in the House of Commons Tuesday the government has no right to continue levying high income taxes when it will end the fiscal year next March 31 with a huge surplus.

The member for Toronto Eglinton said the basic tax exemptions on personal income—$1,000 for single persons and $2,000 for married taxpayers — should be tax changes from a 20-per-cent rate-in per cent.

He spoke during debate on the government's bill to enact a series of minor changes in the income Tax Act, announced in the March 26 budget of Finance Minister Harris.

MADE NO REDUCTIONS

The budget made no reductions in tax rates and forecast a $113,000,000 surplus in the current fiscal year. The 55-56 year ended with a $31,700,000 deficit.

Mr. Fleming said the fiscal treasury ran a surplus $200,000 in the first two months of the year, which with a $136,900,000 surplus a year earlier, left a surplus for the full year was assured.

"CCF spokesman A. M. Nicholson said they would share Mr. Fleming's concern about high taxes.

In a country as prosperous as Canada, the government should see that all Canadians get a fair share of the country's wealth. Yet 30 farmers out of 100 did not receive incomes high enough to pay taxes.

The government's tax bill was finally given second reading—approval in principle.

Ceylon Outlines Plans for Future Relationship

LONDON (Reuters) — Ceylon today outlined to the Commonwealth prime ministers here its future relationship with the Commonwealth, which was announced in public.

Authoritative sources said it is Ceylon's desire to follow the example of her Asian neighbors, India and Pakistan, and remain in the Commonwealth.

Ceylon's continuance in the Commonwealth after she becomes a republic requires the unanimous agreement of all the Commonwealth countries. Commonwealth sources say this is certain to be given.

The discussion, on Commonwealth membership, includes a report by Colonial Secretary Alan Lennox-Boyd on constitutional progress towards self-government by various British dependencies, such as Malaya, the Gold Coast, the proposed West Indies Caribbean Federation and Nigeria.

The program for the morning session included a review of the advance of nuclear energy for peaceful purposes in which Canada will have much to say.

Espanola Couple Fleeing To Toronto With Six Children

Badly Beaten Body Found In Shack by Census Taker

SUDBURY (CP)—Ontario Provincial Police said today they are holding warrants charging a 37-year-old man and his wife with the brutal slaying of William Snider, 78, at Espanola, 90 miles west of her.

Police said the pair, Mr. and Mrs. Ezi Guay of Espanola, are travelling toward Toronto in a car with their six children, ranging in age from 18 months to 13 years.

Snider's badly beaten body was found Friday in a lonely shack by a census taker. Police said he was killed five or six days before.

ALERT POLICE

Police said Guay's sister, Florence, and Joseph Dupuis, both of Espanola district, are being held as material witnesses.

Provincial police Inspector Hayway II, leading the Southern Ontario have been given a description of the car and the wanted couple, and police in Toronto and other southern cities have been alerted for radio, police said. The couple may have had time to slip through road checks, however.

Snider, who moved to his shack on the banks of the Spanish River 40 years ago from Casselman, near Brockville, lived alone.

He was supposed to have a large cache of money hidden in his cabin and this may have been the motive for the killing, police said.

An autopsy Tuesday showed Snider was brutally beaten about the head and body by a strong man. His skull and 13 ribs were fractured.

Probing of Sex Killing May Take Some Time

PORT ARTHUR (CP)—Police investigating the sex killing of an attractive nurse said Tuesday the probe "may take some time."

City and provincial police have combined resources in looking for the person responsible for the death of 25-year-old Mrs. Vivian Mitchell. An autopsy report said she had been throttled and criminally assaulted.

The murder victim had worked night shifts because she lived alone. She lived alone alone and she wanted to be near her husband, a hospital patient for five months with a compound leg fracture.

Mrs. Mytruk's body was found Sunday under the back porch of a house about a block from her home. The body was naked except for shoes and stockings. Mrs. Mytruk was last seen Friday night getting off a bus near her home after finishing work at the hospital.

Inspector Robert Wainoit of the provincial police said Tuesday night "no real active leads" had been developed as yet. "It may take some time to interview persons" and added that no one was being held.

Missing Teen-ager, Pinned Beneath Wreckage For 9 Days, Found Alive

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A missing California teen-ager was found alive Tuesday night and police said she had been pinned beneath the wreckage of a car for nine days near the body of her fiance.

Officers said the car had plunged over a verdant embankment and struck a shelf 50 feet below, then bounced another 250 feet to the bottom of the canyon.

Highway patrolmen, acting on a tip from a plane-borne spotter, found the wreckage in Parley's Canyon, a few miles east of Salt Lake City. The wrecked car belonged to her betrothed, 20-year-old James Hixon Jr. of Salt Lake City. Hixon's body was found about 20 feet from the wreckage.

Sheriff, Rival Shoot It Out, Both Are Dead

STILLWELL, Okla. (AP)—Sheriff Chester Crittenden and the man who apparently beat him for his job in Tuesday's primary election shot and killed each other Tuesday night in the courthouse here.

Eleven persons are said to have seen Crittenden and Bob Alberty, draw guns and shoot it out. There was no known motive.

Canada Is Able To Stand Short U.S. Steel Strike

By FORBES REUDE
Canadian Press Business Editor

Canada can take a short United States steel strike without major upset, but a long one will cause distress.

This seems to be the cross-continent consensus—gathered by Canadian Press bureaus — but with most observers saying it is too early to make a definite assessment.

A relatively painless strike would be one in the range of two weeks. After that it would start to pinch, a month would be quite sure, and much longer might mean—in the words of one observer—"an approach to catastrophe."

Canada gets about a fifth of her steel supplies from the United States and even if the tie-up ended today it would cause some pain.

COULD CRIPPLE PRODUCTION

Even those most optimistic about the immediate future say a lack of a few vital items can put a big crimp in production.

The strike comes in the midst of the already record-setting steel activity and Canadian plants are already working above rated capacity. They don't make many of the items imported.

Major items imported include, wide-flange structural steel beams, big pipe, and plate including that used in automobile bodies.

A shortage of wide-flange steel beams could hit the heavy construction industry, including office buildings, power plants, bridges—even the expansions of Canadian steel plants designed to make Canadian users dependent on imports.

PIPELINE STOCKPILE

Trans-Canada Pipe Lines Ltd., now embarked on its 574-mile natural gas pipeline from Alberta to Winnipeg, says it has on hand or within sight about 115 miles of 34-inch pipe—the size to be used on the Prairies.

It expects to have two crews laying pipe within a fortnight at the rate of two miles a day. The company is hopeful it can lay the present pipe supply in about 60 days.

Council Will Further Consider Survey Plans for Sewage System and Disposal Plant

Belleville city council has left the way open for further discussions with Thurlow and Sidney townships in the matter of having survey plans prepared for a sewage system and disposal plant.

At a special meeting held Tuesday night members of council voted to reconsider the recommendation of June 18, when a motion to enter into an agreement with Thurlow and Sidney to have survey plans for a sewage system was turned down.

Since the meeting of June 18, a Belleville delegation attended a meeting of the Ontario Water Resources Commission at Kingston at which time the city was told that it must have plans for a sewage disposal plant by June 30 of 1957.

At last night's meeting Alderman Arthur Keegan gave a detailed report on the Kingston meeting and urged that the city take action with respect to securing plans for a sewage system and sewage treatment plant.

Alderman C. L. Hyde presented a motion calling for re-consideration of the recommendation defeated at the previous council meeting and calling for preparation of plans for a sewage disposal system on an area basis.

Alderman Keegan noted that the only matter before council at the moment was the request of the Water Resources Commission that the city have plans for a sewage system by the close of next year.

IGNORES SECTION

He pointed out there was no use of the city saying it could not afford the cost of a sewage system when it did not know what the cost was going to be.

"The first step is to secure an area plan so we can have the complete picture," he said. "Until we learn the probable cost we are all in the dark."

After the probable cost was learned the second step would be to call a joint meeting of the councils of Belleville, Thurlow and Sidney to discuss a breakdown of the costs and if possible decide on how much each municipality should pay.

Then when the complete cost is known, if the municipalities feel they cannot afford the expense they could go to the government and ask for assistance.

Chief opposition came from Alderman Sale, who said he felt "Until we learn the probable cost we are all in the dark."

Then when the complete cost is known, if the municipalities feel they cannot afford the expense they could go to the government and ask for assistance.

Chief opposition came from Alderman Sale, who said he felt "Until we learn the probable cost we are all in the dark."

"At no time have I said that Belleville should not have a sewage plant, but it depends on our ability to pay," he said.

Referring to the city's present financial position, Alderman Sale said that Belleville's present per capita tax was $70 with only two other Ontario centres of comparable size taxing higher.

Also its debenture debt in 1955 was $13,000,000 or $170 per capita. In contrast to this was the $100 per capita debenture debt in Niagara Falls and a debt of $70 in another Ontario centre of comparable size.

WANTS DEBT REDUCED

He urged that it was simply common sense for Belleville not to undertake "any more capital expenditure until there was a reduction in the debenture debt."

The aldermen took exception to the attitude being taken by the Water Commission in urging the city to proceed with a sewage plant.

"They are an appointed body without an elected representative. Yet they are telling us what we must do," he said.

"That is not government by the people," he asserted. Terming the Water Commission's mandatory order for municipalities to have sewage disposal plans by June of next year "an outrage," Alderman Sale declared that the government would not enforce such expenditures if there was stiff opposition from the municipalities.

He expressed the opinion that construction of a sewage disposal plant would increase the city's tax net debt by 30 per cent and said that he had an alternative but to oppose it unless relief from government was offered.

Alderman Lou John Stock said that as a medical man he was not opposed to a sewage plant but he had objected at the last meeting for two reasons. One was the percentage of costs the city plans to be paid by the city.

He wondered what power the Water Commission had. "I understand it is only a advisory body and here they are dictating to us," he said.

NOT OFFEND CLAIM

Alderman Safe agreed that the commission undoubtedly has been given certain powers but that "if the people speak up there is nothing they can do." Legislation cannot be changed. The government is not going to offend people."

Alderman Safe agreed that the commission undoubtedly has been given certain powers but that "if the people speak up there is nothing they can do." Legislation cannot be changed. The government is not going to offend people."

He said that "it is merely shifting the burden from the municipality to the working man and tenant," returning Alderman Safe.

Alderman Tice noted that municipalities in Western Ontario were proceeding with sewage systems and also argued there was no point in Belleville and Trenton and Napanee going ahead if Belleville was not also.

He said that raw sewage being dumped into the bay at Belleville was a health menace and that the costs were to be paid by the municipalities and not by the property owners.

He said that raw sewage being dumped into the bay at Belleville was a health menace and that the costs were to be paid by the municipalities and not by the property owners.

He suggested, however, that separation proceedings should be gone ahead with if that was the only way to council getting a grant on an area sewage system were made.

Alderman Harold Hyde as chairman of finance asked if there was to be a vote on the sewage system plans at the meeting. If there was to be a vote he said he wanted to "debunk" certain figures used by Alderman Safe.

There was no vote on the question but Alderman Keegan moved by a 3-3 vote the motion to "reconsider" the matter. Opposing the motion were Aldermen Devid, Graham and Safe.

18,300 Pheasant Chicks Ready To Be Put Out

By mid-July, 18,300 pheasant chicks will have been distributed from the Normandale Game Farm to farms in the Lake Erie district. Distribution also is well under way at the provincial farm at Codrington, in the Lindsay area, according to reports from the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests.

Day-old chicks are delivered from the Normandale farm to 12 township organizations and various sportsmen groups in the Counties of Essex, Kent, Lambton, Middlesex, Elgin and Lincoln. From Codrington pheasant birds are distributed to Lindsay, Huron, Peterboro, Durham and Muskoka forest districts. On completion of the program, a total of approximately 81,500 pheasant, 12,500 pouls and 1,000 adult birds will have been released and distributed from Codrington. Lindsay district will receive about 6,000 chicks, 800 pouls and 200 adult birds.

Some 500 pheasant pouls will be leg-banded before release in Clarke and Darlington townships by Fish and Wildlife Division personnel to assess the value of releasing hatchery - reared birds. All hunters are asked to co-operate during the 1956 pheasant shoot by turning in leg bands on pheasants bagged to local conservation officers.

The chicks are raised in brooder units until they are about eight weeks old, when they will be released into suitable cover by the "gentle release method." It is hoped that some of them will supplement the wild hatch and contribute to the hunters' bag during next fall's pheasant season.

Council May Use Film to Show Tourist Appeal of Waterways

TRENTON, (Special) — A Toronto motion picture group suggests including Trenton in a film emphasizing the beauty and tourist appeal of the Trent Waterways.

Council last night discussed the idea and is giving it further consideration. It would cost the town $1,000 for crossovers if Larry who will be present tonight at the showing of an earlier production in the same theme was given authority to make the final decision.

Councillor Claude Graham believes the expenditure worthwhile and the film advertising. The other five councillors expressed views along the same line. Councillor J. MacDonald, however, put the cancer that he not record some scenes along the river meaning the coal piles and rickety old buildings. While he agreed on the principal of the idea he expressed intention to give fellow councilmen a dig. It was part of his campaign platform since his colleagues that a clean-up policy for riverfront property should be adopted, he said.

Wasil Sidore of Belleville, is faced with a disturbing problem. He will not be able to build the house he wants on the lot in Champlain Heights in Trenton unless council agrees to the by-law governing erection of buildings within eight feet distance of other buildings in that sub-division. The lots are 50 feet across the front hardly wide enough for semi-style homes with garages at the side. Mr. Sidore asked for the regulation distance to be halved. Councillor Vahn Lange's move that the by-law be changed received unanimous endorsement.

LETTER IS FILED

An anonymous letter urged council to consider a defence against A bombs.

The writer would drive a passageway through Mount Pelion and provide a shelter deep and large enough to house families in accommodate residents on the west side of the river. It is expected that a similar project under Bonner Hill would give shelter to the people in east Trenton. He suggests that the money collected for the by-law governing erection of sport might be better used in protection against hostile air attack.

Mayor Ron Burtt the writer should not be dealt with if the person who wrote it did not want to sign it. Councillor Claude Graham asked to have the letter kept on file. Tom Lloyd, Fred Lloyd, Bill Greenwood, Mel Johnston and Finlay Harris.

Contracts For Street Oiling, New Sidewalks Let by Council

Contracts for street oiling and for the construction of new sidewalks in the Parkwood Heights area were tentatively approved by council, under bids-prices quoted in each instance being lower than were anticipated at city hall.

The H. J. McFarland tender for street oiling, which provide that of Hugh Murray Ltd. for the re-construction of sidewalks was also approved. In both instances the amount of work planned will have to be reduced in order to keep the cost within the amount provided for in the year's budget. Only two tenders for each class of street work received, the lowest in each case being accepted.

An amount of $38,000 was provided for street oiling, while re-construction of defective sidewalks in the Parkwood Heights area will be limited to $10,000. The unit price for sidewalks quoted by Mr. McFarland was 65c per square foot.

Alderman Ben Safe noted that because of prices quoted being higher than expected, the number of streets to be oiled and the footage of sidewalk to be built would have to be curtailed.

Council voted to formally accept the art treasures and antiques willed from the estate of Mrs. A. Salaman of the Isle of Orleans. It will not make any claim on the remaining household effects left by Mrs. Salaman here.

The residue of the estate will come to Belleville on the death of three beneficiaries, it is said, whom is still quite young. The Belleville Public Library Museum will come to the city has been estimated at between $30,000 and $50,000.

A committee was formed to make a further report on this question.

MUST CONSIDER STORAGE

Under the terms of the will the antiques will be kept intact, a suitable building to house the antiques and the art gifts. In the meantime the question of storage is one which must be considered, it was pointed out.

Alderman Ralph Graham questioned whether formal appraisance of the antiques would obligate the city into providing a building to house the collection.

A committee of Mayor Forrester, the chairman of finance, the city solicitor and city manager was named to bring in a recommendation with respect to acceptance of the gifts.

Council voted to refer into an agreement with the Humane Society for the operation of the new city dog pound on the Sidney Street Extension. Under the suggested terms of the agreement the city would continue to provide a dog catcher and would pay the society $1,500 per year for the operation of the dog pound.

A by-law limiting the speed of motor vehicles in city parks was passed by council. Alderman Graham noted that there is no particular reference to Victoria Park, although it also covered Exhibition Park.

In connection with Victoria Park Alderman Tice asked if it was true that motor vehicles had been ruled out of the extreme south end of the park.

It was told that although the Yacht Club had been leased property occupied by its building, the land around it would always have free use of the entire park. Cars had been stopped going beyond the Yacht Club building for reasons of safety.

Year-Round Schooling Is Advocated

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — A nationally-known educationist who has just retired says the country should have year-round schooling in air-conditioned buildings, and the abolition of all homework.

The final report of Dr. Geoff Wheable, who retired last week as director of education here, was released Tuesday by public school trustees. In it he asks if it is justifiable for buildings costing more than $1,000,000 to be idle for three months of the year.

"If the student who leaves school at 16," says Dr. Wheable, "finds he has begun to working 44 hours per week for 50 weeks each year, a total of 2,000 hours. Yet we ask a child in grade 13 to spend 1,200 hours per week in school for less than 40 weeks a year, a total of only 1,000 hours. Air-conditioning would make possible the operation of schools during the warmer summer days and students would be more comfortable there than in most other places."

EVEN BY ONE-THIRD

If the school year was increased even by one-third, to just over 1,300 hours, it would be possible for students to complete the four-year high school course required for graduation in three years.

The only result this increase the problem of the school year by a year, but would correspondingly increase the secondary school enrolment and therefore the need for classrooms to accommodate these students for a year longer.

"It also would abolish homework."

BILL PASSED

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate Tuesday passed and sent to the House of Representatives by unanimous voice vote a bill to recognize Israel as a "symbol of colonialism" this country's last extraterritorial rights in Morocco. The president had urged its passage.

Checking Cars For Fingerprints After Robbery

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — A stolen car used in a $1,367 daylight robbery was being checked for fingerprints today as city detectives pressed a search for "two kids" who reportedly locked the car's young secretary and robbed her at gunpoint.

Barbara Autterson, 25, secretary at the Allen Tobacco Company, was forced to brake her small car Tuesday afternoon when the stolen car stopped abruptly in front of her.

She said a man jumped from the car and ran back to her vehicle. He was wearing a kerchief as a mask and thrust a gun in the girl's face.

Miss Autterson was enroute to the bank. She threw the bandit one of the two bags she was transporting. It contained $302 cash and $965 in cheques. The other bag contained $6,980, mostley in cheques.

NURSES AT NIGHT, DRIVES BUS BY DAY

A woman with energy to burn, Mrs. Mabel Blackburn, operates a 33-mile bus line from Picton to Kingston, Ont., by day, then dons her nurse's uniform to take on night nursing duties at Picton hospital. She is believed to be the only woman bus owner and driver in Canada. She offers a versatile service to the people on her route, picking up and delivering parcels, doing shopping for farmers along the way and looking after small children. Although her bus schedules allows only 7½ hours daily for sleep, meals and housework, Mrs. Blackburn is happy in the dual role. Her only fear is that some day she may be unable to change a bus tire. In 13 years of bus driving she has yet to have an accident. —Central Press Canadian.

May Withdraw Murder Charge Against Model

TORONTO (CP) — Crown officials said today a murder charge against 20-year-old fishion model Mrs. Lenore Bicknell may be dropped.

Mrs. Bicknell, remanded Tuesday to a further hearing, was charged Sunday after she made a statement about the rifle-death of her husband 18 months ago. She repudiated the statement a few hours later.

He was shot by a rifle Mrs. Bicknell was holding, the death was ruled accidental.

Crown officials said no definite decision about pressing the murder charge will be reached until the bullet — a willowy red-head has been examined at the hospital.

There is a possibility, however, that it will be dropped, they said. Under Canadian law a confession is not enough to convict a person of murder.

Policy Pegged On Downgrading Stalin Pressed

LONDON (AP)—The Kremlin is sending out an "army of agitators" to whip up enthusiasm among the Russian people for the new Soviet policy pegged on the downgrading of Stalin.

Moscow Radio said today mass meetings are being held in all factories in key cities to discuss the policy adopted at the 20th Soviet Communist party congress.

"A large army of agitators is explaining" the new policy and "mobilizing the Soviet people are fully supporting it," the radio said.

The Soviet government newspaper Izvestia said the new Kremlin campaign against the "personality cult" is aimed at furthering international communism and bringing other socialist factions into a united front.

Izvestia also complained that capitalist reactionaries are paying too much attention to the Stalin downgrading.

Body Found In Small Creek

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—The body of Roy Gibson, 61, who had been missing from his London township home since June 18, was found by a police search party late Tuesday in a small creek in the Glandeboye area 25 miles north of London.

His abandoned car was found in a bush in the same district earlier Tuesday. A post mortem was ordered. Police said they were told Gibson had been in ill health for some time.

Liberal Leader In Que. Expected To Leave Post

MONTREAL (CP) — Georges Lapalme is expected to resign as provincial Liberal leader within a few months, reliable sources said Tuesday following a party caucus.

Liberal members of the legislature and defeated candidates in the June 20 elections gave unanimous passage to a vote-of-confidence in Mr. Lapalme's leadership but party officials said afterwards that he failed to change his intention to resign.

They disclosed that the 49-year-old lawyer had to be talked out of handing in his resignation immediately. The Provincial Liberal Federation, policy-making body for the party, is to meet in Trois-Rivieres July 17 to select a date for a convention, presumably to choose a new leader.

Although an autumn convention has not been ruled out, it is expected the party meeting will be set over to early next year.

NO COMMENT

Mr. Lapalme stepped away from the Reform Club immediately following the party caucus. He had given no statement to make.

Mr. Lapalme's resignation has been expected since the election when his party's strength dropped to 30 members from 23 despite an all-out campaign to defeat Premier Maurice Duplessis' Union Nationale government.

Mr. Lapalme resigned as federal Liberal member for Joliette-L'Assomption-Montcalm, in 1952 to head the provincial party. At that time the party had only eight members in the legislature, but won 23 seats in the June 20 election.

This year, with federal Liberals taking part in the campaign and with the provincial Social Credit party pledging to support the Liberals, Mr. Lapalme had hoped to win enough seats to become official opposition.

Party officials spent three hours behind closed doors Tuesday discussing plans for the party.

Columbia River Power Project Subject of Talk

VICTORIA (CP) — Federal and British Columbia authorities meet here today to discuss problems that could start the gears grinding on one of the world's biggest engineering projects.

On one side of the conference table are Premier Bennett, his lands and forests minister, Ray Williston, and provincial Attorney-General Robert Bonner. Facing them are Trevor Lamb, federal resources minister, and his advisers.

At stake in the discussions, according to pre-conference indications, is a mighty hydro-electric dam on the Columbia River at Mica Creek, B.C.

Its vital statistics: cost: an estimated $250,000,000; capacity: 1,300,000 horsepower.

Of rock and concrete, it would tower 700 feet above the Columbia River at Mica Creek, 150 miles north of Revelstoke, B.C., near the Alberta - British Columbia boundary. It would be larger than Washington State's Grand Coulee, now the world's largest dam.

Mr. Bennett said the discussions will be friendly, but at the same time he criticized the federal government for what he called lack of vision and policy in developing Canada's resources.

The Social Credit premier said in a conference-eve statement that the Columbia River issue is the object of his criticism, not any specific federal power policy.

Promoter Freed On All Counts

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — A federal court jury Tuesday night acquitted business promoter Harry Lester of all counts of a 13-count indictment charging he defrauded 28 persons of $163,000.

The 42-year-old defendant, known by many as "Mr. five-by-five," disappeared from Buffalo in October, 1954. During involuntary bankruptcy proceedings, his personal debts were reported at more than $1,000,000.

He was found in Phoenix, Ariz., earlier this year and was returned here for trial.

Create Tribunal To Investigate Poznan Uprising

VIENNA, Austria (AP)—Radio Warsaw today announced creation of a special commission to investigate Poznan's "tragic and free-don" uprising last week and hand down punishment.

The broadcast said there would be no appeals from decisions of the tribunal.

The broadcast described the commission's task as an "oeneric and clearly political one" going into direct causes of the bloody three-day insurrection which is said to have left 53 persons dead. It said the commission would have to refer to the regular courts.

Reports reaching West Berlin Tuesday said the "hot-headed" trials of Poznan's rebels already had started. Western sources have reported hundreds of Poznan workers arrested for participating in the uprising.

REPORT EXECUTIONS

Summary verdicts and executions of anti-Communist "provocateurs" in Communist police in Poznan were reported in Vienna newspapers today. Dispatches signed as Reuter and AP quoted the anti-Red Polish government as using planes and helicopters, as well as thousands of police and troops, in its search for participants in the Poznan rebellion and anti-Communist underground forces.

From Paris, a group of European writers said most of them former Communist or party-liners signed an appeal for aid against the "bloody repression" of workers in Poland. The appeal was addressed particularly to labor organizations of the world and international investigation into the needs of Polish workers.

It said it was absence of the right to strike "in the Soviet empire" that led to U.S.S.R. and its satellites — which brought the use of tanks and guns against demonstrators in Poznan, who now are being portrayed as criminals, subject to the death sentence."

Hunter Blanks Trenton 5-0 In Frankford Win

Behind the three-hit pitching of Bobby Hunter the Frankford Merchants shut out the Trenton Legion Juniors 5-0 last night in Trenton for their second win over the Juniors in as many nights in a 15 and 10 league fixture.

As was the story last night and the night before, the Merchants had too much pitching for Trenton. Bobby Green hurled a three-hitter the previous night, giving Trenton a total of six hits in the two games.

The victory puts Frankford a step closer to the Belleville Bobcats. The 'Cats hold second place with a 7-3 record while Merchants are 7-4.

Frankford had trouble scoring runs last evening in the fairly close ballgame but netted a pair in the second and salted away the decision with a trio in the fifth. Ron Hunter fired beautiful ball, giving up singles in the first, 5th and ninth innings but was never allowed more than one base-runner per inning after the first. Bob Canned relieved Green in the fifth. He walked one and hit two.

Ron Wannamaker toed the rubber for Trenton and was tagged for 10 Frankford safeties in going the route. He struck out two batters while walking only one. Ron's mates bobbled once while Frankford played perfect ball afield.

Claude Carr got the winners away in the game with a leadoff single but was retired on base. Bill Rankin then followed with a double and Harry Wilson's timely bagger made it 1-0. The big catcher scored on an infield out.

Wannamaker's lone walk opened the Frankford rally as Barclay followed with a single. Second-sacker Mike Cosgrove then smashed his first home run of the season for three runs and the 5-0 lead. Wannamaker allowed only three hits during the remaining frames.

The Merchants combined to pace the Frankford attack. Wickson hit for the distance with a triple, double and single, Bill Rankin had a double and two singles while Don Barclay picked up three one-baggers. Cosgrove homered and doubled while singles went to Claude Carr and Ross Dafoe. For Trenton Willy Kennedy, Bill Jones and Guy Austin each had one single.

Lineups:

Frankford: Barclay, Cosgrove, Dafoe, Carr, Rankin, Wickson, Hunter, Stoliker, Kemp.

Trenton: Alexander, Jones, Austin, M. Kennedy, Drake, Burns, W. Kennedy, Scott, Cole, Wannamaker.

Umpires: Carson and C. Ellis.

Scorer: Don Harvey) Time: 1.30.

League-leading Vaughan's picked up another victory in the midget baseball league last night downing Williams 10-3 while Stewart-Warner defeated Elliott's 2-1.

Dave Porter started on the hill for Vaughan's, relieved by Gord Vaughan. Between them they allowed three hits. Brennan caught. Fred Howard and R. Grant shared mound duplies for Williams, giving up four hits. Kenneth Kerrish was the pitcher.

Jack Elliott went the distance for Stewart-Warner with Dave Coe receiving. Gary Rowbotham and Latchford formed the Elliott's battery. The winners took a 4-0 lead in the first frame with two bad errors paving the way.

Hold U.S. Visitor For Bank Holdup At Agincourt

TORONTO (CP) — Jack Leslie Brown, 30-year-old United States visitor, was arrested on an armed robbery charge Tuesday, three hours after a bank in the Toronto suburban Agincourt branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce had fled with more than $4,000.

The holdup took place two hours before bank closing time. An unmasked man entered and asked teller Jim Marks to change a $10 bill. As Marks made change, the gunman showed two paper bags across the counter and told Marks to "fill them up."

Marks then handed him a pile of bills directly on the alarm buzzer and rang it as he picked them up.

THE MILITARY MIND

Last month Lt.-Gen. James Gavin, the U.S. Army's chief of research and development, told a Senate subcommittee that several hundreds of millions of people would die from radioactivity if nuclear war came.

His testimony was made public last week.

Maj.-Gen. Guy Madoy, director of information of the U.S. Army, said he learned with "shocked surprise" that the testimony was being released for publication. If this had been realised earlier, the army would have protested publication.

This is a revealing and disturbing insight into the military mind at work.

Here is a professional brave hire soldiers, sailors and airmen to protect them. The chief expert of the army believes that nuclear war would kill hundreds of millions. It is true that these hundreds of millions would not be Americans, but would be persons living in Communist lands or those adjoining them. Nevertheless, there is a clear implication that nuclear war might also bring death to millions of Americans. Yet, for some reason, another employee of the American people does not believe that his employers have a right to learn the extent of their peril. Is this acting like a servant or a master?

It cannot be legitimately maintained that Lt.-Gen. Gavin's estimate must be kept secret in the interests of national security, unless it is further argued that the secret is so frightening that it might induce panic in the American public and lead to the people advocating a policy which the military experts believe wrong.

That is the crux of the whole question. What right have military men to conceal from the public the extent of the peril to the nation? In time of war concealment may not only be defensible but imperative. In times of peace such secrecy is not compatible with our concept of democracy. If the public, which elects men and women to govern the country, is not permitted to know the facts essential to form a judgment, then elected men and women advocate, how can an efficient democratic form of government be maintained? The answer is that it cannot.

Perhaps, in time, military men will maintain that in secrecy lies the only security.

That may be right, but if that is so this is just another case where we shall have to choose between liberty and security, between trusting the common sense and good judgment of the voters in a democratic regime and scrapping democracy in the conviction that the generals know what is best for the nation.

THE WRONG SOLUTION

The City of Brantford is going to pay supplemental old age pensions to those passing a means test.

It is the second city in Ontario to take this action. Toronto was the first.

Many old age pensioners depend entirely on their monthly pension cheques. Forty dollars a month is too low to maintain adequately all these pensioners. There may be many who receive more, but rents are low, who can get by. In Toronto, though, $40 a month does not provide a decent or even bearable standard of living.

Because of differences in living costs between different municipalities, there is something to be said for municipal supplementary pensions. But we find it difficult to understand how anybody can defend the full details of the present law which provides that the maximum supplementary pension will be $20 a month. We doubt whether living costs in Brantford are $20 a month above costs in a score of other Ontario centres. The taxpayers in all these centres will help to pay the additional pensions in Brantford pensioners, for Ontario will pay 60 per cent of the supplementary pension.

Similarly Belleville residents help pay additional pensions to residents of Toronto and Brantford, pensioners in Belleville will get no additional help.

Situations like this are not new. They occur whenever one level of government makes assistance conditional on another level of government sharing in the cost.

The system is inherently unjust.

If Ontario is going to supplemental pensions to some needy citizens over 70, it should pay them to all in similar circumstances, without these payments being dependent on municipal governments accepting a share of the burden.

NO SIGNALS

"Caution: Right hand drive. No signals."

That was the familiar warning painted on the back of a truck in an army convoy passing through Belleville the other day.

Cannot something be done to correct this situation?

The use in Canada of army trucks with right-hand drives was inevitable during the Second Great War.

But has not the situation changed? Some of the trucks in the convoy had the standard left-hand drive. Why not all?

Or is the Government so poor that it cannot afford a comparatively cheap solution, the installation of the familiar flashing signal lights on all trucks with right-hand drives?

JULY THE FOURTH

Happy birthday, Uncle Sam!
And may this your comfort be!
Not that you are trouble-free;
Not that all
You may spend your holiday,
But that all your children true
Share the cares that fall to you.

Happy birthday, Uncle Sam!
Happy, though the skies are grey
And uncertain seems the way.
In the thought that faithful still Unto you,
With an undivided will,
All for one and one for all,
We shall rally when you call.

Happy birthday, Uncle Sam!
May the skies of freedom sing
With the hymn we long to sing;
Not
May you find that we remain
Still unspoiled by glittering gain,
Scared at heart and body stout,
In these troubled days of doubt.

Happy birthday, Uncle Sam!
Not the happiness of ease;
Not the calm of summer seas,
But the deeper joy of pride
Born of knowledge, tried and wide;
Loyal hearts, devoted, true,
Share the tasks that fall to you.

Stratford Festival

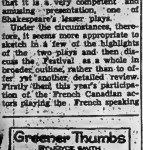
By ROBERT TANNER

By this time, many reviews have appeared in the press, both of Canada and the U.S., of "Henry V" and "The Merry Wives of Windsor"; two Shakespearean plays which are being presented at this year's Stratford Festival. These have almost unanimously agreed that the former is one of the finest productions that the four year old Festival has ever seen, with the young Canadian Christopher Plummer giving a superb and thoughtful portrayal of the title role. Opinions have varied regarding the Merry Wives, though most critics have agreed that it is a very competent and amusing presentation, one of Shakespeare's lesser plays.

Under the circumstances, therefore, it seems more appropriate to sketch in a few of the highlights of the two plays and then discuss the Festival as a whole in broader outline, rather than to offer yet another, detailed review. Firstly, then, this year's participation of the French Canadian actors playing the French speaking parts in "Henry V" with Gratien Gelinas (Quebec's famous Fridolin) appearing also as Dr. Caius in the "Merry Wives", was an exciting innovation which also proved a great success. Their highly stylized type of acting, contrasting strongly with the more naturalistic style of their English - speaking colleagues, added spice and force to the drama. The subtle use of music, both instrumental and vocal, is becoming almost a trademark of the Stratford productions, and Michael Langham and Lou Applebaum (Artistic and Musical Directors respectively) succeeded in obtaining from their actors some wonderfully unforced singing. Naturalness was again the keynote of one of the most charming scenes in either play, Henry's bilingual wooing of Princess Katherine of France so delightfully played by Ginette Letondal. The gorgeous costumes of the court of France, the clever contrast between Gelinas' portrayal of the aging King, and the gainboling doctor, the hilarious slapstick of the basketful of, dirty linen, and the subtle use of William Needles in constantly changing costume as the Chorus, whose function so clearly foreshadows the narrator of modern radio and TV, all these are points which linger in the mind and give a continued feeling of pleasure.

MAY BE CRITICAL YEARS

The years 1956 and 1957 may well be critical ones for the Festival, for a variety of reasons. Pessimists have claimed that it could not survive the withdrawal of the genius of Tyrone Guthrie to the remoteness of trans-atlantic advice; the enthusiastic critical acclaim of "Henry V" would seem to prove them wrong. This year, too, will see the last of the famous tent which somehow has added its touch of pleasant informality to the Festival, it would appear that the architects of the permanent theatre have managed to catch much of the same feeling in a building which will provide many additional advantages. Another experiment in 1956 was the reliance on what is virtually an all-Canadian cast with no "big names" to draw the crowds. It is perhaps a little early to judge the effect of this policy on the box office receipts, but the fact that many performances are already completely sold out is at least an indication that the Festival can stand quite successfully on its own feet. The visit of the company to the famous international Festival at Edinburgh in August where it will present "Henry V" and "Oedipus Rex" is a striking tribute to the international status that it has won for itself.



It is obviously the aim of the Stratford governors to broaden their Festival into one embracing all the arts. Music, literature, painting and sculpture already have their place, though it cannot be claimed that as yet they enjoy the same support from visitors as does the Drama. Included in a most interesting season of music (both classical and jazz) which opens next Saturday is Benjamin Britten's unusual opera "The Rape of Lucretia" and the Festival concert hall is already ringing with the glorious voices of Regina Resnik, Jennie Tourel and Jon Vickers. It was a most interesting experience to attend a rehearsal yesterday under the guidance of Hermann Geiger-Tourel of Toronto's Royal Conservatory.

EXHIBITION OF PAINTING

Painting is represented by an exhibition of the works of Leslie Murry and Pavel Tchelitchew, both of whom are also theatrical and ballet designers, as well as by a fascinating display of all the various techniques and media of the art of illustration. Literature is similarly served by the showing of a number of old books from the collection of Mr. Syd Fisher of Montreal, including several examples in excellent condition of the famous four folios of Shakespeare's works. Almost as interesting is the display arranged by the Canadian Book Publisher's Association, on Shakespeare, the theatre and the Arts, a display moreover, where the visitor is expected and encouraged to pick up the exhibits and spend many a delightful hour browsing over their contents. Richard Southern's illustrated history of the theatre completes the Festival Exhibition.

Each year, it seems, brings at least one complete innovation; in 1956, it is the presentation by the French Canadian groups, Le Theatre du Nouveau Monde, of three of Moliere's one-act farces. The first of only four performances of these took place yesterday afternoon. Let it be said at once that an understanding of the language is by no means essential to the enjoyment of these lively productions, as was demonstrated by the uproarious reception given to them by a predominantly English speaking audience. The exuberance of the French style of comic acting, together with their talent for pantomime and gesture makes the English spectators almost unnecessary. Guy Hoffman, who plays the lead in all three, is a clown in the old tradition, with a perfection of timing which is seldom seen these days. He is ably assisted by a cast which includes Denise Saint - Pierre, Monique Miller, Germaine Giroux and the Gascon brothers, Gabriel and Jean. This is an ambitious experiment in the improvement of understanding between the different parts of our country, as well as excellent entertainment. May it receive from the visiting public the support it deserves.

Weddings

PETERSEN—SEDORE

The Salvation Army Citadel, Tweed, Ontario, was the setting on Saturday, June 30, at 2:30 p.m., for a lovely wedding ceremony when Brigadier Morgan Flanigan of Belleville, united in marriage Envoy and Lieutenant Elsie Marie Sedore, of Tweed, daughter of Mrs. Della Sedore, to Lieutenant Roger Adolph Petersen of Toronto, son of Mr. and Mrs. P. G. Petersen. White and pink peonies in tall standards formed a beautiful background for the ceremony.

During the processional, the congregation sang "Love Divine, All Love Excelling", and during the ceremony, Mrs. E. Wright rendered "This My Life and Let It Be", with Mrs. L. Chambers as piano accompanist and during the signing of the register, the congregation sang "Centre of Our Hopes."

Given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Donald Sedore, the bride was attired in the Salvation Army uniform. She carried a white Bible created with red roses.

Mrs. Edith Griffin of Tweed, sister of the bride, Lieutenant Ruth Sedore of Perth, Ontario, and Captain Dorothy Trussel of Montreal, were the attendants.

Mr. Greg Ferguson of Toronto, acted as standard bearer, while Mr. Ted Petersen of Toronto, brother of the bridegroom, was groomsman; Captain William Brown, bandmaster and Mr. Fred Creighton, were ushers.

The reception was held in the United church lower hall, where the bride's mother, wearing the Salvation Army uniform, received, assisted by the bridegroom's mother, also attired in the Salvation Army uniform.

For the wedding trip to Willow Beach, Ontario, the bride travelled in a beige suit with beige accessories. Upon their return Lieutenant and Mrs. Petersen will have charge of the Salvation Army Rosemount Corps, Montreal.

Guests were present from Perth, Carleton Place, Toronto, Trenton, Hampton and Belleville.

MYSTERIOUS DEATHS

TOKYO (AP)—A mysterious illness which strikes down young men—most frequently bachelors—in the middle of the night is causing concern in Japan. It has claimed 130 victims in the last 18 months, police said today in Tokyo says. Its symptoms are similar to the "bed dream death" which has claimed scores of Filipinos in Hawaii in increasing numbers in the last 20 years.

This and That

By HARRIET STEVENS

Monday is usually our day for browsing in the shops and it is then we gather from here and there little bits of shopping news. In consequence of the long weekend, T & T has no shopping information this week and we confine ourselves to our weekly with "Good Shopping!"

The Canadian Federation of University Women is setting up the A. Vibert Douglas Fellowship of $1,500 to be awarded for the first time in 1957-58. In our last column we promised to tell you about an outstanding Canadian woman who is our neighbor.

Dr. A. Vibert Douglas is the Dean of Women at Queen's University, Kingston, and the university, Dr. Douglas, M.B.E., Ph.D., (McGill), F.R.S.C., is also the acting president pro-tempore. She has many and varied interests which range from the study of the stars to the welfare of the girl students at Queen's University. One of her interests is the work of the CFUW and the magnitude of her contribution is partially understood when we learn that she is a past president of the International Federation of University Women. Not alone is this singular woman recognized in the world of women but she is acknowledged in the realm of science as an outstanding astrophysics which the encyclopaedia defines as "that branch of astronomy which deals with the physical constitution of the heavenly bodies or bodies, the use of instruments and methods specially dependent on physics." We do not grasp the true meaning of astrophysics but write it because it is the symbols of the breadth of Dr. Douglas's life and contribution to Canada.

We have mentioned our visit with Dr. McNeil and he told us Queen's was very fortunate to have Dr. Douglas. He went on to tell us that she has asked us soon as I can." Dr. McNeil explained that she meant this to be literal and also symbolic. Her particular science has to do with the stars and her horizons are as noble. Belleville women have enjoyed the privilege of hearing Dr. Douglas speak and T & T is proud to pay this modest tribute to a distinguished Canadian woman who lives and works in a neighboring city.

The Olympic Games, which commence in Melbourne in November, seem far away to us in both time and space but Australia is all agog. Tremendous efforts are being made "down-under" to make the games the greatest ever. The torches which will carry the Olympic flame from Cairns, North Queensland, to the games in Melbourne, will arrive in Australia in the S.S. Parra, which was scheduled to reach Melbourne on the 19th of June. The fuel to keep the flame alight arrived with the torches. The Olympic flame will be kindled in Greece in late October and carried by foot and air over 8,000 miles to Cairns. From Cairns, 7,760 runners will carry the flame in one-mile relays to Melbourne. The flame will arrive at the Olympic stadium on a Thursday afternoon in November, at the moment of the opening ceremony. The Duke of Edinburgh is to be present to declare the games officially started.

There is another bit of news from Australia that may interest many Canadians. Pressure is being printed and spoken in Canada about the Canada Council and the need for help by the federal government to our universities. The Australian government will make up to $4,460,000 available to Australian universities in 1956, under the States Grants Bill. This sum is $660,000 more than was made available in 1955.

The Minister of Health in the government of Ceylon, which was formed after the recent elections, is a woman, Mrs. Vilma Wijewardene, M.P. The places of women in the lives of nations is assuming increasing importance all around the world. We believe this a noteworthy development and disagree with the school of thought which discovers what it terms to believe is a battle of the sexes. There should be no battle of the sexes in a world which requires the finest from both.

In our search for This & That from here and there, we ran across an unusual but interesting item about the 6,700,000 Sikhs of India. They are renowned for virility and independent views. "The religion not only demands that a follower must make no distinction between professions and trades, but also must disregard pedigree, orthodoxy and ritual. He is forbidden gambling, falsehood, theft, tobacco (because it is dirty and makes the user lazy) and liquor. Sikh women are not discriminated against in any way with regard to social, political or religious matters, because their leader said 'Why consider a woman inferior when she gives birth to kings and prophets?' Sikh women have often fought shoulder to shoulder with their menfolk on the battlefield."

ADVICE To The LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

YOU MIGHT CONSIDER WORKING YOURSELF

Dear Beatrice Fairfax:

For ten years of marriage I thought I had a perfect husband. You can imagine what a shock it was when he came to me one day and told me that he wanted a divorce; that he was in love with another woman and wanted to marry her.

I tried to persuade him that it would be a dreadful thing to think about and begged him to break off with this other woman. I told him I would not only forgive him, but I'd try to forget that it ever happened, and that I was sure if he would do as asked, we could be happy together again as we used to be.

Nothing I said moved him, however, and finally I saw that it was no use, so I gave him the divorce.

My problem now is that, while he is supposed to give me money to take care of myself and the children, he hardly ever sends any and I have all I can do to get it long at all. I scrimp and try to save, but the bills pile up in spite of all I can do, because the child ren must have proper food and clothing.

I've written many, many letters to my former husband trying to make him realize what he is doing to me and the children, but I don't believe he even cares what happens to us.

Have you any suggestions about what I might do?—Mrs. B.T.

Dear Mrs. B.T.:

Trying to get money from a divorced husband who has no sense of responsibility, or even decency, is heartbreaking frustration. You could go to a lawyer, of course, and have him take to court and ordered to send you money regularly, but the kind of man you describe would have to be taken to court repeatedly. Moreover, with your financial problem I'm sure you can't afford legal help of this kind.

What I think you should do is to do your local family welfare bureau and see what can be done through their efforts. This sort of organization is experienced in dealing with problems of this kind and will certainly do everything they can.

Even with their best efforts, however, you might not get the results you need because, here again, it would be perfectly possible for irresponsible men to still find a way to escape his responsibilities.

You might, therefore, discuss with the family agency the possibility of your getting yourself some sort of work which, added to such sums as your husband gives you occasionally, might enable you to get along. If your discussion with the family organization indicates that this would be a practical program for you, they will help you plan to have the children taken care of during the hours you would be at work.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECHMAN

FORM FOR BRIDE'S MOTHER'S NAME ON WEDDING INVITATIONS

Dear Mrs. Beechman:

1. My daughter is to be married in several months. I expect my divorce to be granted next month. If it is granted, what form of name should I use on the wedding invitations?

2. Since my husband and I have been separated for the past four years, would it be proper for my daughter to have her uncle (my brother) give her in marriage?—Mother

1. The correct form of your name, after your divorce has been granted, is your maiden surname prefixed to your married surname. (In other words, you use your maiden surname in the place of your ex-husband's first name.) For example, let's say your maiden name was Rose Graham, and that you married and divorced George Williams. Then your correct name after your divorce will be: Mrs. Graham Williams.

If it is important that you indicate your first name, an alternative, although not as good as the form I have suggested above, is to use the initial of your first name also:

Mrs. T. Graham Williams.

It is most important that the bride's mother use the correct form of her name on such an extremely important item as her daughter's wedding invitations. For her name is there for all the world of their relatives and friends and acquaintances to see, and to see that she knows what's correct!

2. You and your daughter must decide this very personal question . . . the decision depends on many circumstances which only you two can know and understand. However, whenever it is agreeable to all closely concerned the bride does ask her father to give her in marriage.

BEAUTY

BY MME. QUI VIVE

COIFFURES AND MAKE-UP FOR THE OVAL-FACED GIRL

Beautifully groomed hair, a flattering neckline and make-up that's "just right" accentuates the beauty of a classically oval face.

Since the days of Leonardo da Vinci the face that is perfectly oval has been considered the perfect feminine type. Some experts, however, have disagreed to the point of saying that while the oval is classic and is perfect symmetrically, it is not necessarily the most interesting type of face. We take no sides in the matter, but of one thing we're sure: Even if you happen to be the lucky, lucky type of girl who has that symmetrically perfect facial contour it doesn't mean that you can put on just any old kind of make-up and wear your hair in any old style and you're a raving beauty.

On the contrary, the girl who has been so blessed by nature right from the start should do all in her power to bring out the best in her classic features. It is true she can vary her coiffures more than her less fortunate sisters. She can, for instance, wear a center part which is not becoming to many. She can wear bangs – of almost any type. She can effect long hair-dos or upsweeps and find them all attractive in one way or another. In fact, many of Hollywood's outstanding stars are oval-faced which is why they can sport a different hair-do in every picture they make.

The coiffure you effect, however, should always be perfectly groomed. To what avail a classically shaped face if you're going to spoil it with a frizzy wave, bushes at the sides or straggling locks hanging down the nape of your neck? Choose the hair-do you like best and which you feel is your becoming to you and keep it always in perfect arrangement – sleek, lustrous and well-brushed.

The oval-faced girl needs only one basic foundation. She needn't combine dark and light tones to emphasize or de-emphasize the various areas of her face. If her skin is flawless, she can use a colorless foundation; otherwise a shade darker than her own skin.

Where jewelry's concerned, she can wear practically anything, depending on the type of costume she's wearing. Long earrings and button types are equally becoming; chokers or longer necklaces equally flattering. She can wear practically any type of neckline and any type of hat. But, as we said before, there are other things to consider besides the shape of her face. Just as with any other type, the oval-faced girl should choose cosmetic and clothes colors carefully, use good taste in her selection of jewelry. After all, no matter what shaped face one has, the color of the skin, hair and eyes must be taken into consideration if a girl would make the most of her beauty assets. So don't let down just because you've a perfect face according to the calipers.

Gall Bladder Help for Reader

By Mary Moore

". . . would you please send me some recipes for a gall bladder diet? . . ." was a request I received some time ago from Mrs. Ed. G. H. Since our Marianne was on a salt-free diet (her blood pressure is normal now, thank goodness) . . . I've heard from so many folks on salt-free, fat-free, sugar-free diets, that I began to wonder if there is anybody left on diets that are not free of something. We could stand a cost-free root just fine but no doctor ever prescribes it.

"I will give Mrs. Ed. G. H. a list of foods to be avoided on a low-fat, low-cholesterol diet and suggested menus for one day's meals. On the latter she can base her other meal plans, keeping in mind the foods to be avoided.

FOODS TO BE AVOIDED ON LOW-FAT (GALL BLADDER) DIET

Cream soups and fatty soups; all glandular meats such as liver, brains, kidney, sweetbreads, pork and other very fat meats, fat fish, fish roe, oysters; whole milk, cream, Cheddar, Swiss and all rich cheeses and cheese spreads, excessive butter and butter substitutes; egg yolks; hot breads, pancakes, waffles, coffee cakes, muffins, doughnuts. Any desserts made with cream and egg yolks; pies, frozen creams, ice cream, rich cakes and cookies; salad dressings, vegetable oils and suet and chicken fat, lard, shortening; rich gravies, olives, nuts.

FAT-FREE MENUS FOR ONE DAY

Dinner at Noon or Luncheon: Skim milk pea soup (without ham bone or fat salt pork); lean cold roast lamb, beef or chicken; aspic jelly; string beans, sliced tomato, canned pineapple; 1 slice whole wheat bread (with small pat margarine if allowed); hot beverage without cream but with sugar or skim milk.

Evening Meal or Supper: Grapefruit cocktail; 2 light cup; lean meat such as well-trimmed steak or broiled veal chop; baked potato (no butter), asparagus or B stalks; baked squash; fresh pear salad with small portion boiled dressing; lemon or lime or orange sherbet; 1 slice whole wheat bread; skim milk or hot beverage without cream.

NOTES ON FAT-FREE DIET

(4) Green and yellow vegetables are rich in Vitamin A and should be included either raw or cooked in minimum of water. (5) All fruits, raw, cooked, dried and canned are included and citrus fruits or tomatoes should be used daily. (6) Any raw or cooked fruit or vegetable salad with boiled or low-fat dressing or lemon, vinegar, or reducers' dressing. (7) For dessert fruits, tapioca, skim milk custards, junket, ice, sago and junket puddings made with skimmed milk and without yolks; fruit whips and gelatins, made with egg whites, all may be included in a low fat diet.

FIFTH OF SUPPLIES

The automobile industry seems in good shape and may get along without major difficulty until the fall. About two-thirds of the steel in the average automobile is imported.

The St. Lawrence seaway and power project, using large supplies of Canadian-produced reinforcing steel, is understood to be in satisfactory shape. Its heavy demand on reinforcing steel, however, will make it difficult for other construction work to draw from structural steel to reinforcing steel, at least in eastern Canada.

Neither the Canadian National nor Canadian Pacific Railways expect immediate difficulties.

INVENTORY OK

The General Motors diesel plant at London, Ont. — turning out better than one locomotive a day —reports its inventory all right for a short-term strike.

Whatever the strike's length, steel will soon cost more—already one United States company still producing has raised its price $5 a ton and any settlement will be at higher wage levels.

Effects will extend at least into next winter. Iron-ore shipments from American points, already below normal because of a succession of navigation difficulties through the Great Lakes waterway, now are stopped by the strike's duration and ore piles may be low six or seven months from now.

Not much relief is expected from Canadian ore because of the complicated nature of steel making.

At Atikokan, Ont., Steep Rock Mines, geared to produce a record-making 3,250,000 tons of iron ore this year—part of it for shipment to the United States—doesn't expect to get back production unless the strike is prolonged.

A spokesman said:

"We can ship to our customers' storage for the next month at least. After that it may be necessary to re-examine the situation."

LAY-OFF NOT EXPECTED

He didn't expect any lay-off of the 1,100 mines employees. If necessary they could be put on operations necessary to preparation of mines for production.

First direct strike results in Canada were reported from Hamilton, Marmora and Windsor in Ontario.

At Hamilton several score employees of Union Drawn Steel Company, a subsidiary of Republic Steel Corporation, left their jobs in sympathy with workers in the American parent plant.

At Marmora 285 workers at the Marmoraton Mining Company, a subsidiary of Bethlehem Steel Corporation, also went on sympathy strike. At Windsor it is predicted that navigation on the Detroit river may be cut by more than half because of reduced iron-ore shipments.

GMC STANDARD TRUCK HYDRA-MATIC

GMC's Standard Hydra-Matic is available in the light duty series with a GVW range from 5,000 pounds to 14,000 pounds offering four forward speeds in three quickly-selected ranges. Now, with Hydra-Matic, complete flexibility is attained through an extremely simple shifting technique.

The high range gives four automatically-shifted forward speeds for light traffic or open highway use. Medium range gives three automatic forward speeds for congested traffic or hilly terrain. Low range offers two automatic speeds forward to give maximum traction in snow, ice, off-the-road or steep hill operations. Low range may be combined with reverse to rock your truck out of sand, mud and snow—without going through any other gears.

To learn all the advantages of Hydra-Matic operation in lightduty trucks, see your nearby GMC dealer. He has complete information and will quickly answer all your questions.

GMC REVOLUTIONARY NEW POWERMATIC

Powermatic . . . a new principle for '56 in automatic transmission now available in GMC Trucks with a GVW range from 16,000 to 32,000 pounds. The heart of Powermatic is a four-element torque converter that triples engine torque . . . cushions starting shocks. Above 2000 engine r.p.m. the torque converter is locked out, giving the advantage of mechanical drive for maximum fuel economy and the finest engine braking.

But Powermatic does much. It provides six automatically-shifted mechanical gear ratios in three ranges for complete flexibility. A finger flip switches you from range to range without power loss. And with Powermatic you get the unique Hydraulic Retarder—safe braking for dangerous grades. Ask your GMC dealer about a Powermatic-equipped GMC Truck . . . now!

GMC HEAVY DUTY TRUCK HYDRA-MATIC

Heavy Duty Hydra-Matic is in the 40,000 pound GVW range. A variety of optional rear axles and reduction units available matches your GMC truck to the widest possible range of operating conditions. It differs from standard Hydra-Matic in providing heavier duty components and greater hydraulic pressure to enable it to move heavier loads. The gear selector quadrant is also slightly different. "Drive" (D) position gives control over the four forward speeds of the transmission, while "Forward" (F) control is a first-gear position for congested traffic and rocking out of heavy going. The unique "Hold" position overrides the automatic shift to hold your truck from upshifting. These advantages, and many more, spell savings for you . . . in time, money and driver fatigue. Ask your GMC dealer about Heavy Duty Hydra-Matic!

SENIOR "A"

The die has been cast.

The Eastern Ontario Senior Hockey League has been elevated to "A" status by edict of the parent Ontario Hockey Association.

That body, apparently well-lobbied, pronounced the EOCL was "too strong to operate in senior "B" ranks," and accordingly lacked it up to "A" rating.

Which carries with it unlimited "imports," the honor of playing off with the Western Ontario "A" champions and going on in quest of Allan Cup glory.

All of which is part of a two-year-old Cream of Whitby's Wren Blair, and more recently Cornwall's Ray Milrun came true.

The Canadian Press story of the OHA meeting held recently in Peterborough stated that the loop would consist of Whitby, Kingston, Orillia, Pembroke and Cornwall.

It added, "Belleville will play in the new senior "A" schedule but will revert to "B" status for post-schedule playoffs."

According to Drury Denyes and Jim Ward who represented Belleville, this city's club did not commit itself to joining the "A" loop while "Orillia seemed interested." It was intimated that Pembroke did not actually file entry, it probably hinging on the answer to their queried subsidy from the Northern Ontario Hockey Association.

Writing this as it were from a hospital bed, we have not had the opportunity of contacting Belleville senior hockey officials.

However, lets face some facts.

Regardless of "A" or "B", Belleville needs at least ten hockey players if it is to produce a winning or near-winning club next season. And we mean hockey players, not broken down refugees from other senior clubs who are out to make an easy buck.

And assuming, we repeat, assuming Belleville as enters as a "B" club in the new senior "A" setup, the players they get must be comparable to those with which the other clubs will be stacked.

Still on this supposition, Belleville as a senior "B" club would be allowed only four imports in the "B" playoffs. Where would the rest of the players come from if the number of signed players is restricted to say 18?

And would this city's entry as a "B" club in senior "A" merely be a stepping-stone for win-points for the other clubs?

This city, like many others, has learned through experience that a hockey-wise fandom will not support a consistently losing team. . . .

The fact that Belleville, if it enters a "B" club in the new setup will go into the "B" playoffs, won't send the fans flocking through the turnstiles, if the team has its hockey block knocked off consistently while playing out the the "A" schedule.

This reporter, with other press and radio characters, heard the parroted cryout statements at the Cornwall confab, "We can expect an "A" championship" — and got this—

The Allan Cups the first year of operation in "A" it will take three or four years to build up teams comparable to those in the western part of the province."

Pack that in the dottle of your pipe — then throw it away.

Whitby's Blair is sanbitious. He did a tremendous job in building the Whitby Dunlops, a club, we believe, to be the best team ever to win a provincial senior "B" title.

And, we believe, he will attempt as tremendous a job next season to build a club that will gun for the senior "A" crown.

Cornwall and Kingston, especially the "Limestones," will have to rebuild — but good. Pembroke, if it enters, should have no difficulty in icing a powerful "A" aggregation. Orillia, again if it enters, will start from the ground up. The Pontiacs, we are told, were one of the weaker senior "B" clubs last year.

And providing Orillia and Pembroke enter the new senior "A" league, there arises the important question of transportation. After all it is only a 600-mile jump from Pembroke to Orillia. This might cause a revision of an agreement over the recorded item in the green books recorded and carried at Cornwall, that "each club pay 10 percent of its gross take into a pool during the schedule — and 12½ percent in playoffs, 5 percent of which will go to the OHA as required by senior "A" regulations."

PEMBROKE OUT

A Canadian Press dispatch received here late yesterday afternoon verified the fact that Pembroke will not enter the new OHA senior "A" series next season. The article quotes the Ontario Hockey Association and adds that according to OHA business manager Bill Hanley, Pembroke probably will continue in the NOHA Senior "A" league.

This leaves Whitby, Kingston and Cornwall definitely in with Orillia a possible entry. This department doubts that Orillia will participate.

Word has come through the local grapevine concerning Belleville's intentions. According to a well-informed Belleville man, this city will not enter the league next winter with a senior "B" team. If Belleville enters the league at all it will be as a full fledged Senior "A" team, says the report.

Rumors are flying fast and thick. It could be that we'll have to wait until the hockey season is here before the entire matter is cleared up.

Milwaukee Back in First Spot After Beating Redlegs; Wilson of Sox Having Best Year

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Milwaukee Braves may be sitting in the driver's seat in the game of musical chairs the National League is staging in the guise of a pennant race.

Braves, who should stand to benefit from a 19-game home stand opening today, slammed back into first place Tuesday as Lew Burdette laughed off Cincinnati's robust Redlegs with a five-hitter for a 7-0 decision. It gave Milwaukee a split of the two-game set at Crosley while cutting Redlegs from their less-than-2½-hour stay in the lead and reestablishing Braves' five-percentage-point edge.

The only thing that doesn't make Milwaukee's home stand a sure-fire bet for bolstering that slim lead is the fact Braves won only five of 15 in their last stay at County Stadium—a slump that dropped them from first.

They left home under manager Charlie Grim. Now they're back from a 16-7 road tour under manager Fred Haney.

CARDS LOSE AGAIN

In the only other National League games, New York's Giants handed fourth-place St. Louis its fifth defeat in 26 games, 7-4, and Pittsburgh beat Philadelphia 5-3 on a two-run pinch homer by Bob Skinner in the 10th inning. Giants had wrapped up a 7-2 victory in the completion of a May 13 suspended game.

Burdette walked only one and struck out two while gaining his eighth victory, becoming the second pitcher to whitewash the homer-happy Redlegs. Braves iced the game in the fifth with three runs off loser Jim Lonborg's homer.

Southpaw Jim Davis on his third, keeping Cardinals off stride with his knuckler before retiring in the eighth. Wilmer Mizell lost his sixth as St. Louis, now only a game above .500, made five errors in his four innings.

Johnny O'Brien, an infielder until last week, gained the victory for Pirates after 2 1-3 innings of hitless relief. O'Brien has to permit a hit in his total of 3 1-3 innings as a major league pitcher.

FLIN FLON, Man. (CP) — A home-made fishing rod and reel and a battered line proved to be the right combination for Sam Holawachuk, whose 34-pound lake trout won him first prize and a 1956 car in the sixth-annual Flin Flon trout festival. The Flin Flon taxi driver used a flat silver and brass spoon and had 400 feet of steel line out at the time of the catch.

O'Connor, Hutton Meet in Main Bout Here Friday Night

Dick Hutton and his $1,000 bill will run into their toughest fight in some time at Belleville's Memorial Arena Friday when Patrick O'Connor will attempt to part the long-time buddies.

For some time now Mr. Hutton has waved his blue, pink or whatever color a $1,000 bill happens to be in front of his opponents. Anyone who can pig the big fellow's shoulders inside of twenty minutes walks off with the extra money. As yet no one has defeated Hutton in the allotted time.

O'Connor met and defeated Dick in a Toronto bout several weeks ago but it took him something like 21 minutes and 43 seconds. He will be out to better that mark Friday but Hutton says he will get revenge.

Both of these heavyweights can count their losses on the fingers of one hand but somebody will have to give a little attention to the second pair around 11.00 p.m. Friday.

The Brunetti brothers, Joe and Guy, will return to tangle with another pair of toughies in the warmup bout, a tag-team affair. Mark Lewin will team up with Jan Golch in an attempt to halt the Brunetti boys. Anyone who has not seen Guy and Joe in action should take in these boys. They're on their way to the Canadian tag-team title.

The popular Billy Stack makes his seasonal debut in the opener, clashing with Bobby Jan on the local scene, Roberti Pico. Action gets under way at 8.00 p.m.

3-Man Screening Committee Studies Eight Multi-Million Dollar Bids For Detroit Tigers

DETROIT (AP) — A three-man screening committee today had under study eight multi-million dollar bids for the Detroit Tigers' American League franchise.

They appeared a better-than-even choice that Walter O. (Spike) Briggs, the club's president since 1927, would negate with any new syndication in some respective capacity.

Thomas Lemmond Tuesday that eight syndicates formally submitted bids for the club and Briggs Stadium. Mose Harry M. Stevens, secretary and business manager, and Charles Wolfe, treasurer, will examine the bids.

Within two weeks they are expected to present to the American League president. William Harridge, a recommendation. Ford Frick the names of those the committee considers "top contenders."

BY END OF MONTH

Briggs said he will ask approval of the league and the commissioner by early July possible conclusion." Provided approval is given Tiger will announce by the end of the month the group that will assume control about Oct. 1.

The 66-year-old president, who with his sisters inherited control of the club in 1935, said five of the eight groups have asked him and Slaton to stay on. He did not say which ones.

"I definitely want to stay in baseball," Briggs said, "but most of all I want it to be Detroit baseball."

Although Briggs said he is not at liberty to disclose the amounts offered, local sources placed the higher bids in the neighborhood of $5,000,000.

THOSE WHO BID

These were the bidders:

Oscar L. Olson, D. Lyle Fitzsimons and Ralph Seward — the only all-Detroit syndicate, made up mainly of directors of the Detroit Lions football team. Lions wanted to bid but were barred by National Football League rules.

George Storer of Chicago and Miami, Charles O. Finley of Gary, Ind., and Detroit, both in radio and television executive. Finley is an Indiana sportsman with a Chicago brokerage office.

Bill Veeck, Gerald Hoffberger and other Baltimore, New York and Detroit—Veeck, colorful executive who once owned Cleveland and the old St. Louis Browns is the only bidder with major league experience. His main financial backing comes from Hoffberger, Baltimore brewery executive, and John S. Hilson, a New York banker.

Jack Kent Cooke and others of Toronto—Cooke, a publisher and radio executive, owns Toronto Maple Leafs in the International League.

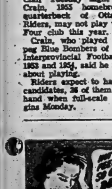
J. W. Mortell, Jr., and others of Jackson, Mich.—an industrialist. Mortell has George Halas of Chicago Bears among others in his syndicate.

EXCLUDING GABLE

Robert Goldstein and others of Los Angeles — California movie moguls — a syndicate including actor Clark Gable and director Raoul Walsh.

Fred Knorr of Detroit, John Fetzer of Kalamazoo and others—radio station owners with a large following in Michigan.

Harold Grass of Lansing — another radio and television executive, president of the Gross Telecasting Company of Lansing.



Observers close to the club believe the Briggs-Finley group and Lions' directors have the inside track with Veeck's syndicate—which is reported to have outbitted the highest bid—running a close third.

CRAIN MAY NOT PLAY

OTTAWA (CP)' — Coach Frank Clair Tuesday night said Geoff Crain, 1955 Ottawa reserve quarterback of Ottawa Rough Riders, may not play with the Big Four club this year.

Crain, who played with Winnipeg Blue Bombers of the Western Interprovincial Football Union in 1953 and 1954, said he is undecided about playing.

Riders expect to use about 36 candidates, of them imports, on hand when fall-scale training begins Monday.

Players Pleased With TV Deal

NEW YORK (AP) — Major league baseball players, pleased with the $3,200,000-a-year radio-TV deal completed by commissioner Ford Frick for the world series-all star game right, may cash a monthly retirement check of $400, their lawyer said Tuesday.

J. Norman Lewis, counsel for the players' association, interpreted that the present monthly payments of $50 to $100 to players reaching the age of 50, "unquestionably will be doubled" and added "they may go as high as $400 a month, depending upon where the retirement age is set."

"If a 10-year man would boost his retirement age to 60, he could probably get $400 or more a month and, if the retirement age is 65, the amount might be closer to $500 a month."

The new five-year contract was signed with NBC Monday. The old contract, a six-year pact which expires after the 1958 world series brought $1,150,000 a year.

THREE SUSPENDED

DETROIT (AP)—A trainer, an assistant and a groom have been suspended for 60 days each at Detroit's Park race track for the doping of a horse, King Ruff.

The track's stewards took the action Monday against Trainer John H. Dyer of Mount Clemens, his assistant, Bert Mitchell of Detroit and groom Harry Darby. It was discovered that King Ruff, winner of a seventh race at Hazel Park June 25, was dosed with procaine, a prohibited drug.

Brockville Crew Eliminated In First Heat of Challenge Cup by Strong Thames Club

HENLEY - ON - THAMES, Eng. (CP)—Canada's lone entry in the Royal Henley Regatta was eliminated today in the first heat of the Thames Challenge Cup, a 33-year competition.

The Brockville eight was beaten two-lengths of a length by a heavier, more experienced English crew from the Thames Rowing Club. The winners took the lead at the half-mile post in the race over the one-mile, 320-yard course.

The time was seven minutes, 22 seconds compared with the course record of 6:58 set by the English Leander Club in 1951.

The result was a disappointment to the Canadians, some of whom had been waiting five years for the trip to the Elizabethan market town in Oxfordshire. Rooted (Twink) Fodey, 24-year-old Brockville veterinarian, who stroked after the race and some of the others moved off by themselves to hide their disappointment.

TOOK EARLY LEAD

Brockville, Canada's first entry in the Thames cup event, broke smoothly and in the first 30 strokes forged about three feet ahead of the big Thames crew which averaged a one seven pounds a man heavier than the Canadians. Brockville struck at 37 strokes a minute against 34 for the home crew.

The Canadian team later will compete in the Grand Challenge Cup.

A slight headwind sweeping over the Thames favored the heavier Englishmen.

Before the race, coach Ralph Gifford said his team, which used a borrowed boat, was "in top shape."

Crowds thronging the placid Thames River cheered the Canadians as they approached the finish. Shouts of "Well rowed, Brockville" echoed across the water.

George Fulford, former Liberal member of Parliament for Leeds, was among the group of Brockville supporters watching the race.

The team didn't bring its own boat because it will need it for the Canadian Olympic Games trials at Port Dalhousie, Ont., July 24 and wouldn't have time to ship it back to Canada.

Gifford said the borrowed boat "is not the newest as our own shell, but the boys like it."

The regatta, with many regard as the world's foremost, got under way this morning with 32 crews competing.

ONLY TWO AT A TIME

At Henley only two competitors race at a time, each in a perfectly straight mile and 320 yards against a current which may run two or three miles an hour. Rooms 40 feet apart mark the course, and a spectator at every event is whether someone will hit them.

The United States is represented by two lightweight crews from Princeton University and Kent School. Their coaches were invited to the Canadian trial eights on the Thames Tuesday.

The Brockville club is also entered in the Wyfold Challenge Cup competition for four-oared crews.

Nashua Wears Blinkers For First Time

NEW YORK (AP) — Nashua, wearing blinkers for the first time in a year and a half, puts his reputation on the line again today in the $75,000-added Suburban Handicap at Belmont Park. Nine opponents were out in hopes of handing Mr. Millions his third straight defeat.

The 1¼-mile Suburban is one of racing's great handicaps and a victory for Nashua under 126 pounds would atone considerably for his defeats in the Metropolitan Mile and Carter Handicaps. The last time Nashua wore blinkers was Feb. 21, 1955, at Hialeah in his first start as a three-year-old.

With 10 starters the Suburban would gross $84,500, and the winner's share is $57,400. Mrs. Ed ward E. Robbins' Midafternoon, 117, seems to stand the best chance of downing Nashua, the Leslie B. Combs IV syndicate colt who is the world's greatest money winner. Midafternoon beat Nashua in the Metropolitan Mile, then won the Massachusetts Handicap.

It marks the first time Canada has been represented in the Thames and Wyfold events. There are no Canadian entries in the Grand Challenge Cup, top event at Henley.

There are no Russians in the competition this year, and there is speculation as to why they are absent. One theory is they don't want to show what they have for the Olympics.

Field of 142 Ready to Play In Canadian Open

MONTREAL (CP) — The Beaconsfield Club course, where a field of 142 sets out Thursday on the first round of the $15,000 Canadian open golf championship is a 6,685-yard layout—and one which can be very tricky indeed.

Par for each nine is 36, and home club pro Bill Kerr said Tuesday that 272 for the 72-hole tournament, which ends Sunday, should be good enough to take the $3,000 top prize.

Arnold Palmer of Latrobe, Pa., who won the Open at Toronto's Weston last year, figured between 276 and 278, although he said he doubted if he could run off with the title two years in a row. Gordie Brydson, Toronto Mississauga veteran, said the winning score would be in high as 277.

Only three former winners of the Canadian Open are gunning for it this year. All won the title in the last three years—Palmer in 1955, Bill Fletcher of Montreal in 1954, and Dave Douglas of Newark, Del., in 1953.

But the chase is still wide open with such contenders from south of the border as Dow Littler, Doug Ford and Ted Kroll.

Kipp and Harris Of Montreal May Move Up Soon

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Fred Kipp and Billy Harris, Montreal Royals star top pitchers, show up best when the boss is watching.

Which explains why both are being followed closely by the parent Brooklyn Dodgers, and Tuesday night Brook manager Walt Alston sent coaches Billy Herman and Joe Becker to watch the pair in action.

Between them they allowed the hapless Buffalo Bisons one run in a doubleheader and the Brook coaches must have left feeling they could call on either at any time.

Harris, 180 - pound righthander, coaled Bisons 11-1 in the seven - inning opener, allowing only on walk and seven hits. He struck out two.

Kipp pitched the five-foot-10 native of Dorchester, N.B., with a 10-run bulge before he lost his shutout on an unearned run.

The win boosted his record to 8-4.

Kipp, a southpaw, spinned a five - hitter in the nine - inning nightcap for a 10-2 shutout to collect his 12th victory as against only three losses.

Royals smashed out 18 hits in the second game, including five straight singles by outfielder George Shuba.

The twin win, combined with a 3 - 2 decision Toronto received over Rochester, lengthened Royals' first-place lead to 3½ games over Red Wings.

Toronto's Bill Fischer held Wings to a single to give Maple Leafs their fourth straight victory. He struck out half a dozen Wings.

Johnny MacIntosh, ace of the Rochester staff, was charged with the loss. He had to leave with one out in the eighth when his arm stiffened.

In the only other action, Miami Marlins clipped Richmond Virginians 11-0 behind Dick Farrell's seven-hitter. Bob Bowman had a big night, driving home five runs, three on a homer. The game was fairly close until Marlins sent seven runs across the plate in the ninth.

The Columbus - Havana game was postponed because of rain.

Peter Thomson Plays Superb Golf in British Open Play

HOYLAKE, England (CP)—Australia's Peter Thomson, playing like the champion he is, led the 96-man field into the British open golf tournament today, having tied for the lead in the 36 holes of qualifying play with a two-under-par 140.

An afternoon 69 at nearby Wallasey Tuesday followed his par 71 on Hoylake's championship course Monday enabled Thomson to tie Gary Player, the 20-year-old South African who had broken Hoylake's competitive record with a 68 in Monday's opening round but slipped to 72 on the easier Wallasey course.

It will be Hoylake all the way for the trimmed-down field in the 72 holes of championship play. Wallasey was used for half the qualifying play to accommodate the 330-man field.

With scores of 152 or under needed to make the championship roster, both Canadian golfers made it with ease. Toronto's Al Balding shot a commendable par round over the tough Hoylake course Tuesday for a 76—140. Stan Leonard of Vancouver and Lachute, Que., not nicely under the wire at 76-76—148.

ONE STROKE AHEAD

Thomson, bidding for his third straight Open, and the young South African were one stroke ahead of four players, including England's Henry Cotton, a three-time champion, and Flory van Donck of Belgium. Two Britons and another Australian were the only others ahead of Balding.

Burly Mike Souchak of Berwick, Pa., raked in $6,081 only in Thomson in the pre-tournament betting, pulled his game together at Wallasey Tuesday after a disastrous opening 78 with a three-under-par 68 that brought him well within qualifying range.

South Africa's Bobby Locke, Ireland's Joe Carr and Argentina's Antonio Cerda were bracketed at 147. Two prominent Americans, Frank Stranahan and Gene Sarazen, barely made it at 152.

The casualty list included six of the 10-man American contingent as well as Britain's Max Faulkner the 1851 champion, British amateur champion John Beharrell, Johnny Fallon and Frank Jowle, the Britons who finished second and third in last year's Open, and two other members of the last British Ryder Cup team, Arthur Lees and Eric Brown.

Press Conference Program To Make Bow at Washington

By CHARLES MERCER

NEW YORK (AP)—There was a time when a national leader expressed his views to a group of reporters—who passed his views along to the country.

While this method of making news remains unchanged, and probably never will change as long as a reporter can corner a politician in a corridor, many persons in public life don't mind having television cameras turned on their loquations.

There are several successful TV programs based on the willingness of politicians and national leaders to be questioned by a panel of reporters before the home viewers. But none compares exactly to the big press conference format which will be presented by Democratic Presidential candidate Adlai Stevenson over the CBS-TV network at 10:30 p.m. EDT, Thursday.

Each week reporters drawn from a pool of more than 200, will question some person in the news at the moment. The person under questioning will be "hot news"—so hot that at the writing Miss Rountree is unwilling to name her first guest.

Stevenson's appearance will be sponsored by Alcoa and Reynolds Metals Co. Miss Rountree will be moderator.

Now comes Martha Rountree, a blonde and attractive young woman who has a new regular weekly program called Press Conference. Her opening will be from Washington tonight over NBC-TV at 8, EDT.

Each week reporters drawn from a pool of more than 200, will question some person in the news at the moment. The person under questioning will be "hot news"—so hot that at the writing Miss Rountree is unwilling to name her first guest.

Miss Rountree is no stranger to the television screen. She has been a familiar face on CBS-TV's Face the Nation, a network public affairs program.

Play Better Golf

by Tommy Armour

As we take up the study of iron play, let's start by observing the basic difference between wood and iron shots. There is no fundamental difference in the swing. The real difference is the point in the swing arc at which the club head makes contact with the ball. We have seen that in the drive and other wood shots the ball is played pretty far forward. It is hit as the club head is beginning to rise. In an iron shot the club head should still be moving downward at the moment of contact with the ball. Thus iron shots must be played farther back than woods, and they require positioning of the hands ahead of the ball at address.

LIST 134

BRANTFORD (CP)—A field of 134 is listed for the Brantford Golf and Country Club's annual ladies' invitation tournament here Thursday.

BEATS DAVIS

HALIFAX (CP)—Richard (Kid) Howard of Halifax won an unanimous decision over Teddy (Red Top) Davis of Lacesville, N.S., in a 10-round boxing match here Tuesday night.

Howard, Canadian lightweight champion, weighed in at 139 for the non-title fight, giving away three pounds to the taller Davis.

Angelenos Out to Prove Town Will Support a Live Theatre

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Who says Los Angeles is a bum show town?

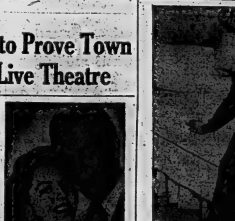
After a winter that saw most of the local legit theatres dark, live shows are popping all over town. What's more, audiences are just as lively. They're out to prove that Angeleons will support a live theatre.

Backbone of the spring and summer season is the civic light opera at the Philharmonic Auditorium. Business is booming. A first-class revival of the crackling Rosalinda and a so-so Broadway hit, Silk Stockings, have drawn over 360,000 weekly, near capacity. That's more money than musicals earn in New York.

Monday night saw the opening of another smash, Nanua Yankee with Bobby Clark as an added asset. The Girl Friend comes in next.

BORGE A SELL-OUT

Victor Borge did sell-out business at the outdoor Greek Theatre, drawing a staggering $85,000 with his one - man show. Now Harry Belafonte is pulling in the crowds, and he'll be followed by The Mill and Mudlark Princess.



It appears that Los Angeles will support the legit—in the summertime, at least.

The third Rodgers and Hammerstein stage classic has reached the screen and like the previous two, it's a gilty.

Twentieth-Fox went all-out in a lavish production of The King and I and the result is a tasteful rendition. The dubbing job is remarkable, and Yul Brynner (MGM) only the slings but all the dialogue had to be recorded. Something went awry in the sound system during filming.

Only South Pacific remains to be filmed of the R and H hits, and they'll probably get around to version of their minor Allegro, it in another year or two. There Me and Juliet and Pipe Dream.

has been no mention of screen and they'll probably get around to

Your Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes, and find by your outlook is, according to the stars.

For Thursday, July 5, 1956

March 21 to April 20 (Aries) — Lay all your hopes be healthy, early ones, and your efforts match. This day asks your very best in every way, for which it'll repay in big dividends later. April 21 to May 21 (Taurus) — Active aspects tend to make this day either indecisive or in some instances dull. But you can always get more pep and vigor into anything you do, and today favors your personality.

May 22 to June 21 (Gemini) — Generally favorable configurations. It be advised to be thoughtful about little things connected with family and associates, careful in transactions, investing. Build this day up.

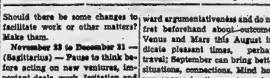
June 22 to July 23 (Cancer) — Use your imagination and sympathies wisely, don't be led astray, even by "little" things. Interest in public welfare can be added by you. Control emotions.

July 24 to August 21 (Leo) — Lightly auspicious, because some restrictions are indicated. In particular be mindful of associations and your own habits. A sound program will pay off.

August 24 to September 22 — (Virgo) — You may be able to do more with this day than you think. But be careful not to override the opinions or suggestions of others. Day will need push and get-up.

September 24 to October 23 — (Libra) — If you take things in proper order and put due effort back of your activities, you need not worry about results of endeavors. Maintain strong faith.

October 24 to November 22 — (Scorpio) — Mind everything! How are you running your affairs? What is your attitude? Should there be some changes to facilitate work or other matters? Make them.



November 23 to December 21 — (Sagittarius) — Pause to think before acting on new ventures, important deals, work. Irritation and impulsiveness could react adversely. Good results if you act calmly, accurately.

December 22 to January 20 — (Capricorn) — Note Sagittarius—similar indications. Don't do the unnecessary when the necessary awaits. Be concise but not abrupt. Think, then talk and act, and with due confidence.

January 21 to February 19 — (Aquarius) — This day's influences are on the mild side. So you supply the impetus and ideas that will build, create more interest, and generally put the day into the winning class.

February 20 to March 20 — (Pisces) — There is no more persuasive person than a smiling, doing-his-best Pisces. Your plate at Neptune now urges go — get — it — iveness, vigor, faith, and tact. You born today: Cancer is represented characterwise by loyalty, patriotism and love of family. You can be persuasive and very successful if you curb a tendency toward argumentativeness and do not fret beforehand about outcomes. Venus and Mars this August indicate pleasant times, perhaps travel; September can bring better situations, connections. Mind how you approach others; your best will win easily. A cantankerous or moody manner will create ill feeling. Be conscientious about your responsibilities. Birthdate of: P. T. Barnum; famed showman; Admiral David G. Farragut (Civil War).

Moscow Bosses Trying to Head Off Criticism

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Observers here say Moscow's top Communist command is busy trying to head off any more violent criticism among Red leaders of their failure to overthrow Joseph Stalin or at least curb his excesses.

How well they succeed may well determine the degree of success they have in facing the biggest crisis to shake the Moscow-directed Communist movement during its 40-year history.

Responding to criticisms by Western party chiefs of the anti-Stalin campaign Communist party boss Nikita Khrushchev said at last February, the party's central committee sought to end such attacks in a 6,000-word statement issued Monday.

As read by specialists here, its over-all purpose was to say to the Communist faithful in Russia, in the satellite countries and in non-Communist lands that the line has come to stop arguing and get on with the job of spreading communism.

COULD BE TOUGH

If such men as Palmiro Togliatti in Italy, Maurice Thorez in France and others now — Russian Communist officials refuse to accept this directive from Moscow, Khrushchev's blast will be used against a tough problem.

Togliatti's attitude was to stick by his contention that the present Kremlin leaders were merely trying to "liquidate" the Stalin myth, and that there should be more independence for non-Russian Communists.

The view here is that if men like Togliatti insist on it, Kremlin explanation and are silenced, they will face difficulty with their followers because the committee statement does not seem to answer adequately the criticisms already raised.

British Troops Save Villages From Forest Fire

NICOSIA (Reuters) — British troops today dropped their battle against terrorists to pitch in to help save two west Cyprus villages from the biggest forest fire the island has ever known.

Over 1,000 British troops were reported battling flames near the area where 21 of their comrades died two weeks ago in a forest fire attributed to terrorists they were attempting to trap.

The troops relieved hundreds of exhausted Cypriots who had been fighting the flames since Monday. The filthy region was veiled in smoke that could be seen 30 miles away. Fire fighters estimated the blaze covered a 25-square-mile area.

Terrorism flickered in the port of Limassol, however, when a bomb today entered a coffeeshop and shot dead the Greek Cypriot proprietor.

Kingston Jaycees Urge Additional Help for Blind

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Junior Chamber of Commerce of Canada, its president already elected by acclamation, today let it elect eight vice-presidents at the final session of its annual convention here.

Nine Jaycees from across Canada have been nominated to fill the posts. Candidates include Ken Keyes, 25, Kingston and Jack O'Rourke, 33, Chicoutimi, Que.

G. L. Filippelli of Trail, B.C., chosen president Tuesday night. But he was not happy about his acclamation victory—an example, he said, of the junior chamber's weak leadership training program.

A proposal from the Kingston chamber called for legislation making available a guiding allowance, over and above present means, for all adult blind persons in Canada. It said there "is a definite need for further improved legislation."

Under existing legislation, blind persons who have regained part of their blindness allowance in favor of cheap surgery for the same amount. The Kingston resolution suggested that old age and blindness were a double handicap and that blind persons could set aside some savings if given a "guiding allowance."

MOTHER SENTENCED

VANCOUVER (CP)—Mrs. Catherine Pilling, 29-year-old mother of two children, was sentenced Tuesday to seven years in Kingston penitentiary for armed robbery in the Oct. 26, 1955, holdup of a Canadian Bank of Commerce branch in which $26,000 was stolen. She was charged with Joe Gordon, 34, now under sentence of death for the Dec. 7 slaying of constable Gordon Sinclair. Another man is sought.

Father Frees Daughter From Lion's Mouth

MUSKEGON, Mich. (AP) — A performing night club lion, chained in its owner's backyard apparently for the night, dragged a 2½-year-old girl by the head with its jaws today with a powerful snap.

The little girl's father freed her by ramming his knee and arm between the jaws of the 270-pound animal.

The child, Beatrice Ann Harris, suffered several depressed skull fractures. She was rushed by ambulance with police escort 40 miles from Muskegon to a Grand Rapids hospital where she died.

Her father, Gerald Harris of Belding, Mich., also was taken to hospital for shock.

Muskegon County Deputy Sheriff Joseph Bugarbaker said the lion was being persuaded to perform while chained when the little girl wandered up for a closer look.

George DeNio, the animal's owner, had been told to have the lion and a cub confined in their travelling cases pending further investigation.

Post Office Practice Comes Under Heavy Fire

OTTAWA (CP)—A post office practice carried on since Confederation came under sharp opposition attack in the Commons Tuesday as the government sought to change the Post Office Act to make it legal.

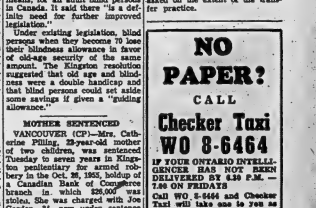
The opposition, claiming it could be used for patronage purposes, proposed that it be made legal but only up to a certain point. Any contracts made with the awarding of mail-carrying contracts, which are for a maximum four years. If the contract-holder dies or drops the contract, the government has been transferring it to another person.

Postmaster - General Lapointe said the post office has a government lawyer noted that the practice was not sanctioned by law. The bill before the Commons would write it into legislation.

But members of all three opposition parties criticized the fact that once a contract was transferred the new holder could have it renewed repeatedly without the mail-carrying job being put once opened for competitive bids.

CHIEF EDGE OF WEDGE

Gage W. Montgomery (PC—Victoria-Carleton) said the bill is "the thin edge of the wedge by which the tender system may disappear."



He and D. R. Michener (PC—Toronto St. Paul's) moved an amendment which would permit contracts to be transferred, but required that they be thrown open to tender at the end of the four-year term expired.

Mr. Lapointe said he could not accept the amendment.

He said that in most cases another person would not accept a contract unless he had the right of having the contract renewed without being opened for bids after a brief period. If no one could be found to accept the contract, then the post office had to make costly arrangements with a transferred contract, then bids for it could and should be called.

Mr. Lapointe agreed to opposition members' request that the bill be held over but be postponed while he sought information they asked on the extent of the transfer practice.

CARINTHIA ARRIVES

MONTREAL (CP)—The 22,000-ton liner Carinthia, carrying more than 800 passengers, completed her maiden voyage Tuesday. She was launched a Clydebank last December by Princess Margaret.

Russia Rejects Western Appeal On Disarmament

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) Russia Tuesday rejected a Western appeal to join in a new start on disarmament. The Soviets proposed instead that the world agree on a treaty renouncing the use of nuclear weapons and any other force in settling disputes.

Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko put the Russian plan before the 12-member UN disarmament commission at the end of an hour-long speech blasting the Western position on disarmament and President Eisenhower's plan for aerial inspections.

Western sources indicated the Gromyko resolution had little prospect of getting anywhere.

The commission does not sit today, U.S. Independence Day, and Health Minister Paul Martin of Canada will be the first speaker Thursday. He said Tuesday he will deal with some of the points raised by Gromyko as well as make Canada's general statement on the disarmament question.

"Gromyko's declaration does not represent a new substance," Martin said. "It is a restatement of former positions taken by the Soviet Union and while I prefer to deal with it in detail, as I will on Thursday, it can now be said that if the Soviet Union was prepared to accept the kind of constructive which Canada and other countries have been urging, its purposes would have been met."

Science Shrinks Piles
New Way Without Surgery
Finds Healing Substance That Does Both—
Relieves Pain—Shrinks Hemorrhoids

Toronto, Ont. (Special)—For the first time science has found a new healing substance with the astonishing ability to shrink hemorrhoids and to relieve pain. Thousands have been relieved—without resort to surgery.

In case hemorrhoid case after another, "very striking improvement" was reported and verified by doctors' observations.

Pain was relieved promptly. And, while gently relieving pain, actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most amazing of all—this improvement was maintained in cases where doctors' observations were continued over a period of many months!

In fact, results were so thorough that sufferers were able to make such astonishing statements as "Piles have ceased to be a problem!" And among these sufferers were a very wide variety of hemorrhoid conditions, some of 10 to 20 years' standing.

All this, without the use of narcotics, anesthetics or astringents of any kind. The secret is a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne®)—the discovery of a famous scientific institute. Already, Bio-Dyne is in wide use for healing injured tissue on all parts of the body.

This new healing substance is offered in suppository or ointment form called Preparation H®. Ask for individually sealed convenient Preparation H suppositories or Preparation H ointment with special applicator. Preparation H is sold at all drug stores. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.

Seven Bewildered Children Watch Parents Arrested

SUDBURY (CP)—Seven bewildered children in new shoes and clothing were, when the Children's aid society shelter here early today while their parents were being questioned about the brutal killing of 78-year-old William Snider.

Mr. and Mrs. Ell Guay have been charged with murder in the slaying of Snider who, police said, died under crushing blows that broke 13 of his ribs. He was found in his shack near the edge of the Spanish River.

Three couple and their children, ranging in age from one to 11, were picked up six miles south of North Bay early Wednesday night. Guay, a powerful 230-pound bushworker and one-time Sudbury taxi driver, offered no resistance.

Chief Gerry Regan of Parris Township police stood in the hall car with gun drawn. Several of the children broke into screams when they saw their mother and father handcuffed.

The couple were questioned until 3 a.m. by Inspector Jack Craig of the criminal investigation branch, Toronto, who arrived to take charge of the case. Both are reported to have made state ments.

The couple were arrested when found parked on a dirt concession in a car filled with dishes, clothes and their children.

Guay was quoted as saying he was arrested: "Okay, okay. I know what's going on. I have been down here looking for work."

Snider was discovered by a census taker visiting the lonely shack.

Since then police have taken into custody as material witnesses Guay's sister, Florence, and Joseph Dupuis, 40.

Police said Snider may have been beaten unconscious with a woman's shoe. Robbery was thought to have been the motive.

Guay had $65 on his person when arrested, police said.

They said they believe Snider was killed for about $300 obtained recently from a mining company for some of his land. He had lived the life of a hermit.

Snider's wallet, found 300 yards from the shack, contained only personal papers.

Farther north, in the resort areas, there will be some sunshine and afternoon temperatures will climb into the low 70s. North of Lake Superior cloud will gradually spread eastward into the James Bay and Timmins areas. Scattered showers or where a few scattered showers or thunderstorms may be expected for Friday.

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Egypt's Middle East news agency said today Jordan's troops moved south at midnight Wednesday to move to the frontier separating Jordan and Israel.

A Jordan army representative charged Wednesday that Israeli troops were massing near the demarcation line.

An Israeli foreign ministry spokesman in Jerusalem Wednesday night denied the Jordan charge, terming it "pure fabrication."

The Middle East news agency said the Israeli attack on the Israeli troop concentrations near the Jerusalem area and along the demarcation line.

The Arab Middle East news agency said Jordan's King Hussein received word about the alleged troop movements from Maj.-Gen. E. L. M. Burns, chief United Nations truce commissioner.

However, a spokesman at UN truce headquarters in Jerusalem said that the organization "has no information" on Israeli troop concentrations in the area.

The spokesman, Graham Lucas, also denied Arab reports stirred to Gen. Burns, claiming he met Sunday with Cairo because of the Israel-Jordan situation.

"The contrary is true," Lucas said. "Gen. Burns called him to turn to his Jerusalem headquarters. He originally was scheduled to have returned yesterday morning but returned in the evening."

Burns left Cairo after two days of talks with Egyptian leaders on truce measures along the Egypt-Israel line.

WARN ARAB NATIONS

Informants said King Hussein had relayed the charges of Israeli troop movements to representatives of Britain, the United States and France who are pledged to keep the peace in areas bordering between Israel and her Arab neighbors.

The informants said Hussein also passed the word on to diplomatic representatives of Egypt, Syria, Lebanon and Saudi Arabia.

The Lebanon government has called on the United Nations and Arab neighbors. Her premier, Abdullah Yafi, on a visit to Cairo, told reporters his country would stand with her Arab neighbors in case Israel attacked.

Australian Dockers Tie Up Five Big Ports

MELBOURNE, Australia (Reuters)—More than 30 ships were tied up in five major ports of Australia today as a strike over a ruling that smaller gangs must carry bigger loads entered its second day.

Sidney and Brisbane were hardest hit by the strike.

In Port Adelaide 2,000 dockers returned to work after they got a call at a mass meeting to leave further action to the Waterside Workers' Federation.

Dockers said here Wednesday night that they were willing to negotiate, but shipowners have referred the dispute back to the arbitration court which awarded the wage increase.

Portsmouth Lord Mayor Blames Rain As 1,000 U.S. Gobs Drink Party Dry

PORTSMOUTH, England (Reuters)—The Lord Mayor of Portsmouth said today that he was going to bother reporting to the United States Navy that 1,000 American sailors drank his beer until a little more thoroughly than anticipated.

It was all the fault of the weather, he said.

The sailors, from 11 United States warships in port, on a good will trip, were attending an Independence Day garden party given by the lord mayor when rain drove them indoors, two hours earlier than the navy scheduled to open.

The sailors spotted the unattended beer tent. It was soon empty. Nearly 500 crates of beer and 200 crates of whisky, sherry and gin disappeared.

The lord mayor obtained further stocks and the bars were opened half an hour early, but the sailors' love for Independence Day could not be slaked.

The bars were cleaned out in 25 minutes.

A United States marine colonel said the occurrence would be investigated.

MEMBER PROPOSES COMMONWEALTH GOV.-GENERAL

Should Support Equality Of Man Says PC

OTTAWA (CP) — A suggestion has been laid before the House of Commons that future governors-general of Canada be chosen from members of the Commonwealth countries, even if it means putting in Government House a man of different color and creed.

The proposal was made Wednesday by Wallace Nesbitt (PC-Oxford) who said Canada has "outgrown" the past practice of having a continual string of appointees from the United Kingdom upper crust with the odd exception. Neither did he think Canadians should be limited each time.

The alternative of exchanging governors-general with other commonwealth countries would help show "both to ourselves at home and our friends in other countries that there is a definite link between members of the Commonwealth."

Other countries would eventually be added to the Commonwealth, such as Nigeria, the Gold Coast and at some time in the future West Indies or Mr. Nesbitt said. It might seem strange at first to see a governor-general of a "different color and even a different religion" but Canada should show by deed she supports the equality of man.

CONSERVATIVE OPPOSES

Mr. Nesbitt ran into opposition from party-mate J. Wilfrid Dufresne (PC—Gaspe-West), who said Canada should not go to other Commonwealth countries for a governor-general.

The office should be filled almost entirely with French in Canada, English-speaking Canadians, Mr. Dufresne said. He would have no objection if Prime Minister St. Laurent were chosen to succeed Governor-General Vincent Massey, the first native Canadian governor-general, who was appointed in 1952. But Mr. St. Laurent would have to resign "immediately."

Alistair Stewart (CCF — Winnipeg North) said he is not committed to the idea of a continual stream of U.K. or Canadian appointees. But the Canada's immigration laws, he asked how an Indian, Pakistani or Ceylonese appointee would ever "get past the minister of immigration."

The same came as the Commons studied the spending estimates of the department of State Secretary Pinard. It takes in most things royal and such things as the Civil Service Commission and the Elections Act.

ARMS CONFERENCE

Mr. Nesbitt also had another suggestion. He said the Queen should consider coming here for another time in Canada. At least she should come to open a new Parliament, which is urged for every two years, at which time she could spend a month in the country.

The fact Queen Elizabeth was Queen of Canada tended to be forgotten in the minds of Canadians because they saw Her Majesty so little, he said. The royal visits served to give consideration to proposing titles to Buckingham Palace.

Elsewhere in the debate the House heard sharp opposition criticism of the fact that the Canada Medal, created in 1943, has never been issued. The awards scored of prominent Canadians have been honored by other countries but have gone unhonored in their homeland.

Federal Mediators Working To Pinpoint Disputed Issues

By WILLIAM A. SWARTWORTH

PITTSBURGH (AP)—The country-wide steel strike, now in its fifth day, cut output sharply into United States business today after an Independence Day holiday lull.

Meanwhile, federal mediators today undertake to pinpoint disputed issues in an effort to revive contract negotiations.

In another move, the government intends Friday to clamp a 90-day temporary freeze on selected steel items now stockpiled in warehouses to assure that defense producers will have enough supplies on hand to continue their work uninterrupted for as long as possible.

Once defence needs are satisfied, the government plans to lift the freeze, possibly within two weeks.

Joseph F. Finnegan, chief of the federal conciliation service, set to meet late this morning with David J. McDonald, president of the striking Steelworkers Union, and this afternoon with basic industry representatives.

Finnegan termed the meetings "exploratory" and for the "purpose of discussing the real differences between the union and the industry representatives."

Meanwhile, United States Steel Corporation became the third non-ferrous firm to take steps to boost prices in anticipation of added labor costs to result from the final settlement between the union and industry.

The company increased the price of its major mill products by $15 a ton Wednesday. Rise prices were not available.

McDonald and management negotiators have had most since talks broke off in New York last Saturday and 650,000 USW members went on strike against 90 per cent of the basic steel producers in the U.S.

Still, close to 47,000 workers in allied industries—principally railroads and trucking—have been put on furlough or notified of impending layoffs. And the number is expected to climb considerably before the week is out.

Many Great Lakes ore ships, with no place to take their cargo, were tied up in ports at Cleveland, Ohio, and other points.

Speeding Train Hits Crowd On Trestle and Three Killed

FOX LAKE, Ill. (AP)—A gay holiday crowd, watching a Fourth of July fireworks display, was stunned Wednesday night when a speeding passenger train rammed into a group of persons on the track. Three persons were killed and five others injured.

A crowd estimated from 80 to more than 100 lined the track. Several others were on a nearby trestle when the three-coach Milwaukee Road train neared this northern Illinois resort community.

Some 500 others were in the Nippersink American Legion field in Riverside Island, scene of the Independence Day fireworks display sponsored by the Legion.

Firemen and legionnaires had warned the group on the track and trestle that a train was due. About 15 minutes earlier a freight train had passed and the group left the track and trestle, only to return.

Fireman Jim Tutz said he saw the passenger train approaching and didn't believe any one was in danger.

"After the train had passed," Tutz said, "I saw seven bodies strewn along the track.

Dead are: Mrs. Lillian Favelchak, 38, and her son, Gary, 7 of Round Lake, Ill., and Carl Strand, 62, of Antioch, Ill.

Some of the group standing on the trestle jumped 10 feet into the water, which is about six feet deep at that point. Others ran to the other side of the trestle and escaped. None on the trestle was injured.

Coroner Robert Babcox said he learned from a police officer who talked to engineer Orrie Shoberg that apparently none of the train crew had seen the crowd on the trestle.

Millionth Home To Be Marked by Special Ceremony

OTTAWA (CP)—The millionth home built in Canada since the end of the Second World War will be in Toronto it has been learned.

The house will be completed in September and marked by a special ceremony arranged by Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, federal housing agency. The ceremony also will be used to launch National Housing Week.

Federal housing officials made the decision that a house in Toronto was an arbitrary one. It would have been impossible to determine exactly when the two thousand homes now under construction would be the millionth to be completed since Jan. 1, 1946.

The ceremony and National Housing Week are designed to dramatize Canada's accomplishments in home building in the post - war period, officials said. The two observances also will help salute builders, home owners and governments responsible for the big house-building program in the last 10 years.

SEES DRIVE ON CHURCH

BONN, Germany (Reuters)—The president of the West German lower house, Dr. Eugen Gerstenmaier, Wednesday accused the East German government of increasingly striving for the destruction of the church. He said in a radio address he has reached the conclusion that the East German authorities are engaged "in a planned repression of the church in every field."

Three Detroit Anglers Missing On Lake Simcoe

PEPPERLAW, Ont. (CP) Three United States anglers, all believed from Detroit, were missing today on Lake Simcoe, 60 miles north of Toronto.

They are Bundsen, Len Murphy and a third man, known only as Frank, owner of a 20-foot power launches and volunteer craft. They were due back at midnight but Cpl. Cecil Lee of provincial police said there is a strong possibility they have run out of gasoline "and if they did they are in serious trouble, because I don't know where out there."

The lake was reported calm overnight.

Brothers Ask Their Father To 'Light' Bombs

HAMILTON (CP)—Three young children have been asked to help two high explosive bombs two blocks Wednesday night thinking they were fireworks, police said their father to "light them."

The children they said he spotted his sons, Ronald, 9, Raymond 8, and Cecil, 6, carrying the 18-inch, 10-pound bombs into his backyard.

Telling his might frighten the boys, Mr. MacAntrey cautiously approached the trio and asked them to set the bombs on the ground.

He ordered the boys into the house where he telephoned police.

The boys told their father they found the bombs in an abandoned shack.

Mr. MacAntrey, a Canadian Army veteran of six years, said the detonating pins were still intact.

VERDUN MILKMAN HAS GEORGE MEDAL AWARD CANCELLED

Too Much Controversy Reason Given by Holder

By BERNARD DUPRESNE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP) — Edward C. Chipman, the Verdun, Que., milkman who won the coveted George Medal for saving three children from a burning home, has given up the award because of the heartache it caused him.

He asked last May 18 that the George Medal be returned because of the "considerable controversy over whether my deed warranted the award."

State Secretary Pinard announced Wednesday in the commons that the Queen has consented to the recall of the medal, but declined to elaborate on the first such cancellation of the George Medal in Canada. Next to the George Cross, it is the Commonwealth's highest award for bravery in civilian life.

Chipman, 33, now will return the medal when it arrives here on Jan. 24 from Governor - General Massey at his investiture here. The medal will be sent back to London.

MORE UNPLEASANT

He wrote in a letter to Undersecretary of State Charles Stein, chairman of the awards coordinating committee, that the controversy "has been most unpleasant from the point of my family and, in addition, has undoubtedly embarrassed the governor-general, the representative in Canada of Her Majesty the Queen.

"Therefore, with the thought of sending this controversy and bringing the human to a close, I respectfully ask permission to return the medal and request that Her Majesty graciously recall the award."

Chipman won the medal on the ground that he saved three children from the burning home of Georges Julien on the Caughnawaga Indian Reserve near Montreal Dec. 9, 1954. Julien's wife died.

The citation accompanying the medal said Chipman rescued two children in two trips, reviving Julien who had become unconscious by smoke then returned inside to bring out a third child.

"There is reason to believe that but for the courageous action of Mr. Chipman the three children would have perished in the fire," the citation said.

However, Julien later told reporters he was in a drunken stupor when Chipman. He said his wife saved three of the six Julien children, two of whom died, and yelled for them and that he himself saved the sixth, who later died.

The conflicting reports on the incident prompted a newspaper controversy and investigations by the Quebec provincial police. The results have not been made known.

Chipman reports appeared last March 23 in the Toronto Star which carried a two-column story from Montreal.

Meanwhile, Chipman neglected cancellation of the award in a letter which his employer, F. L. Hart of Hart's Dairy Ltd., said he helped write.

Paul Martin Says Disarmament Soon May Be Infeasible

Have Five Years to Check Stock-Piling of Atom Bombs

NEW YORK (CP)—Health Minister Martin of Canada warned today that "the world is rapidly approaching the point of no return" — the time when the effective control of disarmament may no longer be feasible."

The leader of the Canadian delegation in the United Nations disarmament commission said the need for early and effective action is imperative and that the risks of further delay are perilous.

"If in the next few years—indeed in the next five years—we are unable to arrest the process (stockpiling of nuclear weapons) I do not think we shall be given another period of grace in which to deliberate about this problem."

WANTS START NOW

Mr. Martin said the Canadian government considers that it should be possible now, in both the conventional and nuclear armaments field, to make an important beginning on initial steps toward disarmament without waiting for a comprehensive agreement between the Communists and the West.

He told the commission—The Security Council and Canada—during committee, that the controversy "has been most unpleasant from the point of my family and, in addition, has undoubtedly embarrassed the governor-general, the representative in Canada of Her Majesty the Queen.

"Therefore, with the thought of sending this controversy and bringing the human to a close I respectfully ask permission to return the medal and request that Her Majesty graciously recall the award."

Four-Week-Old Child Kidnapped From Carriage, $2,000 Demanded

WESTBURY, N.Y. (AP) — An apparent attempt was made at 10:15 a.m. Wednesday to kidnap a baby girl from the carriage in front of the Westbury Music Conservatory.

However, there was no immediate indication that the effort succeeded.

Five minutes before the appointed hour, a man believed to be the kidnapper, identified himself to Mrs. Weinberger, strode from the front door of his suburban New York home here and placed a brown manila envelope at the base of a tree about 100 feet from the house.

He walked back, re-entered the house and left by the front door.

At 10:15 a.m. the envelope was still under the tree.

Reporters and photographers who earlier had been in the vicinity were asked to leave so that an effort might be made to pay the ransom, demanded in a note left when the tot was taken from his carriage by the Weinberger baby sitter, Mrs. Weinberger.

Police permitted one reporter, one still photographer and one newsreel man to remain, but in a place where they would not be observed.

It was they who saw the man believed to be the father pat the eight- by 10-inch envelope under the tree.

Police had been in and around the Weinberger home for hours. They took care to be seen as the envelope was placed.

The infant girl was temporarily unattended at the time of his kidnapping.

Defence Plans Criticized by General Simonds

TORONTO (CP)—Lt.-Gen. Guy Simonds, retired chief of general staff, Wednesday night said federal government defence spending must be aimed at finding a method of tracking guided missiles at their firing point.

Fighter pilots and planes will always be no more than stop-gap blind guided missiles, he said. It was dangerous to place the future of freedom only on the threat of thermo - nuclear retaliation alone.

General Simonds, speaking to the monthly dinner of the Royal Canadian Military Institute, said Canada's defence plans against atomic air attacks provide for everyone to run to the woods and salvage anything that might be left afterwards.

"That is the most frightful form of defeatism. "If that is the condition of our defence after we have spent millions of dollars developing the CF-100 and CF-105 jet fighters, can that be regarded as satisfactory? The answer is very definitely no."

He said North American radar lines can give only 15 to 30 minutes warning of a guided missile headed for the U.S. mainland. Early warning must come from European and Scottish radar bases, General Simonds said.

He urged the immediate organization of a committee to search for a method to track down and destroy enemy missiles. He said that why not they would be the event of an emergency.

"Until anyone knows you can combat with an emergency without regimentation, then I would say they are crazy in the head."

Having General In Most Regions

TORONTO (CP) — Haying is general throughout most of the province, the Ontario agriculture department says in its latest crop weekly farm report.

Eastern Ontario's Russell county, however, haying was reported to be three weeks behind schedule.

The report said early vegetable and fruit crops appeared good and that strawberry picking is in full swing in Southern Ontario.

Rainfall has been beneficial spring crops, especially hay meadows, pastures and grains.

Guilty of Entering Trenton Station Without Passes

Two Trenton district youths, James Mitchell and Don Reynolds both 21, were assessed $25 fine and costs in county magistrate's court today following guilty pleas to a charge of entering the RCAF station at Trenton without first securing passes.

An RCAF corporal told the court that the two youths had been refused passes at the station gate and that the latter seen outside the dance hangar.

He said the two youths had admitted entering the fence near the No. 8 S.D. road. Provincial police were contacted and the youths were charged with trespassing under the National Defence Act.

The air force corporal told the court that climbing the fence to get to "stable" duties was a "common occurrence."

A Frankford farmer man Ed. Jordan, 67, pleaded guilty to and also with charges of driving leaving the scene of an accident out an instructor when holding only a temporary permit. He was assessed $103.50 fine and costs for leaving the scene and $8.50 fine and costs on the second charge.

Institute officials said the girl was in a "semi-conscious" condition when she was transferred to an ambulance from a train.

Wendy was accompanied on the 140-mile trip by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alec Basford, and Mrs. Harold Kennedy, staff nurse at the Smiths Falls Public Hospital.

Mrs. Kennedy said Wendy had rested well and did not appear to suffer ill effects because of the lengthy train ride.

Dr. J. A. McCue, who arranged Wendy's transfer here, said the girl suffered a severe internal brain hemorrhage. She was struck by the vehicle while running across Queen Street in Smiths Falls.

May Ask Province to Provide Legal Aid for Four Charged

Possibility of the province being asked to provide legal aid for four Belleville youths charged with armed robbery at the Trenton Drive-In Theatre, was suggested in county magistrate's court this morning as the four teen-agers were arraigned on the charges.

George Gill, 16; George McFarland, 18, Harold Douglas Graves, 17, and Leo Greyeyes, 18, were arraigned before Magistrate T. W. Wills and were remanded for one week in order that legal aid could be provided for their defence.

Magistrate Wills suggested to County Attorney J. A. Pringle that members of the local Bar Association be contacted to see if they would provide legal aid. Failing this the magistrate recommended that the province be contacted to see if legal aid could be appointed.

"This is a serious charge and it is vital that these boys have legal advice," Magistrate Wills pointed out.

The four youths are charged with the armed hold-up of the Trenton Drive-In Theatre on the evening of June 27th and with stealing $150.

Mrs. Goldie Wirk said that two men carrying rifles and wearing masks had approached the ticket window and told her "this is a stick-up." They made off with a canvas bag containing the money.

Provincial Police were notified and arrested the four youths half an hour later as they left the drive-in in a car.

They were brought to Belleville and the same night were charged with the hold-up.

Porker Put In Police Cell No Charge Laid

The old nursery rhyme of the little pig going to market—is familiar to everyone, but a brand new slant was added in the city yesterday.

The city lawmen report that they had a little pig in jail!

It all happened this way.

Some distinct farmer was driving along Dundas Street with a truck load of shoats when one weighing about 40 pounds escaped from the vehicle and started running down the street.

A district Dutch resident saw the running pig and after a brief chase caught it. He put in his car and driving to the police station asked, "what will I do with it?"

Desk Sergeant George Westlake said they put the porker in the cell block and notified the city dog catcher who came and took it away.

Today the little pig is in the city pound where paking is otherwise he is awaiting his owner.

Former Great Screen Star Wants Trust Dissolved

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mary Miles Minter, a screen great more than three decades ago, has come out of seclusion in quest of funds for "the necessities of life."

Miss Minter, now 54, and her mother, Mrs. Charlotte Shelby, have filed suit against the Title Insurance and Trust Co., seeking to terminate a trust established by Mrs. Shelby in 1934 with some of her daughter's film earnings.

The action was brought under Miss Minter's legal name, Juliet Shelby, earlier this week. It contemplates that the trust now amounts to $100,000.

Mother and daughter ask that the trust be dissolved, the daughter setting forth that when it was established she was "not dependent upon the income from it" but that now she is, "for the necessities of life."

Miss Minter, at the peak of a tumultous career 32 years ago, went on the stage when she was 12. For the next 10 years she appeared in hit plays with such stars as Pat Goodwin, John Drew, Maude Adams and the Barrymores.

Building Lots Within Limits Getting Scarce

With available building lots within the present city limits almost non-existent residential construction is swinging rapidly to the suburban areas.

This is the explanation given by city building inspector Adam Stalkey for the sharp drop in house building this year as compared with the first six months in 1955.

"There are very few building lots left in the city" noted Mr. Stalker. "All the city-owned lots have been sold and builders who last year were active within the municipality are now working outside the city."

To the end of June there had been a total of 114 building permits issued in the city with a construction value of $761,800. For the same six-month period in 1955 there were 191 permits issued with construction valued at $1,-

Total for June of this year was 19 permits for construction valued at $67,500. June 1955 saw 61 permits issued with value of construction listed at $293,400.

Thirty-two permits for new homes valued at $361,500 have been issued this year; commercial building has amounted to $125,-200; industrial building $12,000 and institutional building $68,200.

Big items in the building list this year are the new Brewers' Retail building on Station street costing $110,000; and the new St. Margaret-on-the- Hill Anglican church in Parkwood Heights at $47,000.

Holidays Only Deferred for A Little While

Two young gentlemen from the U.S. arrived in Belleville last night and shortly afterward were in the charge of provincial police.

However, their falling into the hands of the police had a happy ending for the two.

The two visitors were Robert McIntosh, 9, and his younger brother, Chucky, 7, both of Wilson, N.Y.

What had happened was this: The lads were on their way to spend the holidays with their aunt and uncle, Gerald and Dorothy Minton. However, they missed the train at Toronto and had to take a bus to Belleville. Apparently, the boys' relatives at Picton received no word of the change.

Arrived in Belleville, the boys stepped off the bus and found—no one awaiting them. Their problem was passed on to provincial police headquarters. Shortly after the boys and their luggage left for Picton in a police cruiser—the start of their holidays only slightly deferred.

British Troops Help Cypriots Stamp Out Fire

NICOSIA, Cyprus (Reuters)—One thousand British troops are fighting side by side with 2,000 Cypriots in a desperate battle to save the island's worst forest fire. The fire already has destroyed 31,400,000 worth of timber land in the Paphos area of west Cyprus.

The flames have blazed up under a sudden change of wind Wednesday after it had nearly been brought under control. No casualties have been reported as a result of the fire.

Wednesday, British troops and Cypriots scholed a break in the fire on the island's northern mountain range.

Meanwhile, Judge Bernard Shaw, heavily escorted by British military police, flew to Cyprus special court today to resume the trial of two alleged terrorists, interrupted when gunmen attempted to assassinate him 11 days ago.

Shaw, who has a slight scar on his left ear where a bullet passed through his neck, said he was "not a bit" nervous because of the attack.

Mayor Sharpe To Make Trip But Not by Horse

WINNIPEG (CP) — Mayor George Sharpe was in the saddle today but he stayed there only for the time it took him to ride a mile.

He all started innocently Wednesday when the 47 - year - old mayor promised to ride from here to the Calgary Stampede —800 miles west. Mayor Don Macleary of Calgary accepted the offer. The horse was waiting early today in front of the Winnipeg hotel.

Mayor Sharpe's short ride took him to the steps of city hall where he announced he would keep his promise to get to the stampede. The stampede starts Monday and he plans to fly there.

"If I wouldn't get back until next year" by horse, the mayor said.

But he will ride into Calgary on horseback from two miles outside the city.

Cheese Exchange Thanks City For Use of Hall

The Belleville Cheese exchange has used the Belleville Armoury, which is self-explanatory, to the Belleville City Council:

Stirling, Ont.
July 3, 1956.

To Her Worship Mayor Forrester and Members of the Council of City of Belleville.

For many years the Cheese Producers and Cheese Buyers of the Central Ontario District have been made at home for meetings in your Council Chambers.

The auction sale of cheese has now been transferred to Kingston for an experiment of selling under the Dutch Clock method of sale.

As the producers of cheese and the buyers of cheese wish to express their sincere thanks for the courtesy shown to them by your city, and your present and past Mayors and Councillors for the kind receptions they have enjoyed in being made welcome in your city hall for the many years that they have been in operation with Belleville as their centre of transactions, we believe since the year 1878.

As the Dutch Clock system of selling is only an experiment at present, we cannot tell what it should it not prove satisfactory, that we may again be made at home in your city hall.

Sincerely yours,
F. H. Mallory,
Secretary-treasurer,
Belleville Cheese Exchange.

Workers Given Big Increase In New Contract

CORNWALL (CP)—A two-year agreement signed today between Courtaulds (Canada) Ltd., and Local 178, United Textile Workers (CLC) gives employees an eight-cents-an-hour across - the-board wage increase and a reduction in their work week to 40 hours from 42.

A four-cents-an-hour increase becomes effective immediately and a second four-cent increase goes into effect July 1, next year.

The reduction in working hours is made with present take-home pay maintained.

Wednesday, 200 wildcat strikers at the plant returned to work when union officials said a decision in the new agreement would be renegotiated to allow workers with score eyes to go home, as allowed previously.

The walkout last Sunday when the company ruled that employees whose eyes were affected by chemicals used at the textile plant must remain in the plant's infirmary.

$20,000 Swim Across Lake Ont. Being Proposed

TORONTO (CP) — The Swim Coaches Association of Canada decided Wednesday night to offer to undertake the organization of a $20,000 33-mile Lake Ontario marathon swim this summer.

The prize money would be put up by a Toronto concern whose identity has not been disclosed.

The association said it hears early August for the marathon, but that Mrs. Gleeson prefers it to be during the Canadian National Exhibition—late August and September. Admission would be free after a summer warmup of the lake.

The sponsor has not yet accepted the association's offer to organize the contest.

Toronto's Marilyn Bell so far is the only person to conquer Lake Ontario, accomplishing the feat in September, 1954.

BIG NAMES EXPECTED

The association reserved the right to withdraw its offer to organize the swim if it doesn't whose identity is not known to it, is "unacceptable."

The possibility of the sponsor being connected with liquor interests was said to be remote, a proviso.

The swim probably would start at Port Dalhousie.

Marilyn Bell swam from Youngstown, N.Y., to finish at the Sunnyside seawall.

Cliff Lumsden, Brenda Fisher, Shirley Campbell, Doreen George, and other swimmers were contacted by the big prize money but are said to be counted on by the race organizers.

The top-seeded Hoad will meet Ken Rosewall, second-seeded, in the final Friday.

Rosewall eliminated American David Cup player Vic Seixas in the semi-finals Wednesday.

Richardson, a diabetic, couldn't stand up against Hoad's power after the first set.

Earlier Angela Buxton became the first British player to reach the women's singles semi-finals since 1939 when she defeated Pat Ward, 6-1, 6-4, in an all-English semi-final.

Miss Ward runner-up in last year's U.S. nationals, was not too slow when the 23-year-old Miss Buxton, ranked 11th in Britain, started mixing her shots.

Rosewall downed Seixas out of the tournament Wednesday.

Prisoners are paid $1 a day while fighting the fires.

Brockville Crew Wins Second Heat In Challenge Cup

HENLEY - ON - THAMES, Eng. (AP)—The husky racing four of the Brockville, Ont., Rowing Club scored an easy victory in the second heat of the Thames Challenge Cup today at the Royal—Henley Regatta.

The Canadians, bucking the waves with great power, easily defeated a four of the Leander Rowing Club, covering the course in seven minutes, 20 seconds.

The Canadians move into the quarter-finals of the event Friday.

Theodor C. Pfaff, 33-year-old master sculler, scored a 3½-length victory over Jim Stecksacker of Belgium in the opening heat of the single sculls. Stecksacker's time was nine minutes, 30 seconds. The pole won the disputed sculls in 1952 with a time of eight minutes, 32 seconds under ideal weather conditions that prevailed on the rough waters today.

The American Kent School rowing eight took command early and coasted in the rough waters today.

The Americans defeated an eight of the London Rowing Club with an impressive performance in a heat on the one mile, 550 yard Thames sprint course to enter the quarter-final.

PAUL MARTIN

Mr. Martin found fault with the Soviet disarmament proposals on five grounds, namely that they reverse measures of conventional disarmament from measures of nuclear disarmament and make no provision for adequate measures of control.

Mr. Martin said Russia's announced intention to reduce armed forces by 1,200,000 men will do no more than close the numerical superiority of the Soviet forces less overwhelming.

"Unilateral reductions outside the framework of international agreement providing for adequate controls can do far less to restore confidence than smaller reductions associated within the agreement providing the necessary safeguards. In other words, disarmament means agreed reductions; but unilateral reductions do not necessarily mean disarmament."

Even after the Russian reduction was carried out, the U.S.S.R. would retain 175 times the number of divisions stationed on the European continent by NATO countries.

INVITED TO VISIT

BONN, West Germany (AP)—The Soviet Union Wednesday night invited the West German Bundestag (lower house) to send a delegation to Russia for an official visit.

Crystal Beach Quiet on July 4

CRYSTAL BEACH, Ont. (CP)—This Lake Erie resort was quiet Wednesday despite rumors there would be a July Independence Day recurrence of teenage riots which took place during the United States Memorial Day May 30.

The regular Ontario Provincial Police force at the beach had been increased to 17 from 11 during the Dominion Day long weekend and was further augmented Wednesday by civil defence policemen and members of the lifesaving corps, an auxiliary force.

The biggest attendance at the beach was lower than previous Independence Days. Fewer than 1,000 persons attended the resort's big attraction, the July 4 dance.

Robert G. Sheppard, Fish and Wildlife Inspector with the Tweed district of the Department of Lands and Forests, for the past ten years, retires from active service at the end of the month, after serving 23 years with the department. Mr. Sheppard and his wife were honored by a complimentary dinner and presentation, at Hotel Tweedsmuir on Tuesday evening.

Mr. Sheppard joined the Game and Fisheries Department before amalgamation and served as a Game Warden and Conservation Officer in the Ottawa district making his headquarters at Cannanoque for over 20 years. When he was transferred to the Tweed district in 1946, he was promoted to Inspector of Fish and Wildlife Division. During his years with the provincial government he has enjoyed under five premiers, Hon. Howard Ferguson, Hon. George Henry, Mitchell Hepburn, George Drew and Leslie Frost, many ministers and deputy ministers.

An honored guest at the dinner was Dr. R. E. Harkness, Chief of the Division of Fish and Wildlife for the Department, Toronto, who, in a few complimentary words, Mr. Sheppard on his excellent administration of his service with the department. He was introduced by District Forester Norman Paramore.

Mr. James Farrington, also with the head office staff in Toronto, and who, with 49 years with the government has one of the longest records with the Ontario Civil Service, was also present at the meeting. He spoke of the early administration within the department.

PRESENTED WITH LUGGAGE

On behalf of the staff at the local office and men throughout the district, Mr. Sheppard was presented by Mr. and Mrs. Sheppard with a set of luggage. The retiring inspector and Mrs. Sheppard have purchased a home near Fort Myers, Florida, and will take up residence there later in the year.

In thanking the staff for their generosity and kind words, Mr. Sheppard in his whimsical manner, recalled the highlights of his thirty-two years as an enforcement officer.

Mr. Sheppard's good humor and ready wit will be missed at Tweed where he has made his home in wishing both he and his wife an enjoyable retirement at their new home in Florida.

Mr. and Mrs. Sheppard have a natural gas conservation board. Parliament at Ottawa has approved a pipeline permit for the project.

Decision to proceed with formal organization and construction was reached Wednesday at a directors' meeting here.

INACCESSIBLE WALL PLUGS

We suspect that the Windsor Star has an editorial writer whose wife is behind with her spring house cleaning.

That would explain a plaintive plea for an accessible wall plug.

"There is something seriously wrong with the architecture of the average home," complains the Star editorially. "Or, if not that, with the arrangement of the furniture within the home. It seems impossible to find an electricity outlet that isn't behind something."

That proverbial picture that is worth a thousand words is provided by a cartoonist who illustrated the editorial with a drawing of a man's legs wiggling in the air, while the man's superstructure is concealed behind the back of a chesterfield.

This is the sort of an appeal which could start a dangerous campaign unless readers of the Star give the whole question a little careful thought.

Does the inaccessibility of wall pugs not serve some useful purpose? Indeed it does. It tends to give stability to the certain pieces of furniture which, otherwise, would be constantly shifted from place to place.

Isn't an occasional dive behind the chesterfield a comparatively small price to pay for assurance that you will find your favorite chair just the light behind it, exactly where you left it yesterday?

P.S. — We hate to mention this, but we understand there is a new device which makes it possible to plug in an electric appliance any place around the perimeter of a room.

FORGOT TO WIND HIS WATCH

"A Good Lackey Is Hard To Find."

Under that heading the Vancouver Sun recently reprinted a story by Atticus in the London, England, Sunday Times.

The story follows:

"The truly ducal remark is, alas, all too rare nowadays, so I am happy to report one which was recently let fall in Scotland.

"Waiting for dinner in his castle, the Duke of ——— impatiently consulted his watch. It had stopped. Asking one of his lackeys for the time, he demanded: 'I can't understand it. My man usually winds the thing up before he puts it on me.'

It would seem that Atticus found something delightfully absurd in a duke expecting his man to keep his watch wound up. It would also seem that the Vancouver Sun shared this view of the incident. One hears, occasionally, about British Columbia's lackeys is in some ways, and this shared viewpoint on the duke's remarks would appear to confirm such statements.

Here in the office east there are many who would chuckle at the suggestion that they need a valet, but few who would not agree that, if a valet were hired, 'watch-winding should certainly be included in his duties.

Few men have any real difficulty donning a shirt or pulling on their pants in the morning and the assistance so often extended a guest in shrugging his shoulders into a coat is no more than a polite gesture and serves no essential purpose.

There are, however, some everyday chores which are annoying and are easily overlooked. If the pants be tight it is possible to overlook the fact that the belt, which should be paired with them, is still hanging on the hook under yesterday's shirt.

If coat sleeves be tight it is almost a foregone conclusion that the tie will have to be tied and untied and tied again at least a half dozen times before the two ends condescend to talk to each other, instead of marching down the shirt front one end a couple of paces ahead of the other, like two lovers after a quarrel.

Shoelaces themselves are not a problem, but a shoelace that breaks can cause a commotion which is very hard to take before the morning coffee. Few men would scorn the services of a valet in such an emergency.

Watch-winding comes in the same category. A little chore which no really busy man should be expected to undertake for himself. The Duke of ——— (we regret that Atticus should cloak this hero in the anonymity of ——) appears to be an aristocrat who has recognized the true extent of the opportunities for useful service which exist in the calling of a valet. Without any research, we suspect that a valet is the last hangover from the days of the time when knighthood was in flower, and when assistance in donning tin pants and other similarly awkward items of the traditional knight's wardrobe was required. The Duke has discovered a method of making the valet useful even in these days just as useful as in the days of chivalry. He is a most partial knight!

BBC ANNIVERSARY

The British Broadcasting Corporation recently observed an anniversary — the tenth anniversary of the re-opening of BBC Television after the wartime closedown.

That's right, the re-opening of the television service. Not the start. The BBC commenced its public television service on Nov. 2, 1936, almost twenty years ago.

This should provide food for thought for those who regard the British as "dry" lagging behind the go-getters from the United States.

THE JOY OF THE PRIZE

If success only meant the reward
That those on the top drink from
If it only meant money and fame,
If victory meant only medals and things,
There wouldn't be much in the game.

But the joy of the prize is not in the reward,
Or the silver and gold that is given,
For you value the trinkets you keep on your shelves
For the fight that you put up to win them.

If all that you got from the top was the cup
And the thought that at last you were high
And possessed something only attained by the few,
Then the summit would not satisfy.

that it brings,
misery's cup
And often encounter regret
there,
But the joy that they treasure
in clambering up
And the fight that it cost them to share.

For jewels mean nothing, and worthless is gold
However by many they're yearned,
For jewels and gold may be purchased and sold
And they're only worth while when they're earned.

There is only one thing that enriches a life
And that is your fight to attain it;
Success would grow common and cheap in your eyes
Were it not for your struggles to win it.

Turn Back Clock In Park

(Ontario Government Services)

Algonquin Park, show-piece of the province, of Canada, is to be returned to its pristine state. Under plans of the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests the 1,700 square miles of forest and waterway that Prince Edward Island, will be restored to what it was originally brought back to where it was first established in 1893.

Admittedly this is a lengthen plan, and one launched on new lines as will be granted for cottages, or commercial lots. The return to the park's natural state is to be gradual, with nothing arbitrary about it. Cottagers, householders and their tenure they will sell property to the Crown or, in some cases, donate it to the people.

At present, no leases are granted in other provincial parks such as Quetico in the northwest section of Ontario, Algonquin, 70 miles north in the Port Arthur-Fort William district.

Fearing that commercialism might mar Algonquin Park with the encroachment of so-called civilization, the Ontario Government decided to return to the original purpose as laid down by a royal commission in 1893. Its boundaries have been fixed as passed by the legislature authorizing the establishing year a summary declared: "The government was interested to provide a public park and pleasure ground for game preserve, health resort and timber reserve for the benefit, enjoyment and advantage of the people of the province."

Algonquin Park has had its place since that act was passed. A highway was built through it, more than one-third of the park and about 500 miles of construction of cottages and summer resorts.

But even so control has been maintained over the park. There are no unsightly billboards, honky-tonk refreshment booths or gasoline stations within the park or its park area. There are numerous picnic grounds, the main one on the highway but few off the road and hiking trails. The speed-car canoe trails leading to the north from the highway, holidayers can still be in relative wilderness in a few miles.

By reversion to the original plans, however, it means that no new roads will be built leading off the main highway, no agreements with private facilities which would prevent the ordinary citizen of the province from camping where and when he chooses.

James Dickson, then inspector of surveys, in his original report to the royal commission of 62 years ago, declared:

"It would seemingly urge that nothing so moved, dear nor any fur-bearing animals should be either hunted, taken or killed in the proposed park for all time. By doing this, the province will be able to maintain the ground and harbor of refuge for her game. As the park becomes stocked they would naturally spread out into the surrounding country and the whole province would in time be stocked than it is at present."

That was the policy which has always been followed. Hunting is still prohibited in the park and bear, deer and other animals walk fearlessly on the road and around present cottage and camps. Fishing is allowed, however, and in accordance with the original plan streams and lakes have been restocked over the years. In addition some years ago a plan of stream closure or lakes was inaugurated whereby certain waters of progression have made fishing as good today as it ever was.

Lands and Forests officials emphasize that there will be no drastic measure taken to bring about the return to the original plan. Persons with present cottages or tourist camps in the park will be allowed to remain. It is estimated that there will take 40 years before the occupied or leased land will revert to the Crown.

But the day will come when Algonquin Park will be restored to and controlled by all the people of Ontario and "no trespassing" signs will be nailed from one end of the continent's most noted wonderlands.

Tinsley Green Marbles Play

(By Leonard Parkin in London Calling)

Just about the greatest heresy you can commit in the village of Tinsley Green, Sussex, or, more often from London, is to call marbles "alleys" and to say that the marbles championship is decided there.

The departed giants of the game live in the memory of the village. Old Bill Wall of the public house, in front of which the marbles pitch is laid, there is a plaque to his memory. He was called the G.O.M. of Marbles."

The annual marbles championships, were started about 30 years ago, and nowadays they attract teams fighting, from the Star and Garter, the Baldmoonrake and the Rebels. The championship matches are played between teams of six men.

Forty-nine clay marbles are placed in a ring about 10 feet across the ring: the ring is made of concrete of the concrete surface and then it is brushed across the ring to prevent the marbles merely rolling off the concrete surface.

Each player has what is called a "taw," a glass marble, which he rolls from the edge of the ring to knock the marbles in the centre. The winner is the player who knocks most marbles out of the ring. Then the championship. Players play according to the rules, must not be more than the width of their taw from the centre, and at Tinsley Green they even have a gauge to test the toleys before they begin to make sure of cheating.

If a player knocks one of the clay marbles out of the ring, and his own toley stays in the ring, then the opponent has to put his own toley brought into play. The player knocking down with his toley on the mark and attacks the other marbles on the marker.

Last year's individual champion was a pocket size Welshman called Wee Willy Wright, and there is always a catching of breath from the crowd at his opening action. Willy Wright had been known to knock out-to less than 37 consecutive marbles. He has rather an amusing method of keeping his hands warm: he puts them in his turn at the ring: His wife has sewn a false pocket into his coat, and heating warmer is a can of hot water bottle.

The oldest man playing last year — and very well he played, too — was Percy Maynard, still bending easily and playing accurately at the age of 84.

Championship day ends with good cheer and good hospitality. The winning team in the championship is presented with a cup, and the runners-up with a firkin of ale — 9 pints of it.

Progress, Stay Away

(Hamilton Spectator)

We were saddened to read recently in the magazine, the A.D. ministration, the story of "how electronics has entered the field of municipal government through an innovation which allows word-for-word transcript of committee council meetings."

It said that two "progressive" Maritime cities, Halifax and Moncton, have installed tape-recording systems in their municipal council rooms which will "pick up every word spoken even during the lengthiest sessions."

Need we go further? No? All right, we will.

In Halifax and Moncton the councillors' desks are fitted with microphones. The spoken words are fed into a central box which is equipped with switches so that any of the microphones can be turned on or off as occasion is needed.

Well, we suppose the councils of these progressive cities know what they are doing and are fully aware of the dangers. But we, here as Hamilton is concerned, we have always thought that a council chamber as one big voice and mixing box which might better go unrecorded. Councillors' chief should break into our City Hall, make off with the recordings and play them back to the voters at election time! We have always considered that changes in council personnel should be periodically.

We have always taken a firm stand against banning and dissolves nothing and only litters the streets. But as for tape-burning, we're not so sure. In a way, "progress," stay 'way from our door.

Strength for The Day
DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS
OPPOSITION OF OFFICIALDOM
More than 150 years ago there a German physician who suspected that infection in a child at birth was the cause of much of the world's blindness. He tried to persuade his colleagues of the truth of his theory, but in the chaos. Physicians kept on explaining to parents that their children had lost their sight because of peculiar atmospheric conditions, cold drafts, unfavorable conditions in the alimentary canal, and the like.

Eighty years after the death of the man who had said that blindness came from germs, Pasteur, a child's eyes at birth, another German showed the world how to save the sight of thousands of children annually by dropping a two per cent solution of silver nitrate into the eyes of the newborn babe. This is done today in the cash of practically every country of the and untold misery is thereby averted.

Some of our worst diseases will be eliminated in coming decades, probably, by procedures as simple as this. But the old pattern will persist for those who advance new ideas will be cried down or ridiculed. Not only in the field of medicine but in government, those who suggest new things will be decried as ridiculous, and those who point out the fallacy of many modern remedies for bettering human ills will be denounced as the enemies of progress. Truth advances, but usually in spite of the opposition of those who are the official custodians of it.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

GOOD THINGS

There is something about good things that grow better, like Robert Henri: "There is always a new surprise each time you see them."

I have hanging in my office a portrait of Lincoln which never look upon it without seeing something else there — something that makes it an improvement over the last time I looked at it. Lincoln's face was the face of a man. I know of no portrait in paint that gave the look Lincoln had. Each time once remarked, "there is something else there."

Places that you love look better every time you look upon them. Places that you love look better every time you revisit them. Your self-knowledge, or your friend, each has its growing appeal. How colorless life would be if we had no trust.

Good things are the perpetual delight. Stead, the editor who controlled our lives. Work—any useful service is an elemental good thing. Willis Stead, the English writer and editor, who went down with the Lusitania, once was asked "that good man, Stead," when the best of God's good creations.

The great founder of the Kansas City Star, Col. W. R. Nelson, once told me that no matter how good an idea it, there is always a better one. Think over the great inventions during the past few years and note how true this is. Progress in progress made in automobiles, and other useful inventions. Better changes for the better! Good things keep improving on themselves.

Good things, into which have gone things of the spirit, always help the creators, as examples by antiques, Persian rugs, and tapestries. Good things in books are the best. Whatever is useful and well done is a cabinet of good things. Whatever is good, it feeds us, teaches us great truths, and inspires us with a love for the Creator, who indeed upon His creations, was good.

The Heck With the Hungarians

"Shades of my Hungarian ancestors! They'd turn over in their graves at the thought of mere flesh and ground beef in Hungarian Goulash, not to say ground bacon! And horrors, baked yet!

Being an unrelated Hungarian from way back and having grown up with the genuine article, real Hungarian Goulash, I ought to know. Your recipe outrages all Hungarians and the name Hungarian Goulash. All this by way of reply to your description of Micky's Goulash. (Mrs. H.M.K.)

All right, All right. I have nothing against Hungarians, except maybe that goat-awful stew we were served when we sought out a Hungarian restaurant and found a Hungarian cook. And that's the genuine article, all I have to say is the heck with it. But in deference to your protest, maybe I will put down Micky's delectable dish as we have enjoyed all these years by the name well call it and Micky's Goulash.

Micky can't remember where she got the recipe originally. I suggested that she tossed odds and ends into the aluminum cooker as they accumulated and when the pot was full stirred everything up and "popped" it into the oven to bake.

It isn't quite that easy. The ground beef and ground bacon must each first be cooked separately, then mixed with the sauerkraut, onions, tomato and all other ingredients.

I promise you, Ma'am, that no one but a Hungarian could be satisfied with less than two helpings of Micky's Mixtake.

Stone Turtle Hath Charms

(Ottawa Journal)

Instead of reading about the Valley of the Kings or the excavations at Pompeii, Canadians now have the opportunity of enjoying ancient relics, ancient objects shaped by humans. The great droughts of the 1930s made possible a wonderful collection of artifacts — arrowheads and similar stone equipment when the wind whistled off the top soil and uncovered the relics of the first Canadians and connected the plains perhaps 15,000 years ago.

Only last year a National Museum archaeologist made a remarkable discovery in the far Northwest Territories. He unearthed here in camps of the first Americans tentshaped dwelling that was to a new continent after crossing from Siberia. Perhaps he will prove there were hunting camps 15,000 years ago and for all the generations since, but it is more likely that these finds we wish to remark. It is rather of the little diggings, the scraping of amateurs at scores of places in Southern Canada. For the discovery of these people we owe only to Rev. Bowen J. Squire, who digs on his farm near Belleville and among other relics has found a "butterfly-shaped stone and a carved stone turtle from the Laurentian period." They are perhaps 3,000 to 10,000 years old and we hope that for the enthusiast they are as exciting as nuggets for the Klondike miner.

Cockneys May Be Born Again

(Montreal Gazette)

It is hard to think that no Cockneys have been born for 25 years. And yet such has been the case.

The definition of a Cockney is "anyone born within the sound of Bow Bells." But the Church of St. Mary-le-Bow, where the Bow bells hung, was bombed in the war, and bells since then can claim Cockney birth.

It is not surprising, therefore, that the Cockneys themselves—those born in the days when the bells could be heard—are trying to collect money from other Cockneys to help bring back to the city the Bow bells ringing once more.

Only half the money has been raised. But a start has been made. Eight of the original 12 bells have been cast in the Whitechapel Bell Foundry, which has been making bells for hundreds of years.

The day may not be too far off when Cockneys will be born once more in the sound of the bells within sound of bells from the Whitechapel Foundry—the same foundry that, more than a century ago, made the bells that ring out the hours of Sherlock Holmes Church in Montreal's Place d'Armes.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

It is important to know how to swim. But it is equally important to know when not to swim. And the most conscientious swimmer is sometimes caught by cramps or similar upsets and the shore looks invitingly close.

So the water safety week recently celebrated across Canada, was good as far as it went. But demonstrations of water safety included urgent instructions to hang onto floating logs and make for the shore rather than try to swim to it. Nobody ever drowned from a main reason why so many persons who try to swim ashore from an upset craft are drowned in the attempt. It could be that the shock and sensation of the upset put an excessive strain on the heart, nerves and other organs, resulting in cramps or even heart failure. Swimming is normally done at a slower time of the year when we feel like going in the water, when meals are digested well and when we are in a good state of mind and body to undertake the natural physical shock of the upset and the unnatural element. But upsets often comes when we are in such good parade condition. Fright puts a heavy strain on our entire system. In my newspaper travelling, and in soldiering, I have had countless experiences of being frightened. Once I was frightened because I have been unexpectedly dumped in the water, I have invariably been frightened by the absurdity in the human species. It is nothin' to be ashamed of. How, then, can we persuade the young people, to whom being frightened is shameful, to accept the reality of such challenge to their courage? When I am frightened I am ready to do what seems the manly thing. Then they strike out boldly for shore.

Several agencies such as the Red Cross, the Canadian Legion and other advertisers distribute stickers and posters to remind people of losing hold of the craft if upset. But a simple device that I noticed in a local pool could if a summer resort was a simple tag, such as is tied on luggage. These tags were inscribed in ordinary handwriting: "If upset, don't let go of the boat. Push it to shore." They were tied onto the gunwales, and sometimes curiously inquired all users of the boat to read the tag. Many a young life can be saved by a little flashback like that on the part of somebody in every family that owns a water craft.

Canada, Britain, India Discuss Indochina Future

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—Canada, Britain and India today joined in private talks on the future of Indochina. The discussions took place outside the framework of the meetings of Commonwealth prime ministers, which end Friday.

External Affairs Minister Pearson talked with Krishna Menon, right-hand man to Prime Minister Nehru of India on foreign affairs, and Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd of Britain. Canada and India, with Poland as the third member, are represented on the international commission on Indochina.

"There are occasionally differences of approach between Canada and India, largely on questions as the Indian desire for appearances that elections will be carried out in Vietnam in accordance with the Geneva agreements of 1954."

Earlier, Pearson had a talk with Gen. Alfred Gruenther, who is retiring soon as supreme commander of Allied forces in Europe. Their conversations presumably dealt with the future of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, which Pearson is particularly in mind as a member of the three-man ministerial committee studying NATO's future prospects.

HOPE SUPPLY URANIUM

Wednesday, one of the subjects of chief Canadian interest at the conference of prime ministers was the peaceful use of atomic energy. Prime Minister St. Laurent, outlining the Canadian position, indicated that Canada is on the way to becoming the world's leading producer of uranium, and is hopeful of having supplies available for export to interested countries.

Canada's chief market for uranium now is the United States. It is hoped by next year to widen the supply, subject to international arrangements to be made under the aegis of the United Nations this autumn.

Today the premiers are to discuss among other things a draft communique to be issued when the plenary sessions end Friday night.

The Canadian delegates will leave immediately afterwards for Canada and expect to be in Ottawa Saturday morning.

FOUR-WEEK-OLD

It had been reported earlier that the well-to-do parents were prepared to comply with the ransom demand.

An effort was made at first to hush up the entire, nightmarish incident in deference to the kidnapper's wishes.

Neither police, the distraught family nor sympathetic and worried neighbors would discuss it. But word leaked out as the hunt for the kidnapper spread.

Then, police sources disclosed that the ransom note went substantially like this:

"I hate to do this to you but I am in great need. I am scared stiff. You must put $2,000 in small bills in a garage . . . before 10 o'clock tomorrow or we will bill your baby. We could ask for more but we . . . only for what we need."

Commented one policeman:

"The work of an amateur and . . . a badly mixed-up person."

CHARGE U.S. TOURIST WITH ROBBERY

Detectives Wilson and Baxter field count the money found in a record player of the Bowen motel suite.

Less than two hours after a bank at Agincourt, Ont., was robbed of $4,851, police had arrested U.S. tourist Jack L. Bowen of Warner-Robbins, Ga., and had recovered most of the loot. Also found was a Belgian automatic pistol with a shell in the firing chamber, believed to have been used in the hold-up. The suspect was apprehended when his car was spotted in a Scarboro motel a few miles from the scene of the robbery. Bowen's wife and two children were with him in the motel when he was taken into custody.

Polish Board Presses Probe Into Rioting

BERLIN (AP) — A Communist Polish commission pressed its inquiry today into the Poznan riots that left hundreds dead and wounded.

The commission — granted power of life and death by Premier Josef Cyrankiewicz—began hearings Wednesday in Poznan, scene of last week's bloody uprising for food and freedom.

The commission heard evidence from workers on what caused the outbreak. Then it brought in Poznan officials to answer charges of "cowardice and negligence."

The official East German news service said Cyrankiewicz told officials the commission would make recommendations to the cabinet after it completed its inquiry.

PURGE PREDICTED

It appeared that the sweeping purge would extend into the ranks of government and party.

Blocked by telephoto, Lech Jestka, editor of the Communist paper Gazeta Poznanska in Poznan, denied rumors that some rebels already had been executed.

The Warsaw radio announced, meanwhile, that Poland's Red Cross had turned down a U.S. offer to send free food to Poznan and other Polish areas.

The broadcast declared the offer was refused because "this was not meant as genuine help for Poland, but had a propaganda character and was connected with the unfriendly attitude toward Poland."

73-Year-Old Skipper Wins Freeman Cup

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP)—Eric Moore of Rochester, 73-year-old skipper of the cruiser-class White Squall Weekender, won the overall championship in the Freeman Cup sailing races from Toronto to Rochester.

Moore's time for the race across Lake Ontario was 22 hours and four minutes. He was awarded the Louise Freeman Cup.

Fifty-seven boats of various classes began the race Tuesday but only 30 finished. Rough weather forced most of the others out.

Peter Davidson of the Royal Canadian Yacht Club, Toronto, won the Charles Freeman Cup in the international division in his eight-metre Venture.

Larry Muir of Toronto won the boats finished.

Mickey Mantle Out of Lineup Couple of Days

BOSTON (AP) — For the third time in less than a year, Mickey Mantle's right leg has become baseball's No. 1 medical problem.

The slugging New York Yankee outfielder, who currently is ahead of Babe Ruth's seasonal 60 home-run record, suffered a "possible tear" of the ligaments of his right knee Wednesday in the first game of a doubleheader with Boston Red Sox.

How long will the injury keep Mantle out of the Yankee lineup?

"I'd guess two or three days, anyway," said New York trainer Gus Mauch. "We have to wait a day to see if the leg puffs up."

"Mickey will be okay," said Yankee manager Casey Stengel. "He'll be able to play in a couple of days. I don't think it's too bad."

NOT TOO MUCH

"I can't run on it," said Mantle, "but it doesn't hurt too much. I was ready for pinch-hitting in the second game."

Trainer Mauch described the injury as a "possible tear of the lateral ligaments on the right side of the knee."

He said it is different from the injury which kept the Yankee star out of the lineup during last season's world series with Brooklyn. It's not the same as the injury that hampered Mickey during the past spring training season.

"Mantle won't be ready tomorrow," said Stengel, referring to the Yanks' day-night doubleheader with the Red Sox. "I'm worried about his being ready even for the weekend series with Washington."

Time Payments Criticized By N.Z. Minister

WELLINGTON (Reuters) — A suggestion that New Zealanders are overdoing the purchase of items by credit has brought Dame Hilda Ross, minister for the welfare of women and children, into controversy.

Giving her views on the easy credit system to a meeting attended by 400 Auckland women, Dame Hilda said: "I know I am sticking my neck out because so much business is founded on time payment but people should not commit themselves too much to this system. It is wrong for young married people to try to furnish their entire home by time payment."

She said she knew people who became ill and unable to work "then the furniture for which they had half paid was taken away from them." Young people she said, made "a serious mistake" when they felt they needed wall-to-wall carpeting, a refrigerator, a washing machine and venetian blinds as soon as they were married.

BEGIN THRIFT

"I know it is terrible to attack this system," Dame Hilda told the meeting, "but I have myself got convinced that there is any hope per life than by saving and paying for what you buy."

Dame Hilda's statements attracted both support and opposition.

From another quarter came the view of the assistant manager of the Auckland Savings Bank, M. M. Corner, who recently returned from a three-month visit to the United States.

Corner said a leading American banker had told him that buying on credit is "an important weapon for the country's stability." Corner said he found that the American worker, because his house, car, washing machine and refrigerator were all bought on time payment, enjoyed a high standard.

Wellington Retailers Operating Credit Plans say the system is not being abused and is a useful form of compulsory saving.

Early this year a royal commission on monetary banking and credit systems reported that instead of saving to spend, people have undertaken contractual obligations which mean that the saving comes after the spending."

The governor of the reserve bank, E. C. Fussell, in evidence before the commission, said he would be the last to suggest that because it had some inflationary factors, credit buying should be abandoned. Fussell said time buyers had a powerful incentive to increase their earnings to meet such obligations.

Five Daughters Surprise Parents on 43rd Anniversary

It was ten a.m., on July 1st, when, with horns blaring and passengers shouting and waving, five cars converged on the driveway at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Little, Shannonville. Out of the cars the daughters and all the grandchildren tumbled. This was the beginning of a wonderful surprise party for the 43rd wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Little. It was the first time in many years that the five daughters and Lily had been together at one time. Those present were the home of their parents.

By one p.m., there was a party of 50 or more guests from places in Ontario as far apart as Centralia in the west, to Cornwall in the east, and Angus in the north, and from New York State, as far west as Buffalo, and east to Lyons Falls. They all partook of a lawn celebration picnic. The 'eats' were provided by the girls from cold meats and salads to a beautifully decorated anniversary cake and ice cream.

The centre table was decorated with pink peonies, red roses and Sweet William.

During the luncheon, the girls presented the happy parents with a different kind of bouquet—the bouquet was placed in a green old-fashioned porcelain cutter with wrought iron runners. On close inspection the various colored petals turned out to be bills of Canadian currency for a considerable amount.

A number of guests who arrived in Milltown on Saturday spent the night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur McBride, in order that they could all arrive at their parents' home at the same time on Sunday morning.

Among the out-of-town guests were: Mrs. Violet Benton and Mr. William McArthur, sister and brother of Mrs. Little; Ft. Lt. R. Little, and son; Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Little and family, brothers of Mr. Little; Mrs. Elaine Scott and family, Mrs. Lena Barrett, Mr. Earl Jackson, Mr. H. Hammecker, and Mrs. Ida Hammecker.

Several friends and neighbors called during the day.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECHMAN

APPROPRIATE WORD-WIRE TO SAY TO BRIDE

Dear Mrs. Beechman:

I've noticed that so often a reader asks you just what to say to the bride and groom as one goes down the receiving-line at a wedding reception. I think this is a very important question, and I also think a wedding guest is very lucky when she knows a nice thing to say that will always be suitable. Of course it's easy as far as the groom is concerned. "Congratulations" makes it very simple. And now I've chosen a way to say to the bride, "I wish you great happiness," I can make it even more personal by saying her name first. "Peggy dear, I wish you great happiness." And if there is time enough, I can say, "What a beautiful wedding, and what a beautiful bride you make." Now, dear Peggy, I wish you great happiness." Do you approve of this, or do you think it has too much sameness? — Ione.

I most heartily approve of your wisdom in always being fortified with a good thing to say. And you have hit on a perfect thing to say on every wedding reception occasion . . . "I wish you great happiness." This graceful word-wish can be dressed up, as you suggest, and by your tone of voice and graciousness of manner as you say your wish, you can give it an added grace.

NO ONE MET THE TRAIN

Dear Mrs. Beechman:

Last week end my sister and I went to visit for the first time some friends of ours who live in town some distance from where we live. These friends aren't intimate friends of ours, but we are good friend of them and we wanted to put our "best foot forward." We took the train they asked us to take, and when we arrived at the station there was no one to meet us. Then my sister and I had a big discussion as to what we should do. I saw a car at the station that had a card reading "Taxi" on the front window, and I thought we should take that to our hostess' house. But my sister insisted there had probably been a mistake and that we should telephone to say we'd arrived. I thought this would look like a "Please come to meet us" but she telephoned anyway. They told us to take the taxi, we did, and when we arrived at the house, we paid the fare and gave the tip. Is this the usual procedure? Did we do the right thing by telephoning, or should we have just taken it for granted we were expected to take the taxi.—Confused Sisters.

The hostess should have told you just what the arrival-arrangements would be. If someone in the family could not meet you, this should have been made clear and you should have been told "But there is always a taxi at the station" and please take that and we'll settle with the driver." Or very much better and more courteous, "We're sorry we won't be able to meet you, but we've arranged with a local cab-driver to meet you. He'll be paid for this in advance . . . so no payment to him, please." You did the right thing by telephoning, for the taxi might have left and you would be "waiting at the station a long time!

BEAUTY

By MME. QUI VIVE

SUMMER RELAXATION IMPORTANT TO THE BUSY HOMEMAKER

A little rest and self-pampering will keep the busiest housewife youthfully pretty.

If she could only learn to relax more, the average homemaker would progress faster and further along the path that leads to beauty and charm. This is not to say that homemakers are less beautiful or charming than other women; on the contrary, most of them are just as smart as their working sisters and, when they "step out," one would never dream that they spent hours over dusting, mopping, cooking and the thousands of other chores that fill the average day. The trouble is, however, that because they won't take time out to relax, they have do spend twice as much time on a beauty routine than they would otherwise.

The modern homemaker sets almost impossible standards for herself. And, because she is a perfectionist, she practically "knocks herself out" in her efforts to keep her home spic and span. Now that's all very fine, of course, but what's the use of having a home in which not even a microscope would reveal a grain of dust, if Mother is no tense and tired that she makes life miserable for her husband as happens when a woman insists on scrubbing kitchen floors every day, dusting furniture constantly and, when she hasn't anything else to do, taking out the silverware and giving it a good polishing. Nervous tension is bound to set in and, once it has, the whole family feels its effects.

For the sake of her health and beauty, the homemaker should plan her schedule so that she gets a couple of hours to herself daily. She can do it in one of two ways. She can either take ten minutes out of every hour and just sit quietly by relaxing, or she can plan her work that in the afternoon she has a whole two hours in which to read, relax or just plain pamper herself. After all, if a woman hasn't serenity and peace of mind, no amount of skin lotions, hair styling or cosmetic tricks can possibly restore the beauty and freshness she loses by following a program of Go! Go! Go! seven days a week. Especially in summer time, when wilting heat increases the damage to frayed nerves, it is important for the homemaker to learn the art of relaxation.

Without rushing or straining, try to finish chores as early as possible—before the heat of day gets you down. Then, in the couple of hours you've allotted to yourself, carry out a truly pampering program. First step is a nice warm tub, made fragrant with your favorite bath oil or bath salts. Enjoy the luxury to the fullest and really r-e-l-a-x. Then give yourself "the treatment" for the day. One day it can be a facial, the next a manicure, the third a pedicure, etc. Surround yourself with an aura of fragrance—talcum, cologne, toilet water or perfume - and be lavish with it. It will make you feel heavenly. Finally, slip into the prettiest housecoat you have and take to the chaise lounge or the sofa. Lie with your head back, eyes closed and think of the pleasantest things you can. Forget housework; never mind if Junior will be back in a couple of hours tracking up the kitchen with mud. If you're really relaxed, you'll be able to laugh about it. And laughter in itself is a tonic!

Meringue Wisdom by Kae

(Guest column by Kae Belkintyne—reader-friend of Mary's)

After meeting your precious little grandson the other evening and learning of the amazing variety of foods he is getting at the tender age of six weeks, my mind went back two decades or so, to the days when you and I were raising our respective first born infants, and there certainly have been a few changes—even to the directions on the tapioca package! Years ago the stiffly beaten egg whites was folded in; now, it is first made into a meringue and as such, combines much more readily.

I have tried the same idea in other things, and like the results, especially Spanish Cream and in Whirlwind Cake. (both recipes are economical and comparatively low in calories.) I have heard of and experienced, an occasional failure with the latter—due, I suspect, to the egg whites being beaten first (to save washing the beater twice) and then sprinkling the flour, 1 1-3 teaspoons baking powder, pinch of salt, 6 tablespoons fine white sugar, 3-4 cup fine white sugar, 1-2 teaspoon each vanilla and 1-3 teaspoon almond flavoring. Put the yolks in your largest bowl and the whites in a medium-sized bowl. Beat the whites with the cream of tartar, then gradually add the 6 tablespoons sugar, beating until egg whites will stand in peaks. Beat egg yolks, gradually adding the water and keep beating until mixture measures 1 cup. Sift in the 3-4 cup sugar (still beating) then the sifted dry ingredients. Add vanilla. Fold in the meringue. Bake in tube pan at 325 deg. Fahr. 1 hour, then invert pan 1 hour to cool.

SPANISH CREAM
(Kae B.'s)

Soak 1 envelope plain gelatin in 2 cups milk in top of double boiler. Heat until dissolved. Beat yolks of 3 eggs with 1-3 cup brown sugar and add to milk and stir until mixture steams. Remove from stove. Beat 2 egg whites stiff with 3 tablespoons sugar. Fold into mixture, adding pinch of salt and a teaspoon vanilla. Pour into dessert bowl and refrigerate until set. This may be unmolded onto a serving dish if desired, and garnished with fruit —fresh, canned or frozen, and whipped cream for added flavor and eye appeal.

So much for meringues in things. Here's one to cover a pie that my friend Gertrude C. makes, and with her permission I'd like to pass it on, for it was a real find because it makes such a high, wide and handsome topping that you'd swear there were 3 egg whites in it.

GERT'S MERINGUE

Two egg whites, 2 tablespoons cold water, scant 1-3 cup sugar, 1-2 teaspoon baking powder, 1-2 teaspoon vanilla. Beat egg whites until foamy, add water gradually, still beating until fairly stiff, then gradually add the ingredients and continue beating until meringue stands in peaks. Cover pie, touching pastry all round. Bake 15 to 20 minutes at 300 deg.

Bye now and thanks for the honor of "curating" in your column.—Kae B.

ADVICE To The LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

WERE YOU FAIR ENOUGH TO TRY

Dear Beatrice Fairfax:

At 20 years old, I have been married for three years and have two children. To marry so young was not my choice, but my parents forced me into it because I had an affair with a boy and was pregnant.

Even though this boy was glad to marry me, I didn't feel the same about it. In fact, after we had the affair I seemed to turn against him.

Our marriage has been anything but happy. We just don't get along. All we do is argue and quarrel. My husband seems to think it is all my fault, but what I think is that we never should have got married at all.

I want a divorce, and my husband is willing, but I've been told that I have no grounds for divorce. Can you tell me if there is any way I can get one?—Mrs. S.D.

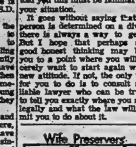
Dear Mrs. S.D.:

You say that even though the man you married was glad to marry you, he didn't want to marry him. A change of feeling such as you have very frequently happens in cases where girls have been intimate with boys and then deeply regretted it. This is something that I fervently wish young people could realize before they make such a reckless mistake.

Be that as it may, however, and circumstances being as they were, it seems to me you should have been fair enough to make a sincere effort to make a success of your marriage. Possibly you did try, but not hard enough or intelligently enough. Possibly, on the other hand, your husband may be right and the failure of the marriage so far has been largely your fault. Since you married so much against your will, your resentment may have prevented you then pulling your heart into the attempt to turn a bad start into something good.

I suggest that you think this over before making up your mind that the only possible solution is divorce. As for whether or not you have grounds for divorce I have, of course, no way of knowing. You say you've been told that you don't have, so I assume that whoever told you this must be familiar with your situation.

It goes without saying that if a person is determined on a divorce there is always a way to get it. But I hope that perhaps some good honest thinking may bring you to a point where you will sincerely want to start again with a new attitude. If not, the only thing for you to do is to consult a reliable lawyer who can be trusted to tell you exactly where you stand legally and what the law will permit you to do about it.



POPULAR COLOR SCHEME

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

The theme of black and white carries through every phase of summer dressing no matter what other color combinations may be getting the promotion treatment. Ever so thrilling is this color combination and it is used with fine effect for a number of interesting accessories to spark up black or white basics. Black straw cloth is used for the beach hat, the crown prettily draped with a black dotted white cotton bandana. Awning striped black and white cotton for a handbag that is fashionably slim and set on a gilt frame. Black patent leather with black and white cotton falls for a sling-back closed toe pump that could go smartly with the handbag for an effective duo.

Must Accept Responsibility Says Speaker

EDMONTON (CP)—If a woman is to perform the same job as a man in the field of journalism she must accept the responsibility that goes with it, Alberta Economic Affairs Minister A. Russell Patrick said Tuesday.

Mr. Patrick said at a banquet of the Canadian Women's Press Club that women must not feel "they possess a special escape mechanism."

"Women in the business world—and especially in your great profession—can easily miss the boat in not recognizing . . . differences in the emotional make-up of the sexes," he said.

"If you will recognize them . . . then I believe you can do a better job in your profession than a man can do."

Floral Tribute

By TRACY ADRIAN

Rosana Rory, lovely young Hollywood star, models this chic and charming hat that is just right for mid-summer wear with sheer, pretty frocks.

The chapeau is made of a natural straw and is almost completely covered with roses, lilacs, green leaves and it has loops of velvet ribbon placed strategically around the tiny brim.

Women's Activities

MT. PLEASANT—RAWDON W.A.

RAWDON — Mrs. Cyrus Summers was hostess for the quarterly meeting of Mount Pleasant-Rawdon W.A. with 23 women in attendance.

Mrs. K. Weaver presided over the opening exercises with Mrs. Harvey Couch as pianist.

Following the reports, it was decided to hold a bazaar at the church hall on November 8th. It was announced that any family could provide flowers from their home gardens for the various church services and they could be placed by the person who brought them wherever they desired.

Mrs. W. G. Fletcher and Mrs. Milford Wrightman gave reports of the recent W.A. convention held in Tabernacle Church, Belleville.

Miss Doris Sine presided over the program and read a poem, "Life is a blend of joy and sorrow."

Mrs. Morris Spencer read the 11th Psalm; Mrs. Burton Sharpe the W.A. meditation from the booklet. The theme was, "The Psalm of Social Consciousness," and it is the confession of one who feels responsible for conditions around him, and who believes by upholding the right he is doing God's will and serving God's cause. The righteous man must take a firm stand against evil in every form. God's voice must be heard through his servants.

Three readings were given, as follows: Mrs. Cyrus Summers, "The World Is Mine;" Mrs. Percy MacMullen, "Mandy Visits a City Church" and Mrs. Herbert Smith, "The Gift of Time."

Mrs. James Hoard contributed a solo with Mrs. Ross Hoard as accompanist.

Refreshments were provided by Miss Doris Sine and Mrs. Lindsay McKeown and all enjoyed a social half hour.

Departing Pastor Presented With Farewell Gifts

WELLINGTON — On the evening of June 26th the members of St Andrew's Guild, along with the members of Hillier Guild and members of their congregations gathered at the town hall in Wellington to bid adieu to their minister and his wife, the Rev. C. F. and Mrs. Heaven.

Mr. Heaven and Mrs. Heaven have been in this parish for the past eight years and are now going to make their home in Belleville. He was also the Rural Dean of the County of Prince Edward.

Mr. Heaven preached his farewell sermon on June 24th.

Among those present were the Rev. Harrison Flint of Milford; the Rev. DeNeis Wright, Picton, with their wives and also the Rev. T. Rendell of Carrying Place and Ameliasburg, with his bride of a few weeks.

The clergy spoke during the evening of the great privilege it has been to work with Mr. and Mrs. Heaven and of their association both socially and with their ministerial duties.

Mr. Wright presented him with a suitable gift on behalf of the clergy to show their appreciation.

Mr. D. Gray, minister's warden, acted as chairman during the evening, introducing the various speakers.

Mrs. Warner McFaul, on behalf of the Hillier ladies, presented Mrs. Heaven with a small gift and also spoke a few appropriate words.

Mrs. Sam Tripp, on behalf of the Wellington ladies, also spoke a few words and presented Mrs. Heaven with a gift.

Mr. Warner McFaul was then called upon to make a few suitable remarks on behalf of Christ Church, Hillier. He spoke with great feeling of his association as Warden with Rural Dean Heaven.

Gerald Spriggins, people's warden of St. Andrew's Church, Wellington, also spoke briefly and on behalf of the Wellington and Hillier congregations, presented Rural Dean Heaven with a purse of money.

Both the Rural Dean and Mrs. Heaven thanked the people most graciously for the various gifts that had been presented to them and spoke of the sadness of parting.

After this, a social sitdown was enjoyed by all present, with the ladies of Hillier and Wellington Guilds served refreshments.

LIVING COSTS RISE

Living costs made their biggest monthly rise in five years during May, boosting the consumer price index by 1.2 points to 117.8. The index, based on 1949 prices equalling 100, now has reached the second highest level in its history. It was unchanged in April after increasing by one-fifth of a point in March. The United States index (dotted line) in May rose 4 points to 115.4, also an all-time high. The Canadian cost-of-living yardstick reflected the sudden rise almost entirely due to a jump in food prices, although other segments of the index also increased slightly. (CP Photo) 1956

FICTON

Boat Located 40 Feet Down In Bay of Quinte

FICTON — Following a four-day search, the unlimited speed boat "What-A-Pickle" was located in 40 feet water in Picton Bay late yesterday afternoon. The craft, owned by Gordon Deneau of Detroit, sank during the race at Prince Edward Yacht club regatta on Saturday.

Due to the fact that the boat sank before a line could be attached and it was necessary to leave the spot due to races which followed, the exact spot was hard to locate later.

Divers from Kingston went down Sunday but were hampered by deep silt in the bottom of the bay.

Trenton RCAF lend assistance using machines to locate metal objects. Yesterday afternoon when a rope with hooks was dropped, a clang was heard and it proved to be the missing $100,000 craft.

$25,000,000 Petrochemical Plant Will Be Constructed At Sarnia Says Oil Company

ROCKETS TO RECORD

A navy Aerobee-HI rocket zooms from its launching tower at White Sands Proving Grounds, N.M., to a new world altitude record for single - stage rockets of 400 miles. The rocket will serve as the second stage of the three-stage rocket that scientists hope will carry an earth satellite into an orbit around the earth. —Central Press Canadian.

TORONTO (CP)—A $25,000,000 petrochemical plant, which is expected to attract other industries several times its own value, will be built at Sarnia by Imperial Oil Ltd., J. R. White, company president, announced today.

Engineering work now is under way, construction crews will move in next spring, and production is expected by the spring of 1958.

The new project, located near Imperial's Sarnia refinery and drawing "feed stock" from it, will produce basic chemicals such as ethylene, propylene, normal butylenes, isobutylenes, butadiene aromatic distillates and tars. Other chemicals can be made available as they are needed.

WILL BE PROCESSED

The basic chemicals, it is planned, will be sold to other industries which will process them into such things as plastic objects, antifreeze, detergents, synthetic fibres for textiles, rubber objects and gasoline additives.

A number of such industries, Imperial expects, will be attracted to Sarnia by the ample supply of basic chemicals.

"The whole country's dependence on imports for raw and finished chemicals will be lessened," his announcement said, adding that the chemicals to be made are ones which will be needed if the phenomenal post-war growth of the chemical industry in the United States is to be matched in Canada.

Mr. White said that Sarnia, already an important chemical centre, is strategically situated for further growth because it has an assured supply of western crude oil for its refineries, is near Canadian chemical markets and is on the projected St. Lawrence seaway system.

TO FOSTER GROWTH

He added that recent purchases of land adjacent to Imperial's refinery were part of the company's plans to foster growth of allied chemical plants and to provide them with sites.

The new plant itself will be on a 50-acre site, it is expected to create 175 new jobs, including 60 men to run the plant, plus employees for laboratory and other services.

Butadiene from the new plant will be the first produced in Canada by private industry and will be supplied, along with butylenes to the crown-owned Polymer Corporation for its rubber-making operations. Ethylene capacity will more than double present Canadian capacity.

The project is also expected to involve some expansion of Imperial's refinery.

For Nine Days Girl Heard Cars 300 Feet Away

SALT LAKE CITY (AP)—An 18-year-old California girl says she heard automobiles passing within 300 feet of her as she lay helpless for nine days under the wreckage of a car. Twenty feet away lay the body of her fiance.

Jean Margetis of Sunnyvale, Calif., spoke briefly Wednesday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Margetis, as she recovered in hospital from her ordeal.

Jean was rescued Tuesday night after an airplane spotted the wreckage of the car at the bottom of a 300-foot embankment just off a highway east of here. Highway patrolmen at first thought Jean and her fiance, Dennis Hixon, 22, of Salt Lake City, were dead. But when a patrolman lifted a heavy log from the girl's legs she cried out.

The two had been the object of a state-wide search since they disappeared while on a fishing trip June 24. They were to have been married in September.

Jean was badly emaciated when brought to a Salt Lake hospital. She had no food or water during the nine days she was trapped. She also suffered a skull fracture. At first listed as critical, she was later reported in fair condition.

"She was quite coherent and little she talked to us," the girl's father said. "She said she regained consciousness often and could hear traffic passing along the highway above but was unable to call out because she was so weak.

"Mrs. Margetis and I must have driven within a few hundred feet of her dozens of times and didn't know she was there as we trifled to help in the search for Jim and Jean."

Margetis said "she probably knew the boy was dead."

"Just a Second"

"I looked down the card until I saw a horse I fancied, then I stuck a pin in it."

Britain Will Not Cede Colonies To South Africa

LONDON (CP) — Britain Wednesday night delivered a refusal to South Africa's demands for sovereignty over three British protectorates.

A South African—British statement disclosed that South Africa's Premier J. G. Strijdom—here for the conference of Commonwealth prime ministers—demanded that Swaziland, Basutoland and Bechuanaland be quickly incorporated with his country.

A 1,000,000 Negroes live in the three protectorates. South Africa's National government says it needs the territories for strategic reasons and for resettlement of Negroes unable to call out because she was so weak.

"Mrs. Margetis and I must have driven within a few hundred feet of her dozens of times and didn't know she was there as we trifled to help in the search for Jim and Jean."

Margetis said "she probably knew the boy was dead."

"Just a Second"

"I looked down the card until I saw a horse I fancied, then I stuck a pin in it."

The basic statement added: "United Kingdom ministers restate the position of the U. K. government and agreement was not reached." Britain has long insisted she will not give up the territories before consulting the inhabitants and the British Parliament. Both would be sure to reject any transfer present conditions.

South Africa's quarrel with Britain over the protectorates goes back a long time. When the union was formed in 1910 Britain promised eventually to transfer Swaziland (6,704 square miles) Basutoland (11,716 square miles) and Bechuanaland (285,000 square miles) to South Africa. Negotiations to this end were nearly completed in 1939 when war broke out and the issue was shelved.

Successively the late field marshal Jan Smuts, ex-premier Daniel Malan and now Strijdom have sought in the past 17 years to reach a settlement. Each time Britain has refused and reminded the South Africans of British obligations to consult the Negroes and her own Parliament. Britain insists that the proposal could be carried only if all parties to it when South Africa's strict racial policies have become a subject of worldwide controversy.

Canada's Biggest Peacetime Parade Held in New Brunswick

Biggest peacetime military parade in Canada's history was held in Camp Gagetown, N.B., when the whole First Canadian Infantry Division was marching. This unit of the Royal Canadian Artillery was in full battle order for the event; driving machine guns, tankmen with bicycles, with sub-machine guns, tankmen with bicycles. In all, 21 units participated.

Trained for the parade square is the goat mascot of the Second Battalion, Royal Canadian Regiment. Goat-Major Corporal Jacquette has him trained to kneel instead of saluting. There were 11,000 soldiers in the parade.

Air Force Studying Closely Automation in Air Defence

By DAVE McINTOSH

Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—The RCAF is studying closely the need for automation in the air defence system.

Automation could mean the use of automatic computing equipment to replace, for instance, the man at the radar scope watching for the tell-tale "ships" denoting the presence of aircraft within the radar's range.

NOT DECIDED YET

An RCAF spokesman said Wednesday it has not been decided whether the American electronic control system known as SAGE (Semi - Automatic Ground Environment) or some similar type of equipment will be introduced into the Canadian air defence system.

But Defence Production Minister Howe indicated last week in the Commons that a decision may not be far off.

"Large new projects are in prospect in the area of air defence communications," he said.

Canadian defence department officials have indicated that they are not keen about the SAGE system, designed to increase capability of the United States air defence system five to 10 times.

It will reduce to automation practically every essential step in the air defence process. For instance, an electronic tube, instead of a man, will watch the radar scope, extract the necessary data and send it automatically to a control centre.

Officials here have said the SAGE system has never been tested under war conditions and that they plan to rely more on the human factor. However, they add that some operations in the Canadian air defence system should be made automatic, mainly in communicating information from one point to another.

BUENOS AIRES (Reuters) — Authorities have rejected a claim by ex-president Juan Peron for the return of his possessions in Argentina. The board for the recovery of national wealth said that most of the former ruler's fortune in Argentina was "ill-gotten" and now belongs o the Agentine people.

Three Escapees Responsible for Two Bank Holdups

MONTREAL (CP)—Quebec provincial police said today they have definitely established that three escaped convicts were responsible for two bank holdups Wednesday which netted an estimated $14,000.

Police said two armed men who robbed a branch of the Provincial Bank of Canada of $10,000 and $12,000 at Yamachiche, Que., have been identified as Fernand Dube, 28, and Gilles Hamel, 22.

The third convict—Gaston Marcel, 22—had been identified as the gunman who fled with $2,000 after holding up a caisse populaire (credit union) in Montreal's east end.

Police have intensified their search for the suspects and have issued new warnings that the men are armed and dangerous.

The convicts have evaded police dragnets since their escape last Friday from the federal penitentiary at nearby St. Vincent-de-Paul.

Dube, described as the ring-leader, was serving a 16-year term for aggravated assault, theft and other crimes. Marcel was also serving 10 years for armed "robbery while Hamel was serving a five-year sentence for breaking and entering and theft.

Police officers refers to "accost Marcel with tremendous caution because he is believed to be somewhat mentally deranged and extremely vicious when cornered. The rules apply, however, to others connected with the law," the order added.

Liberal Beaten By Delayed Vote In North Sask.

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask. (CP) The CCF took a seat from the Liberal party Wednesday in a delayed vote in the northern Saskatchewan constituency of Athabasca. Victory gave the Socialist government 26 seats in the legislature.

John Harrop, accountant in the northern mining town of Uranium City, won for the CCF in the riding represented in the last legislature by Premier Tom Ripley, who did not seek re-election.

Mr. Harrop defeated Liberal Ted Matheson, Prince Albert lumberdasher, and John Bondoreff, Prince Albert independent man running for the Social, Credit party.

The two-week delay in voting after residents elsewhere in the province had named the other 52 representatives in the House was caused by a late spring breakup, which made travel difficult. In the June 20 vote, the CCF won 33 seats, the Liberals 14 and the Social Credit party three.

Standings after the 1952 election was CCF 42 and Liberals 11. The House was dissolved, and standings were CCF 41, Liberals 10, Progressive Conservatives one and vacant one.

Two Woodstock Babies Burned In Tiny Bedroom

WOODSTOCK (CP) — A sudden fire Wednesday in an old frame house used as a six-family dwelling suffocated two babies in their tiny bedroom while their mother was absent for a few minutes.

Victims were Lu Ann, 2, and George, 1, only children of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Trickett.

About eight other children were led out to safety, and some 30 persons were made homeless.

The blaze was believed to have started in the kitchen or the bedroom of the second floor three-room Trickett flat. The cause was unknown.

Bridgitte Kleyer, 14, sounded the alarm from her downstairs apartment when she smelled smoke.

Mrs. Carol Trickett ran upstairs but was beaten back by billowing smoke. Firemen and police arrived within minutes, and they tried to enter the second floor from the outside with a ladder but smoke forced them back.

SMASHED WINDOW

Provincial constable Pep Martin smashed a second floor window, but had to abandon his rescue attempt.

The babies' father was working in a plant only 200 yards away at the time of the outbreak.

Woodstock and district firemen battled the blaze more than an hour before it was brought under control. Fire loss was limited to the second storey but the whole building was damaged by smoke and water.

Other families living in the house included: Mr. and Mrs. George Walters and two children, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wilson and two children, Mr. and Mrs. H. Hickey and two children, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard De Jonge and one child.

Will Try Again To Reach Main Plane Wreckage

GRAND CANYON, Ariz. (AP) Two helicopter pilots and a mountain guide today planned to join in a dangerous scheme to reach the main wreckage of a United Air Lines DC-7 that crashed in the Grand Canyon with another big airliner five days ago.

One hundred and twenty-eight persons were killed in the disaster, the worst in commercial aviation history.

The helicopter pilots, Capt. Walter Sprigg of Smackover, Ark., and Chief Warrant Officer Howard Proctor of Kings Mountain, N.C., volunteered Wednesday night to try to get a mountain climber to the spot where the DC-7 fell.

Sprigg and Proctor said they will leave for the crash scene today with Allen Auten of Denver, a member of the Colorado Mountain Club.

If Auten can be dropped safely on the small ridge that holds much of the DC-7 wreckage, he can lower ropes to other climbers who will use the ropes to reach the bodies of the crash victims. The ridge is about 1,000 feet above the Colorado River.

Army Patrols Range Through Algeria's Main Cities in Wake Of General Strike Threat

By ROBERT E. DYMAN

ALGIERS (AP)—Heavily-armed military patrols ranged through Algeria's main cities today in the wake of new nationalist violence and the threat of a general strike.

Nationalist rebels struck in the heart of Algiers Wednesday night, setting a public garage afire and sending a suburban vegetable oil plant up in flames with a grenade attack.

The nationalists called for a general strike today—1961 anniversary of the French occupation of Algiers. They threatened to shoot anyone seen on the streets.

The French replied that any violence would meet with stern counter measures. Troops were put on the alert and extra patrols ordered out. Helicopters were placed on a standby to keep watch on the capital.

"The French termed the nationalist action a purely "political" strike.

REBELS SHOW CAUTION

The rebels themselves have insisted they are unwilling to go too far. Tracts urging Moslems to remain calm appeared in Algiers last night. They were signed by the Algerian nationalist movement.

The pamphlets cited a handfull of attacks by a nationalist movement—the Front of National Liberation. FLN was quoted as saying the leaders recognized they were trying to go too fast and might needlessly expose their followers to police action.

The pamphlets also said Communists were trying to move in on the demonstration and take it over.

Some officials say they believe there has been a switch in Moslem opinion against random rebel violence. They think nationalist leaders have found such attacks can often result in heavy rebel deaths and have gone too far for even some ardent nationalists.

Meanwhile, the checkerboard warfare between French and rebel raged on throughout the country. Reports reported their forces killed 70 rebels Wednesday in central and western Algeria.

Renfrew Man Charged With Arson, Wounding

RENFREW, Ont. (CP)—Janz Zaminzkis was charged with arson and wounding Wednesday following the shooting of his teenage daughter and the burning of his home.

The 52-year-old Latvian garage mechanic was arrested Tuesday after his daughter Ruth, 18, was shot in the shoulder as she fled from the Zaminzkis home.

Provincial police found the father barricaded in the home, which was packed to the blast of a crude dynamite bomb as they attempted to enter the house. With the upper part of the building ablaze, Zaminzkis crawled through a rear window and surrendered.

Mayor, Nine Council Members Defeated at Polls

MONTREAL (CP)—One of the stormiest elections in the history of nearby Caughnawaga ended Wednesday with the defeat of Mayor Joseph A. Beauvais and nine other members of the 12-man council.

Dissatisfaction with the former council's handling of negotiations with the federal government concerning lands expropriated by the St. Lawrence Seaway Authority was said to be responsible for the ousting of incumbent councillors.

A mayor will be selected at a meeting of the group next week from the ranks of the 12 elected councillors.

During the day, car horns sounded, traffic on the highway which runs through the town was tied up for hours and excited townsfolk perched on rooftops to get a broader picture of goings-on.

In former years, election by acclamation has been a common feature on the reserve. This year, a total of 21 contested the 12 seats. Indians make up the greater part of the population of the community.

Toronto Golfer in Third Place After 18 Holes in British Open

HOYLAKE, England (CP)—Toronto's Al Balding, firing no less than seven birdies, was in a four-way tie for third place after 18 holes of play in the British Open as a comparatively little-known Welshman held the lead after equalling the record for the tough Hoylake course.

A couple of fives on the last two holes—the only ones he shot in over-par figures, prevented Dennis Smaldon from shattering Hoylake's competitive mark for the second time in three days. But his 68, matching a qualifying round by South Africa's Gary Player Monday, was still good enough for first place at the end of Wednesday's round.

Balding, in with a one-under-par 70, outlasted the leader, who was under regulation figures only nine times. But the Toronto pro strayed over par on six holes, including a damaging three-hole stretch at the start of the incoming nine.

RIMMED THE CUP

"I went to sleep," was the 31-year-old Canadian's explanation of his temporary lapse, in which three straight putts rimmed the cup. But he needed no excuses for his par-or-better performance the rest of the way home, including a brilliant birdie three on the difficult 18th hole.

Stan Leonard of Vancouver and Lethuie, Que., was up with the leaders with a one-under 71 which left only 11 of the 80-man field ahead of him. He was one under par on the back nine after a shaky start.

Enrique Bertolino of Argentina was all by himself, a stroke behind Smaldon at 138. Defending champion Peter Thomson of Australia matched Balding's 70 as did Ted Ray and D. C. Thomas of England.

Then came five 71s, including Player, Roberto de Vicenzo of Mexico and Belgium's Flory van Donck.

AT LEONARD'S LEVEL

The top American, Frank Stranahan, was bracketed with Leonard at 72, together with English veteran Harry Cotton, Argentina's Antonio Cerda and seven others. Ireland's Joe Carr was the low amateur at 72.

Some of the better-known players had their troubles in the wind and the rain, which developed later in the day. While early starters like Smaldon and Balding had benefitted from near-perfect conditions.

South Africa's Bobby Locke, a three-time winner, shot a 75 after a big eight on the third hole, on which he needed three strokes to get out of a bunker.

Burly Mike Souchak of Berwick, Pa., was out of bounds twice but managed a 74. Gene Sarazen, the 1923 champion from Germantown, N.Y., had putting trouble and took a 78.

Latta Snaps Juveniles' String With 7-3 Victory

Latta snapped the Belleville Juveniles' unbeaten string at five games last night, downing the local lads 7-3 in a seven - inning South Hastings baseball league game.

Belleville held a 3-0 lead going into the bottom of the third when Latta plated five runs. They added a pair of insurance tallies in the sixth while the Juveniles netted their final tally in the fourth.

Stewart was on the hill all the way for Latta, surrendering five safeties. He nailed 11 on third strikes while pitching just one man.

Moe Huddleston started and took the loss for Belleville while Gord St. Louis finished up. They gave up eleven hits between them while fanning three and walking two and hitting one batter.

Chuck Klugston's double to start the second, followed by an error and St. Denis' single plated the local's initial run while an insurance tally came in 11 3-0.

Latta chased Huddleston in the third with hits by G. Gow, Ray, Sullivan, Hazard and two errors accounting for the five runs. Ingnition again got Belleville back in the game with a two-bagger, scoring later on errors for a 5-3 score after 3½ innings.

The winners wrapped up the decision with five solid clouts in the sixth, scoring two runs and having two more men put out at the plate. Singles by Stewart, W. Gow and Parks sandwiched among doubles by G. Gow and Sullivan told the story.

Sullivan and G. Gow each had a double and single to pace the winners while Ray and Hazard poked two singles each. The others went to W. Gow, Parks and Stewart.

Chuck Klugston's brace of doubles in three trips topped the Juveniles while Leo St. Denis, Gord. St. Louis and Moe Walmsley each had a one-bagger.

LINEUPS:

Power and Sail

By BILL ROBINSON

Boating's appeal as a family sport has been one of the big reasons for its phenomenal growth in recent seasons. No other form of recreation does a better job of bringing the family together for fun. Because of this, design and style trends have been aimed more and more at Mom, and another phase of fitting children into boating.

There are some cardinal rules. Most oh lifejackets until swimming comes naturally, and never try to do too much at one time. Each family has its own way of conducting these affairs, but it must be understood ahead of time.

Family boating is mainly confined to weekends, but more and more clubs and communities are discovering the value of a junior program during the week. When the youngsters become familiar with boating this way, they fit into grown-up operations better, are useful members of the crew, and have a lot of fun in the process.

An organized program can be set up in many different ways. Yacht clubs, civic clubs, municipal recreation groups, scouting organizations, swimming clubs or just an interested group of parents are possible sponsors.

The best ages are 8 to 15. Younger than 8, swimming ability is usually a problem. Although the greatest amount of boating is overwhelmingly in power boats and outboards, it is usually a better idea to begin instruction with small rowboats or sailboats. The now almost universally popular eight-foot pram, adapted to both rowing and sailing, is a very good boat for the younger ones. It is simple enough so the program can even be started with a cooperative construction program with kit boats, or from scratch.

Slightly larger sailboat types such as the Wood Pussy, Blue Jay, Nestle, Tumabout, Indian Scout, and many localized classes in the 12-14-foot size range, make excellent group instruction boats. The opportunity for competition in simple races adds zest.

A program like his can be practically self-supporting once the boats are arranged for. At our small club, a fee of $15 per season per child for once a week group lessons is enough to hire a college boy as a full-time instructor with a part-time assistant as well. Classes are split up in groups of 30 by a combination of age and experience, and are held from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Wood Pussy catboats are used, with five children to a boat taking turns at basic manoeuvres and short races.

Ashore they are given marlinspike seamanship, rules of the road, safety procedures and nomenclature. As a safety factor the instructor operates from a power-boat while afloat.

When youngsters learn rowing, boat handling and basic seamanship in this manner, it is a simple job to teach them powerboat operation when they are old enough for that. On tide waters there is no age restriction on power boat operation, but different states have varying minimum limits for the waters they control themselves.

Start 'em young, start 'em right, and they will enjoy all kinds of boating the rest of their lives.

More Confidence

Brockville Four Scores Easy Victory for Wyford Challenge Cup

HENLEY - on - THAMES, Eng. (CP) — Canada's entry in the Royal Henley Regatta, its spirits high after an easy win Wednesday, made London Rowing Club today its second-round competition for the Wyford Challenge Cup.

The four-man crew from Brockville, Ont., scored an easy victory over an Oxford Isis four in Wednesday's first-round eliminations.

The win restored the confidence of the Canadians who earlier in the day suffered defeat in the first heat of the Thames Challenge Cup competition for lightweight eights.

It was Canada's first appearance in either the Thames or Wyford contests. Thirty-two crews were entered in both events.

BY FIVE LENGTHS

The Brockville four covered the one-mile, 200-yard Wyford course in seven minutes, 38 seconds to head Isis by at least five lengths and noticeably slacked off the pace in the last 100 yards.

There was no slackening near the finish line for the Canadians as the earlier Thames Cup race when they more than met their match in a big Thames Rowing Club crew.

Brockville held level with Thames for the first half mile then gradually dropped back and despite a sustained spurt in the last half mile still trailed by two-thirds of a length at the finish. The time was seven minutes, 32 seconds, one of the fastest of the day.

HIGHLIGHT OF DAY

The Evening News says that the Canadian effort in the Thames Cup race was the highlight of the day and the only "bright spot" in a day as dull as the leaden skies.

Husky Vlace Rooney, Brockville factory worker and stroke for both Canadian crews, said after the Wyford victory had wiped some of the sting the crew's Thames defeat:

"This is more like it. We were able to win pretty much as we pleased. I only wish it had been the same this morning."

With Rooney in the Wyford event were his brother Jack, Moe Cody and Al McEnaney. The Rooney brothers and McEnaney are also members of the eights crew.

Wednesday was a trifle shocking to the old school of Henley enthusiasts. An eight composed of London dockers, men who work with their hands, defeated the University College of London in the Thames Challenge Cup event, and set up the best time of the day—seven minutes 30 seconds.

Henley, organized 117 years ago for gentleman oarsmen, until 1937 had a rule barring competitors who had to work for a living with their hands.

FINISHED SECOND

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Hamilton oarsmen took one second and one third place in the national championship of amateur oarsmen and the annual Peoples' Regatta, held in conjunction on the Schuylkill River Wednesday.

Rosewall Wins Berth in Fmal At Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (CP)— In one of the few predictable developments of an unpredictable year, little Ken Rosewall gave his ninth performance in the role of nemesis Wednesday as he stunned Vic Seixas out of the all-England tennis tournament and won a men's singles final berth for the second time in three years.

Year in and year out, the now 21-year-old Australian and the 33-year-old 1953 champion from Philadelphia have provided some of the most interesting tennis on the international circuit in their 10 meetings. But only once, in the 1954 Davis Cup challenge round, has Seixas managed to win.

In Wednesday's 4½-hour match, interrupted for two hours by rain, it appeared for a time as if the hard - fighting American would bring the score to 8-2.

WON AT FIRST

Displaying the harder service and volleying effectively, Seixas won two of the first three sets, dropped the fourth, then took a 5-2 lead in the fifth. But the little Aussie, who has an uncanny ability to place his shots right on the chalk-lines, fought back to take the next five games and the match, 6-3, 3-6, 6-8, 6-3, 7-5.

The crowd, supporting the underdog Philadelphian at the outset, turned against him when he disputed several calls during the match. And his departure drew boos as he declined to come to the net to congratulate his opponent and omitted the customary word of thanks to the umpire.

The weather forced postponement of most of the other matches.

HINT TO BASS SEEKERS

The old fisherman pointed to a quivering flapping four pounder of small-mouth black bass.

"There," he grinned, "is the lastest brawlingest roughneck of the bull dogged fish family. As that doc fella once said, 'Each for hook, pound for pound, he's the gamest fish that swims'."

Reports say they are not too plentiful in the Bay of Quinte haunts as yet, but stick around, brethern, Ole Brer Bass will be and is around is you know where and how to get him.

This bass bone is possessed of amazing fecundity. The average Mistress Bass will lay around 10,000 eggs each spring over a 8½ span of ten years. And the old man sees to it that the youngsters get a chance to survive, if not go to college.

After the old girl has deserted the nest, so to speak, to look for a new fish throb or the latest in piscatorial spring wear, the old boy zealously mounts guard over the new brood. And woe betide any stranger or hungry fish seeking a meal of sprightly young bass.

"I once saw," quoth the ancient fisherman, "a 17-inch pickerel swipe two cisco to a bass nest. There was a flurry in the water as the old bass erupted to the attack and a minute later the pickerel floated to the surface belly up with a chunk bitten out of its soft underside."

An American bass expert says there is nothing of the gourmet about the small or large-mouth bass. They like salamanders, snakes, frogs, grasshoppers, crickets, mice, moths, small birds and assorted chunks of wood, cork and metal.

For all this there are anglers who do not have much luck on their bass-fishing jaunts. Time was when you could go out with almost nothing for bait and come home with a string of the black-backed hellions.

Our ancient and venerable friend who has fished bass waters from the Hudson Bay to the Rio Grande said most of the reasons for bass not here any luck have to do with antiquated tackle and methods. Bass fishing, he claims, has stepped over the years.

By the end of the first year, he says, bass, in well-fished waters have seen about every type and design of lure on the market. Jitterbugs, Lindlures, bass bugs have memories.

But they have curiosity, too. His answer to "Give the bass something new — and he cannot resist it."

Most bass fishermen rely on plugs for bait. While plugs are good it is not the only way nor is it always the best way to hook them.

Bass are honorable and venerable friend. "Plugs are good — but bass bugs are better. Use 'em on a heavy fly rod. Those jaws are educated but you can still fool 'em with a bug."

"But," he added, "whatever bait you use, fast, bass or natural bait — fish them slowly and quietly." That's what the man said.

Fish slowly, he said, for that is where many anglers go astray. The modern fishermen have learned to throttle down their retrieves and thus catch more bass.

And he said about it, The rip-roaring angler who wants to yodel and bang his way in the boat, slashes his plugs like depth charges, gets only recreation and exercise. His haul is small to nothing.

Where to get 'em? That was the question we posed to the ancient one. He has the answer, too. Try it and see what happens. No guarantee goes with this suggestion.

"Most fellas," he said, "have the idea bass prefer to lurk among reed beds, lily pads, and nenuphar brush along the shorelines. They fish the shallows all day."

"That is partly true," he said, "but only at certain times. In the early morning they are in the shallows searching about in search of food. Then as the waters warm under the sun they begin moving out into deeper water."

If you're a mid-day fisherman and want bass, look for them in deep water and fish from there with live bait near the bottom or deep-running plugs. When the sun goes down behind the hills, Mr. Bass moves back into the shallows where frogs, minnows and insects hold nightly conventions.

"There are lots of bass everywhere," opined our ancient mariner. "And if you follow the simple rules — if you fish slowly and quietly — if you fish the deep water at mid-day and the shallows at night, and if you vary your lures to give the fish something new, you'll seldom come home from a bass-fishing trip with an empty creel." That's what the man said.

O'CONNOR — HUTTON

Dick Hutton's gimpy fingers which have clutched that $1,000 bill, a present for anyone who can pin him in twenty minutes, may become unstuck Friday night at Memorial Arena, for he tangles with that broth av a boy one Pat O'Connor who is rated on top among the wrestlers and the best prospect to tank away an easy "grand" is one this way in some time. Both are favorites here and the lowest should be a right merry one. Hutton's prospects for parting with the one hundred C-notes were never brighter.

Then there's that popular pair the Brunetti Brothers, the Italian tag-team champs, who have yet to be beaten in Canada. Clever agile mashers, they stack up against the cornery duo of Jan Gotch and Mark Lewin. And to start the evening's fireworks is Roberto Pico, an Italian ruffie who mixes hassle dishes with popular Billy Stack.

Cleveland Indians Gain Ground In American League as Two Top Teams Split Twin Bills

By Ed Wilks
Associated Press Sports Writer

Tagging the lofty 4 leaders as the probable winners in the major league pennant races is a game of chance at best. This year, it's a game of blind man's bluff.

Milwaukee and Cincinnati, each having to battle back to salvage a split, and Brooklyn are so close you could cover them with a Bikini bathing suit after Wednesday's National League doubleheaders.

Great pitching and heavy swatting won for the three NL leaders. Milwaukee dropped the opener to St. Louis 6-5 on Stan Musial's bounced back 6-1 as Bob Buhl gave a three-hitter to retain the Braves' 5-percentage-point lead. Cincinnati 5-4, but then were bopped by back-to-back home runs by Ted Kluszewski, who had been Public Enemy No. 1 all year, and Frank Robinson in the 4-3 nightcap as Johnny Antonelli Brooks Lawrence won his 11th.

BROOKLYN WINS TWO

And Brooklyn backed up Don Newcombe's 10th victory with 19 hits for a 9-3 conquest in the opener against New York, then eased up on rookie Don Drysdale and reliefer Clem Labine were within two outs of a shutout in the 6-1 afterpiece. That hoisted the Brooks within a half-game of first. It also dropped the Giants into the cellar.

A six-run first inning gave Pittsburgh a commanding 8-4 lead after Philadelphia won the opener 5-3.

Ken Boyer rapped his 20th home run for the Cards, but'll was five unanswered runs in the seventh that won the opener for St. Louis and Murry Dickson, 10-6. Cooley tied it. Buhl and Lindy McDaniel got in a scoreless duel until the Reds knocked three in the seventh of the nightcap and then Hank Aaron socked his three-run homer in the eighth. Card manager Fred Hutchinson, just back from a three-day suspension, was chased for the fifth time this season in a nightcap dispute.

ON SACRIFICE FLY

The Cubs scored two in the ninth, getting the winner on Don Kindy's sacrifice fly, to beat the Redlegs and Art Fowler. Ernie Banks hit his 21st homer and Wally Moon his 14th for the Cubs. In the sixth inning of the second game, Ted Kluszewski walloped his 20th. Robinson followed with his 19th. Big Klu hit a two-run homer in the first inning of both games. Jim King homered twice for all the Cub runs off Lawrence.

Newk, who hadn't worked since June 23, had a two-hit shutout for seven innings, then left for a pinch hitter in the ninth. Roy Campanella and Duke Snider each homered. The Brooks got three in the first inning of the finale, then added two on Carl Furillo's third-inning double.

The Phils got all their first-game runs on a pair of homers and a single by Granny Valo and a home run by Marv Blaylock as Harv Haddix won his sixth, striking out eight. Two errors and six hits provided the Bucs' big first against Jim Konstanty in the night-cap. Elroy Face won it.

Lefty Billy Pierce, the winningest pitcher in the majors, so far is having the breaks fall with him instead of against him as he aims for his first 20-game victory season.

With an even break in luck, the steady 29-year-old hurler for the Chicago White Sox would have been a 20-game winner last year. But he suffered four 1-0 defeats and twice was beaten by scores of 2-1.

Despite this, however, he finished with a 15-10 mark and a 3.17 earned run average, best in the major leagues.

"The Sox always have been a fine defensive team, and this season the fellows are hitting well behind me," said Pierce after posting his 12th victory against two defeats with a six-hit 3-2 job against Kansas City Wednesday. The Sox completed the day with three runs in the first inning of the doubleheader opener. He struck eight strikeouts and served only three walks. Chicago dropped the second game, Wednesday, 2-1.

New York Yankees broke even by bolting Boston Red Sox 8-4 after losing 7-6 in 11 innings. Third-place Cleveland swept two from Detroit 6-4 and 4-1. Washington beat Baltimore 10-8, then lost 7-4 in a rain-shortened, six - inning nightcap.

Ted Williams homered for the Boston club. Billy Martin slugged one for the Yanks, who scored four in the ninth to beat Red Sox ile it with one in the last of the ninth.

Bill Skowron hit a two - run homer and Don Larsen smacked a solo shot for the Yankees, who won with relief help. Piersall had 5-for-10 for the day.

17-GAME STREAK

Al Smith had five hits and two walks for the Indians, stretching his hitting streak to 17 games, and produced the two-run triple in the ninth to win the opener for Herb Score. Vic Wertz, left off the all-star roster, smacked his 18th homer with two on to break a 1-1 tie.

Early Wynn spun a four-hitter in the nightcap, with Smith again batting in two runs. The victory went through their 15th straight home game without a victory.

Washington had an 8-0 lead after four innings but barely got home safe in the opener. The Nats more scored four in the sixth to win the nightcap, which Senator owner Calvin Griffith protested. Umpire Ed Hurley, permitting play in a sixth-inning drizzle, called it in the seventh although the Nats contended the rain hadn't increased. Hurley cited thunder and lightning.

Parker Could Pocket $30,000 Or More in Moore Battle

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

PORT SYDNEY, Ont. (CP) — Sixteen months ago James A. Parker pocketed $61 and change after battling champion Ezzi Wells in a 15-round draw for the Canadian heavyweight boxing title at Toronto. Parker is looking to a payday of $30,000 or more when he meets Archie Moore July 27.

The 13 - round fight, billed by promoters as a world title bout at Maple Leaf Stadium in Toronto, almost certainly will set Canadian attendance and gate-receipt records for boxing. Promoters expect nearly 20,000 in sales to date and they figure gross receipts of $200,000 or more and a crowd of up to 24,000 wouldn't be too far-fetched.

Nodding approaching fame figures has been realized in Canadian boxing. The all-time high of $76,833 was set Aug. 3, 1949, when more than 18,000 fans thronged Dekoven Downs park to see Johnny Greco, Canadian welter champion, and Laurent Dauthille of France. Greco was knocked out in the fifth round.

FIGURES PARKER'S SHARE

"We can safely say that Jimmy (Dix) per cent of the net gate will give Parker around $20,000 after his expenses," David Rush of Toronto, Parker's manager said Wednesday.

Rush guaranteed Moore at least $40,000 to meet the 36-year-old Canadian, unranked in world listings. Moore is light-heavyweight titleholder and No. 1 contender for the heavyweight crown left vacant by Rocky Marciano's retirement.

"I'm in the best condition of my life and that's the way I'm going to Archie Archie," Parker said. "I've got lots going for me-youth, strength and a punch that isn't exactly chicken."

"Archie Archie won't be around after the 10th round," he predicted. "I'll put him down for the 10th he'll be a tired old man and I'll rough him up plenty. How can that old guy go 15 rounds? His legs can't stand it."

Cards' Manager Ousted Again

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Manager Fred Hutchinson of the Cincinnati Cardinals, who returned to the club only Tuesday after a three-day suspension, was ejected Wednesday from the nightcap of a Cards-Braves doubleheader for arguing.

It was the fifth time the fresh-man manager has drawn the thumb from an umpire this season.

His latest outer came in the first inning after plate umpire Artie Gore waved Braves' leadoff batter Danny O'Connell to first on a base on balls. The argument led toward the Cardinal dug out, exchanged a few words with Hutchinson and then thumbed him out of the game.

Hutchinson bolted from the dugout and a five-minute rhubarb ensued at home plate. Last night Hutchinson was suspended for three days and fined $100 after a run-in with umpire Babe Pinelli at St. Louis.

Toronto Leafs Back in Business In Pennant Race

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Toronto's pitching staff has come alive and the Maple Leafs are back in business in the International League pennant race.

Lynn Lovegrath, Johnny Heath, Bill Fischer, Eddie Blake and Don Johnson have given the Leafs five straight complete games in a six-game winning streak that has lifted them to within five games of first-place Montreal and 1½ games of runnerup Rochester.

What's more, they've struck out 38 in the five games, while walking only nine.

It was Blake and Johnson who got the job done in the July 4th doubleheader at the Leafs' trimmed Rochester park and Fischer had blanked the Redwings two days before. Their loss run in the three games came in the ninth inning of the nightcap—ending a string of 30 scoreless innings by the Toronto staff.

Buffalo supplied some unexpected help to the Toronto surge, splitting Montreal twice 5-4 and 7-3. And Richmond dumped Miami twice 7-1 and 7-3, while Havana junked Columbus in a pair 7-6 and 7-4.

Blake, now 7-5, collared the Red Wings with six hits. Sam Jethroe stole home to get the Leafs started against Ed Donnelly in the first inning and Bill Wilson made it up with a three-run homer in the seventh. Johnson followed with a seven-hitter, gaining his ninth victory with the help of Lew Morton's two-run homer off Bob Hayduk. Rochester's run came on Tommy Burgess' homer.

Montreal managed a 2-all tie on Harry Schwegman's two - run homer in the top of the ninth for the nightcap, but the Bisons came right back in their half as Lou Ortiz smacked a three-run homer to win it. Rookie Larry Donovan had allowed Royals only two hits until Schwegman's homer. Buffalo's 10th home run with the bases loaded, capped a five-run third inning by the Bisons in the opener. Ray Orth connected runs off Freddy Hahn, who won his fourth, came on George Shuba's pinch grand-slammer in the eighth inning. It was Shuba's third bases-loaded job of the season.

Righthander Al Cicotte knocked off the Marlins on four hits in the first game and drove in four runs. He has an 8-4 record. Jim Post, Jim Coates and Sonny Dixon then teamed to check Miami on six hits in the windup.

Havana bombed across seven runs in the seventh inning of the nightcap, after putting together a five-run third and a two-run seventh in the opener.

COACH SIGNS

OSHAWA (CP) — Playing-coach Bun Gagnon of Whitby Dunlops in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A League signed Wednesday for his third season with the club.

Pat Maracle Fashions No-Hitter As Point Anne Blanks Madoc 12-0

By GARRY ALEXANDER

Pat Maracle, after three close calls, finally pitched his first no-hit no-run game of the 1956 Belleville and District softball league schedule, a 12-0 victory over Madoc last night for Point Anne.

It was Pat's fifth complete game and victory of the season in which he gave up one hit, three hits, two more no-hitters and finally his no-hitter last evening.

Madoc coach Tom Burnside announced after the game that he could not field a team for the scheduled game at Point Anne tonight and would forfeit the decision.

Maracle hurled near-perfect ball as his mates pounded out eight hits for seven runs in the first inning. Pat retired the first 13 batters he faced before walking Nickle in the fifth. An unassisted double play by Jake Wade erased the runner.

Another man reached base in the seventh on an error but he too went out on a double play by Jackie Wardhaugh unassisted. A hit batter and a three-ball walk in the eighth were the only batters that got on base. Only one ball was hit to the outfield, a long drive by Doug Devolin which Pat Gilmour pulled down in centre field. Maracle faced 29 men and struck out 13, three in the ninth frame.

NUMBER FOUR

It was Pat's fourth no-hit game of his career, two coming in 1954 and one last year. Madoc has been the victim on three occasions and Frankford on the other.

Ken Pigden went the distance for Madoc, tagged for 18 safeties, 17 of which were singles. He failed to fan a batter while walking three.

Twelve men batted for the Canadmines, in the first, pounding out eight hits. Jackie Wardhaugh collected two while Jack Elliott slammed a two-run homer to centre. Jake Wade's bases fill also plated two tallies.

Point Anne continued their hitting but did not score again until the fifth. Singles by Bateman and Jones, a walk and Mulholland's infield out scored one run. They exploded for the final four runs in the eighth with Hull, Green, Gilmour and Elliott each driving in one as nine men came to the plate.

Madoc did not play bad ball afield, committing only one error which did not figure in the scoring.

ELLIOTT SPARKS WINNERS

Jack Elliott sparked the winners with the lumber, slamming his circuit blast and two singles. Jack Wardhaugh and Sam Mulholland also got three safeties each, while Pete Green, Jake Wade, Pat Maracle and Dave Jones each collected a pair. Doug Hull also had a one-bagger.

Wardhaugh and Wade play came with Wager on first. Bateman dropped up a bunt in front of the plate, Pitcher Pigden charged in, pick it off and raced to first before Wager could get back.

Play Better Golf

By Tommy Armour

To play the long irons well, it is important to position the ball correctly at address. There are some players who can hit all shots fairly well with the ball about opposite the left heel, but most of us will do better if we play our long irons with the ball about midway between the lines of their heels. Play these shots with a square stance. Address the hands ought to be a little ahead of the ball and your weight should tend to your left leg. The idea is that the bottom of the arc of the long iron swing should be a bit ahead of the ball so the "sweet spot" of the club face will meet the ball.

Whiteman's fine play at shortstop for Madoc helped keep the scores reasonable.

SWIMMERS RECORDS

PORT DALHOUSIE, Ont. (CP) Town council Wednesday offered British swimmer Brenda Fisher and her trainer free accommodation for three weeks if she'll swim in a race from here to Toronto harbor.

A $20,000 prize awaits the winner of the 33-mile marathon.

Steve Mellen, Toronto swimming coach and agent of the anonymous prize - money sponsor, told council that Niagara-on-the-Lake is anxious to have a Lake Ontario swim marathon start from there, but he said he thinks Port Dalhousie, five miles west of St. Catharines, is a more natural starting point.

The local yacht club has offered to look after the boats needed for attempts.

AT THE CAPITOL — Humphrey Bogart and Katharine Hepburn get "thin way" about one another in the delightful Technicolor film, "The African Queen," directed by John Huston on location in Africa, opening tonight at the Capitol Theatre through United Artists release. On the same program a grand western suspense story, "Ghost Town," starring Kent Taylor, John Smith and Marian Carr.

Oshawa Beaten

ST. THOMAS (CP)—Last-place St. Thomas Eights moved closer to a Senior Intercounty Baseball League playoff position Wednesday night when they defeated Oshawa Motors 8-1.

It was the first time this season the two-year defending champs have won two games in a row. Southpaw Bill Jamieson went the distance, scattering the eight Oshawa hits.

Oshawa pitcher Haig Lavery gave up eight hits and his teammates committed five errors.

Ace Marine Best Canadian Bred At Present Time

TORONTO (CP) — Ace Marine, chunky chestnut speedster owned by Larkin Maloney of Toronto, has taken three strides towards becoming the first two-time winner of Canada's "Horse-of-the-Year" honors.

He was voted the title in 1955 when he won the $25,000-added Queen's Plate, the Prince of Wales Stakes, the Breeders' Stakes and the Durham Cup. After a slow start this season he is back in the limelight with consecutive victories in the Smithville Plate, the Canadian Maturity Stakes and the $25,000 Dominion Day Handicap.

Even if Ace Marine doesn't make "horse of the year" this time his display last Monday captured the hearts of 21,000 fans at the New Woodbine track in suburban Etobicoke Township.

Combinettes Win Over City Nurses

Belleville Combinettes of the ladies' softball league handed its inter-city rivals the Nurses, a 21-7 defeat last night at the Ale-mite field.

Linda Wagg hurled a good game for Gord Steward's girls, giving up eight hits while fanning five and walking but two batters. Summers was her battery mate.

Boyce pitched for the Nurses, tagged for 18 safeties while striking out two and walking four. Harder caught.

Nurses took a 3-0 lead in the top of the first but the smart Combinettes club went ahead 4-3 in their half and scored 12 big runs in the second.

Sandra Slade led the winners at the plate with—a three-run homer and two other hits. Her homer came in the second frame. Line score

HE CAME THROUGH

The only Canadian-bred horse in the Dominion Day field, he came through in patriotic fashion. Even those who had wagered against him were cheering for him to beat American-bred handicappers.

The four-year-old colt goes to the post Saturday in the $7,500 Connaught Cup Handicap at Nor-wood Woodbine. His previous showings will probably make him a hot favorite.

Maloney plans to send him to Fort Erie for the 42-day meeting which opens July 16, and then return him to Toronto for fall meetings.

The colt has started 34 times in three seasons and won 12 times. He finished out of the money only four times.

February 20 to March 20 — (Pisces) — Similar to Sagittarius and Scorpio, so it should be an interesting, gainful day if you are good, industrious and right-minded self. Be mindful of details.

You born today, though strict, changeable, are truly devoted, loyal to family, religion and good principles. You make honest, dependable friends, love children, are kind to animals. You make top salesmen and women, brilliant actors, lawyers; have winning personalities, are gracious. You may have to control a tendency to jealousy of likenesses, and to be hurt at others' actions. This can be a harmful trait. You make excellent writers, seafarers, historians, recontours, actors.

Birthdate: John Paul Jones, Amer. naval officer, adventurer; Prof. Beryl Gilman, Pres. Carnegie Institute.

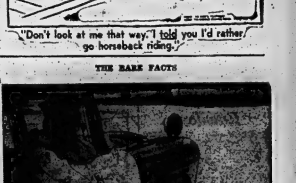
Schools May Receive Aid for Driving Course



TORONTO (CP)—Increased financial aid to secondary schools undertaking driver training programs is being considered by the Ontario government, Attorney-General Dana Porter said Wednesday. Twelve secondary schools in the province have taught driving and another 10 may give courses this fall.

Mr. Roberts said the provincial co-ordinating committee on traffic safety is particularly interested in high-school driving instruction, an extra-curricular activity. The education department gives a grant for classroom tuition, while local municipalities and business pay other costs.

Training of students between 16 and 20, about the amount a private driving school would charge for 10 lessons. Up to last December 3,500 pupils received driving instruction in Ontario.

You can make delicious
STRAWBERRY JAM
in only 11 minutes cooking time
... with CERTO

4 cups prepared fruit (about 2 quarts ripe berries and 2 lemons)	7 cups (3 lbs.) sugar ½ bottle CERTO

To prepare fruit. Crush completely, one layer at a time, about 2 quarts fully ripe, hulled strawberries. Measure 4 cups into a large saucepan; add ¼ cup lemon juice.

To make jam. Add sugar to fruit in saucepan. Mix well. Place over high heat, bring to a full, rolling boil (take about 10 minutes) then boil hard one minute, stirring constantly. Remove from heat; at once stir in Certo. Then stir and skim by turns for 5 minutes to cool slightly, to prevent floating fruit. Ladle quickly into glasses. Paraffin at once.

Yield: about 10 medium glasses (5 pounds). That's about 50% more jam from the same amount of fruit than you would get from "long boiling", and your jam will keep the fresh strawberry taste and color. You'll get perfect results every time if you follow the Certo recipe.

Commonwealth P.M.'s Mellow In Polite 'House Party' Air

By ALEC HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP) — The conference of Commonwealth prime ministers is running true to form. If it does not win any new friends, it may influence some important people.

That's the long-term significance. In 18 days of talks ending tonight, the nine heads of state have formulated no specific decisions, taken no votes, solved no problems.

But the polite "house party" atmosphere of 10 Downing Street, where the "cabinet meetings" of the Commonwealth take place, usually has a mellowing effect.

It is possible that newcomers to the conference table, such as Johannes Strijdom of South Africa, Solomon Bandaranaike of Ceylon, and Chaudhri Mohammed Ali of Pakistan, may return home subtly influenced by the different points of view of other prime ministers.

Similarly, the attitudes of veteran statesmen such as prime ministers St. Laurent of Canada and Robert Menzies of Australia may be conditioned by contacts here.

"It's rather like an almost association," said one experienced diplomat who has been sitting in on Commonwealth conclaves of one kind and another since 1926.

Canada's External Affairs Minister Pearson, for instance, went to Oxford at the same time as Bandaranaike, in the 1920s. Prime Minister Eden, chairman at the present conference, was also there then. Most officials have met one another on some previous tour of duty.

The common background of Commonwealth statesmen partly explains the mystic solidarity of a unique family of countries.

But of a fundamental like-mindedness, bred by mutual respect for parliamentary democracy, the rule of law and other British traditions — but which may not extend to conformity in all political viewpoints — springs a politeness toward divergent opinions.

Harsh words are seldom spoken in the cabinet room.

It is as though the "old boys," realizing their association is a freak of history, have averted their eyes cheerfully from touchy topics arose, and have not insisted too closely into the anomalies and contradictions of their own relationships.

This would be in line with the habits of the late Canadian Prime Minister Mackenzie King, who stood aloof whenever Commonwealth conferences strayed on to sensitive subjects such as defence.

In the present meetings, the premiers appear to have largely deferred any fundamental decisions on the future of a closer British Commonwealth, which is rapidly losing its distinctively British character and which many day may contain more Asian and African countries than British ones.

To those who complain that the Commonwealth is afraid to look to the future in the face, old hands might reply that this is the only reason it has lasted as long as it has—250 years.

Coldest in History

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto, which less than a month ago set two heat records, Thursday went to the other end of the thermometer for the second July 5 in history. The weather office recorded a low 39, well below the previous record of 47 established in 1898 and equalled in 1906.

KURT MEYER BEER SALESMAN TO CANADIAN ARMY

Not Invited to Drink With Officers in Mess

By DAVE McINTOSH
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP) — German SS. Maj-Gen. Kurt Meyer, once sentenced to death for responsibility in the mass shooting of 18 Canadian prisoners of war, now sells beer to the Canadian Army.

Army sources here disclose that Meyer, who spent four years in jail as a war criminal, is a beer salesman in the Province of Westphalia in West Germany where the 2nd Canadian Infantry Brigade is stationed.

As a salesman for a reputable brewery he often calls at brigade messes to make beer sales.

NO DRINKS IN MESS

One army informant said Meyer is accorded the same privileges as any other beer salesman. However, he is not invited to join officers in a drink in the mess and as a rule talks only with the messman.

The informant said Meyer has resumed his brewery activity which already selling beer to the brigade when he joined the firm not long after his release from prison in September, 1954.

The army therefore decided not to bar Meyer from the brigade mess. As far as the Canadian Army is concerned, the source said, Meyer has served out the prescribed sentence as a war criminal and is a German civilian who happens to sell beer.

Meyer was convicted Dec. 28, 1945, of inciting his troops to shoot to death 23 Allied soldiers in the Battle of Normandy and of responsibility in the execution of 18 Canadian soldiers who had been taken prisoner.

The Canadian War Crimes Tribunal found Meyer not guilty of ordering prisoners to be shot.

The 45-year-old one-time Hitler Youth leader was sentenced to death. This sentence was commuted to life imprisonment and early in 1954 to 14 years. With time off for good behavior, Meyer was freed by the British zone of Germany Sept. 7, 1954.

Meyer, thick - set, broad - shouldered, with cold, grey-blue eyes, had risen rapidly in the German army.

He was in command of the German army in Canada ever since June 7, 1944, the day after D-Day, when Canadian prisoners were assassinated at Meyer's headquarters in the ancient Abbey of Ardennes, three miles northwest of Caen.

A storm of protest arose when the firing - squad death sentence passed on Meyer was commuted to life imprisonment by Maj.-Gen. Chris Vokes, then head of Canada's occupation force in Germany, who ruled that Meyer's defence counsel had not did not warrant execution.

Controversy broke out again when he was transferred back to Germany in 1951 on the ground that he was not a war criminal but a criminal in custody outside Germany.

Accused of Attempted Mercy Killing Husband Reunited With Dying Wife

NEWCASTLE, England (AP)—Harold Mercer sat with tear-dimmed eyes at the bedside of his dying wife Sarah Thursday and heard the British court order she will never have.

Grey - haired Sarah, 69, patted his hand.

"It's nice to see you again, Harold," she said.

She did not know that her husband, also 69, had been in jail on a charge of attempted murder—her murder. She did not know that behind the hospital door stood two warders from Durham Jail, watching him. She did not know that behind the happy reunion lay the combined efforts of two coroners, a lawyer and slightly higher authority who are forecast for most of Ontario for the weekend.

Monday on charges of trying to kill his wife with 13 sleeping pills to relieve her suffering. She has cancer.

He also is accused of attempted suicide. He had pleaded guilty to the attempted murder charge, but not guilty of attempted murder.

Sarah knew nothing of this. She believed a mysterious bricklayer husband finally collapsed from the strain of working two jobs to support and that he had been in a hospital bed.

The visit lasted an hour and 40 minutes. Then Mercer came out. From a little side window, his daughter, Connie, and her bus saw him.

"He was crying with happiness," Connie said.

As Mercer drove back to his lonely prison cell, Sarah smiled through her pain. She said:

"I'm so glad he's better."

'Preservers' Death Jackets For Three on Lake Simcoe

PEFFERLAW, Ont. (CP)—Police said today that three United States tourists who were drowned in Lake Simcoe Wednesday might were life preservers that were really death jackets.

Corporal Ted Geddins of the Barrie police said: "About the only purpose the so-called life jackets served was to keep the bodies floating face down until we found them."

He said the jackets, made of cloth and filled with a buoyant material, would keep men unconscious only as long as they kept their arms crossed tightly in front of them.

"When they become exhausted from their long stay in the water the jackets did nothing to hold them up.

The jacket has a cushion and seat that fits only across the back of the person and has arm loops on each side.

"If they had been wearing approved life jackets there is a good chance they could be alive today," Geddins said.

Bodies of the three victims, all from Detroit, were found Thursday near their anchored outboard motor boat. Local residents said they could almost have waded through the calm water to safety.

The dead are:

Reid D. Shortsvan, 35, a federal housing inspector, Frank S. Bowlish, 35, also a housing inspector, and James L. Murphy, 34, manager of the General Box Company.

The men went fishing shortly before midnight Wednesday. Two bodies were retrieved from the lake 12 hours later. The third was found before dusk Thursday night.

The boat, a sturdy craft, was anchored 120 feet from the shore of Sand Islands, near this village about 45 miles north of Toronto. It did not carry oars or paddles.

The men were staying at Mr. Shortsvand cottage near Pefferlaw. Their families said Mr. Shortsvan and Mr. Murphy were familiar with the lake and were acquainted with the Sand Islands area. Bowlish was a keen fishing sport.

Mr. Shortsvan, father of six girls ranging in age from one to nine, arrived here last Saturday for a week's holiday. The three men had been here two weeks.

Congress Soon May Give Green Light to Niagara Power Project

By GEORGE KITCHEN

WASHINGTON (CP) — Congress soon may get the go-ahead signal to give the green light to join Canada in harnessing the vast hydro-electric resources of picturesque Niagara Falls.

The $400,000,000 American phase of the project has been stalled since 1951 by a long-winded controversy over whether it should be undertaken by private industry, the federal government or the state of New York. Now, after a decision by the New York State Power Authority may be given the job.

Under an agreement signed in 1950, the two countries agreed to develop the Niagara River's power potential on a fifty-fifty basis. Canada's half is being pushed promptly with development of her share of the water power but the U.S. quickly ran into a stalemate. It has been settled by a federal-state compromise.

Public power advocates want the Niagara, a 36-mile stream which links Lake Erie and Lake Ontario, be harnessed either by the federal government or the state of New York. Private power forces have been equally adamant in pressing the case of a group of private utility companies for authority to do the job.

Now, however, the Senate has capped five years of political bickering by passing a bill to permit the New York State Power Authority to undertake the task. The legislation now has to be reconciled with conservation rules committee, which will decide whether it will recommend the floor of the House this session.

The administration has registered no strong protest against the bill, sponsored by Senator Herbert Lehman (Dem., N.Y.), although President Eisenhower has suggested that the New York Power Authority should designate the license.

The administration does special ly object to a provision in the bill giving mandatory preference to co-operatives and publicly-owned distribution systems in the sale of Niagara power. The private companies and New York Republican congressmen also object to this requirement.

The Democrats, while they are pushing the bill are almost equally that the Republicans and the administration will waive the rule at session of Congress. Such a development, they feel, would give the Republican campaign material for the No. 6 election.

Czech Reds Tell Of Foiling Plot Three Years Ago

VIENNA (CP) — A plot to set up a puppet government in Finland Prison and seize the radio station and central post office was foiled by police here first time today.

Reuters news agency in Prague dispatch reported that the plot took place three years ago.

The Prague newspaper reported the incident today.

The newspaper says the armed plotters were captured and "liquidated in a single day." It added that in addition to the leading plotters there was gunfire in which a security policeman was killed.

The story of the plot was published in Prace, official organ of the Czechoslovak trade unions. The article was entitled "Spy by spy in contact against enemies of the state." It also relates the capture of various leading agents and subversives and charged that all were in the pay of American "imperialist intelligence services." No dates of these arrests were given.

Prace says the gang which included the fire Pankrac-Czechoslovakia's biggest prison on the outskirts of the capital—and used the radio and post offices nearer the centre of town was composed of former private banking people and former Czechoslovak army officers. It said that the leading plotters were involved but said the leader was a man named Jirasek.

Prace's article is the most dramatic of a series of plot stories

MEMBERS DESIRE GOVT. RESTRICT COAL IMPORTS

Propose Reduction Of 4,000,000 Tons

OTTAWA (CP)—Commons representatives of Alberta and Nova Scotia coal mining areas say the government should restrict imports of United States coal.

The proposal was made Thursday by C. E. Johnston (SC—Bow River) and supported by Clarie Gillis (CCF—Cape Breton South). Both said that the coal industry, its production slipping steadily in recent years, needs more help.

Mr. Johnston said that in the 1954-55 fiscal year, imports of U.S. coal exceeded by 3,413,000 tons the Canadian production of 14,779,000 tons. If U.S. imports could be reduced by 4,000,000 tons a year, "I am sure our industry would be put back on its feet again."

WANTS AN EMBARGO

Mr. Gillis, a former coal miner, said there would be no difficulty in putting an embargo against a certain amount of U.S. coal. He also suggested a sliding system to assure markets for Canadian coal.

Miner Minister Prudham replied in reply to the proposal for limiting coal imports, presented as the Commons reviewed the departmental spending estimates.

But he said a freight rate increase will actually improve the position of Nova Scotia coal.

The increase, amounting to 10 cents a ton, applied equally to rail movement of Nova Scotia and U.S. coal to the market area covered by the agreement. The $20-per-ton assistance under the Maritimes Freight Rates Act would not be affected by increases or Maritime coal to only 9.6 cents a ton.

MAY DOSCO

Mr. Gillis criticized the actions of the Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation, major Nova Scotia coal producer.

Dosco has a subsidiary company which did nothing but import U.S. coal. Dosco itself appeared to take little interest in finding markets in central Canada for Nova Scotia coal. And it planned two new steel fabricating plants in Quebec province—not in Nova Scotia, the Dosco headquarters.

Mr. Prudham, in a general review of the mining industry, said its production this year may reach a record $2,000,000,000. If that mark were reached it would be four years ahead of earlier forecasts.

He also reviewed progress on an experimental coal-fired gas turbine electric power locomotive for the government at McGill University, Montreal.

Mr. Gillis cautioned that false hopes should not be raised about the turbine as the only thing which would save the coal industry.

It would also be unacceptable with diesels for railway purposes. Many more diesels would have to be built. And the railways would not specify write off their huge investments in diesels to make the change.

Police Say Slain Man May Have Been Victim of Pro-Nazi Group

HAMILTON (CP)—A coroner's jury learned Thursday that the body of a man found in a field was found in a Hamilton cemetery 18 days ago may have been the victim of a fanatic wartime pro-Nazi Yugoslavian organization which had reached him in Canada.

Detective Ken Platt told the jury investigating the death of 44-year-old Lubomir Mishovic that police had learned the organization, Ilica and Macek, was active here and believe Mishovic was a former member who had come out with its leaders.

The jury returned an open verdict, finding that Mishovic died of "extensive burns."

Coroner H. R. McAlister told the jury it might call the death "an unfortunate suicide." City pathologist Dr. W. P. Deachman testified two-thirds of a pint of kerosene was found in the dead man's stomach. He said it would be difficult to inject this amount of fluid against a man's will.

Mishovic's body was soaked in kerosene and set alight. A electric a floor wax gas and a cigaret lighter were found near the body. Detective Platt said an informant told him the Ustashi during the war had sometimes doused its victims with gasoline and set them afire.

Rev. Ward Smith, director of the attorney-general's laboratories in Toronto, said tests indicated the quantity of naphtha found in Mishovic's stomach would cause the man to lose consciousness rapidly and reduce the sensation of pain.

Detective Platt testified the provincial police have records of three men committing suicide by burning themselves to death.

Testimony was that Mishovic, a shy, retiring man, emmigrated to Canada 4½ years ago. He was an unskilled worker who had a private job in Hamilton and took a room four years before his death.

Trade Deficit Doubles In Month, Four-Fold In Five

Rising Deficit Linked With Canada's Prosperity

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's imports and exports shattered all records in May but the trade deficit continued to swell, doubling in the month and increasing fourfold to a record in the first five months of the year.

The deficit—excess of imports over exports—rose in May to $118,300,000 from $61,000,000 last year, boosting the five-month total to $484,300,000 from $127,300,000 a year ago, the bureau of statistics reported today.

It said the rising deficit was linked with Canada's prosperity. Large amounts of goods were being imported to provide new machinery, equipment and construction materials to develop new industry and meet rising demand.

But more consumer goods also were coming, the flow stimulated by increased levels of consumption. The main rise was from the United States, Canada's top customer and chief source of her imports. Canada's trade deficit with the U.S. continued to rise to new heights.

Exports in May to all countries totalled $433,300,000, a rise of $62,000,000 from last year's $371,000,000. Imports soared to $554,600,000, up $120,800,000 from $434,000,000 a year ago.

This increased the January-May total exports to $1,874,800,000, a gain of $194,900,000 over the similar 1955 period. Imports for the 20-per-cent increase to $2,359,100,000.

Prime Ministers Pledged to Aid Disarmament

LONDON (AP) — The prime ministers of the Commonwealth today pledged themselves to work for a "comprehensive disarmament agreement."

In the final communique of their 18-day meeting in London, the nine premiers said the policies of the Commonwealth will be devoted to preservation of world peace.

"This meeting," they said, "has been held at a significant time in the development of international disarmament."

A new element has been introduced by the growing recognition of the existence of the

Other developments of importance, they said, included "changes in the Soviet Union."

"The common understanding which the ministers have reached on the review will form a valuable background which will assist each government in its formulation of its own and its national policies," the communique said.

The ministers deplored the "vast expenditures" wasted on arms and armaments throughout the world which, they said, "have delayed the full development of the world's natural resources for the common good."

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) Western diplomats predicted today Yugoslavia's President Tito soon will launch an ambitious campaign to set up a third force between the East and West.

Youths Given Jail Sentences

Brought back to Belleville to face charges of breach of recognizance following sentence at Peterborough for car theft, two Belleville district youths, George Bruce McFarland, 20, and Glenn McCoy, were given jail terms by Magistrate T. Y. Wills.

McFarland was given four months in the common jail and McCoy, 8 months.

The youths were brought back to Belleville for breach of recognizances after being given suspended sentence on breaking and entering charges here last December 1. The youths were involved together in one break-in and separately on two others.

McFarland's mother told the court that her son had started keeping bad company after he received basic injury some years ago, the magistrate interrupting to note he had been in considerable trouble since that time.

"I have every sympathy for the family and something has got to be done," observed Magistrate Wills.

He said suspended sentences had been given on the breaking and entering charges in order to give the boys a chance to go straight. "But you ignored that chance," he said as he sentenced the youths to jail terms.

Ontario Hydro Staff Honors Ernie G. Gurnett

In recognition of 40 years with the Ontario Hydro, Mr. E. G. Gurnett, manager of the Ontario Hydro's East Central Region with headquarters in Belleville, this morning honoured the 60 members of his staff. Mr. Gurnett was presented with a lovely bouquet of flowers to be shared by Mrs. Gurnett.

The gesture on the part of the Hydro office staff was entirely unanticipated, Mr. Gurnett assured.

A graduate of University of Toronto in electrical engineering, Mr. Gurnett commenced his work with the Hydro on July 1, 1916. Until December 1, 1947, he was a Municipal Engineer with the Ontario Hydro located at their head office.

In December 1947 he was appointed consumer service engineer for the Cobourg Region, and on January 1, 1948, he was further appointed as Manager of the East Central Region, Belleville, the position which he now holds.

In addition to his Hydro duties, Mr. Gurnett is active in Rotary and now is the President of the local club.

Youth Admits Stealing Truck to Get Out of Army

Assuring that he "would not make it easy" and stating that the cure should be made worse than the disease, Magistrate T. Y. Wills this morning remanded for sentence a local youth who told police that he stole a pastel truck in order to get out of the army.

"If that is true then we want to make the cure worse than the disease," commented the magistrate as he remanded the youth until Tuesday for sentence.

Police said the 17-year-old youth had been referred to the police station by his father who told them that his son was AWOL from the army.

Police Inspector J. C. Hayes told the court that when at the station the youth had told the sergeant he was responsible for taking a panel truck from behind a Front St. store.

An enlisted officer from the army told the court that stealing a car to get out of the army was an "old twist." He noted, however, that whether the youth would be charged was at the discretion of his commanding officer.

U.S. Withdraws Order House Is Informed

OTTAWA (CP) — The United States government has withdrawn an order prohibiting its Canadian civilian employees in Newfoundland bases from taking part in political activities.

State Secretary Dulles informed the Commons Thursday the order, made May 18, was rescinded after discussions between officials of the U.S. and the external affairs department.

The question was raised in the House Monday by Thomas Barnett (CCF—Comox-Alberni).

Mr. Pinard said the northeast air command, acting on its own initiative, sent a letter to its Canadian civilian employees saying the Canadian Civil Service Act, restricting civil servants from activities in federal or provincial elections, would be applied in principle.

He said the Canadian government is satisfied the order was "well-intentioned, although inappropriate."

Israel Repeats Denial Troops Mass at Border

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel again has denied any massing of troops along her Arab borders and charged that reports of such action are designed to cover Arab military movements.

Walter Eytan, the director-general of the Israeli foreign ministry, Thursday night called in the envoys of Britain, the United State, France and Russia to issue the latest denial.

The reports of Israeli troop concentrations along the Jordan-Gaza border have come from a number of Arab capitals in the past two days. The Israeli foreign ministry previously said they were "pure fabrication."

Terming the accounts of Israeli troop movements fictitious, Eytan charged the Arab states had made "a concentrated war propaganda effort . . . based on injurious allegations of Israeli troop concentrations."

NOT CONFIRMED

Reports from Arab Jerusalem said the Jordan army was being reinforced along the Jordan-Israeli armistice line.

The United Nations truce organization spokesman announced, however, there was no confirmed troop concentrations anywhere along the Israel-Arab armistice lines. He added that neither the Arabs nor Israel had complained to the UN about any such concentrations.

In Damascus, meanwhile, a move toward a federal union of Egypt and Syria was given a unanimous go-ahead by Syria's parliament.

The action brought an immediate expression of hope from Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser that it would be the first step for a "union including all Arab states."

Union Official Says Wage Cuts Proposals May Be Justified

COBALT, Ont. (CP) — A union official said Thursday a employer is justified in proposing a wage cut in labor costs when the cost of living drops.

A. McGiggik, president of the United Steelworkers (CLC) local of the Preston East Dome Mine, said the employer "has just as much right to do this as we have to ask for an increase when the cost of living is or the upgrade." He spoke to a travelling committee of the Ontario Federation of Labor.

The committee, investigating possible changes in the Ontario Labor Act, had asked for a definition of "collective bargaining" and Mr. McGinnis suggested his statement cover it.

William English, representative of the CLC on the committee, said that was contrary to normal collective bargaining. He said employers could use old agreements as a basis for negotiating without regarding subsequent benefits, as long as they bargained in good faith.

SECOND-CLASS

Murdo Martin, a Timmins firefighter presenting a brief on behalf of Northern Ontario District Trades Council, said civic workers were relegated to the class of second-class citizens since Section 78 of the Act allowed municipal councils to remove employees from the protection of the act.

Leo La Sabie, representative of the United Steelworkers, who act as bargaining agents for some Timmins civic employees, said firemen are "shipshapers."

He said some Timmins civic workers are about to demand conciliation proceedings because there are rumors the city will remove them from the protection of the act. He said this was done in Ottawa and the city afterwards fired some employees to make room for allies.

Mr. Martin said the firefighters and policemen were not affected by the Act but were hampered in their negotiations by their moral obligations to the public.

Chief Dismissed

WINDSOR (CP) — Chief Constable Arthur Pare of suburban LaSalle, suspended June 4 after being charged with extortion, has been officially dismissed, Mayor Hebert Runstedler of LaSalle announced Thursday.

Pare was suspended after he allegedly received $100 from a Windsor man, whom he found parked in a car with a girl, for keeping quiet about the incident. At a preliminary hearing Pare was committed to stand trial on the charge.

U.S. Steel Strike Will Not Affect Central Bridge

TRENTON, (Special)—The U.S. steel strike will not affect the Central Bridge specifically unless it continues for six months. This was the opinion of William Macadam, general manager of the company in an interview here last night.

According to Mr. Macadam the strike has curtailed "deliveries" on one or two sections from now on. No layoffs are foreseen however since the company has a good stock on hand and a backlog of orders to work on. At the same time the company requires steel from the mills and its long range program will change if steelworkers across the border remain at loggerheads with management's policy.

For the last year the local steel fabricating firm has experienced one of the busiest periods in 20 years of operation.

Morning Sessions Of Parliament Begin on July 16

OTTAWA (CP)—The Commons will begin morning sittings July 16, starting its business at 11 a.m. EDT each sitting day thereafter until the end of the current session.

Finance Minister Harris, in an apparent government move to speed Parliament's work toward a conclusion, moved a motion to that effect just before the dinner adjournment Thursday and the House adopted it without debate.

The morning sittings were agreed upon in an arrangement among party representatives.

Mr. Harris said later outside the House that the government has no particular prorogation date in mind—"we're in the hands of the House."

PIPELINE FINISHED

Previous speculation was that the session might extend well into August. But with the controversial natural gas pipeline issue out of the way and the government's info consideration of estimates, unofficial reports are prevalent that the session will wind up by the end of July.

Remaining estimates and government legislation dealing with new federal-provincial tax arrangements are the main remaining items to be dealt with.

At any rate, the hours to sit in the mornings is usually the annual signal that prorogation is in sight.

Shepilov Says Contacts With U.S. Important

MOSCOW (AP) — Russia's Foreign Minister Dmitri Shepilov says increased contacts between the Soviet Union and the United States are a "positive feature" and that he is looking forward to meeting U.S. State Secretary Dulles.

At his first press conference for Western reporters, the new foreign minister said he expects to visit the United States in November for the United Nations General Assembly.

Shepilov said "there is a broad basis for normalization of relations between the United States and the Soviet Union." The former editor of the Communist party newspaper Pravda said the essential condition is to "normalize the atmosphere of cold war in the United States."

"I don't think our press for a long time can be accused of unfounded attacks," Shepilov said. "But the press and radio is still made up of all sorts of lies, slander and libelous statements."

SEES EXPORT USELESS

LONDON (Reuters) — The designer of the Vickers Viscount, George Edwards said Thursday there is no point in Britain trying to compete with America's transport aircraft. "We want to conserve our resources and go for the supersonic long-range airliner which should be ready in 10 to 12 years," he said.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP)—A lull of uncertainly fell over the stock market in morning trading today.

Industrial changes were mostly fractional and gales outnumbered losses at almost two to one. Base, liquors, refining oils and financial institutions were stronger but utilities, motors and manufacturers eased a little.

Hinde and Dauch was up 1¼ points and Seagrams 1⅛. Power Corp. dropped two points, Universal Products dipped 1¼ points and Canada Packers B a point.

Senior base metals were mostly mixed but juniors were quiet and unchanged. Hudson Bay, Quebec Lithium and Consolidated Sinclairs gained fractionally. International Nickel was off ⅛.

Western oils added more than one half point to their gains. Canadian Devonian moved ahead 45 cents and Triad 30 cents.

DOLLAR RATE

MONTREAL (CP)—Banks today quoted the value of the Canadian dollar at a 17-month low of 2 5-32 per cent in terms of Canadian funds, or 97 27-32 Canadian cents. The last time the dollar dropped 2 5-32 was May 31, 1954, 1953.

Reason for the decline was attributed mainly to increased demand for Canadian dollars as a result of recent liberalization by U.S. markets by some Canadian provincial and municipal institutions.

Record low of 4⅛ per cent, or 95 Canadian cents, was established in August and September of 1952.

Senate Called Back in Session

OTTAWA (CP) — The Senate, which a week ago Thursday took an 18-day recess, is being called back into session next Tuesday, apparently in preparation to act on the pending appointment of a new Speaker for the House of Commons.

Senate Speaker Wishart Robertson Thursday ordered the Senate clerk to send out notices to senators at their homes that under the emergency powers he is calling the Senate to meet at 8 p.m. July 10, when it adjourned until July 17.

The notice said the upper house would consider the Unemployment Assistance Act "and such other matters as may come before the Senate."

Commons Speaker Rene Beaudoin on Monday placed his resignation before the Commons and it likely will be acted on early next week with the return of Prime Minister St. Laurent from the Commonwealth prime ministers' conference in London.

In announcing his intention to resign Speaker Beaudoin said he was not stepping down immediately because if he did so the Commons would have had to adjourn. This was because the prime minister, whose sole prerogative it is to recommend a Speaker, was in London, and the Senate, which must be in session at the time, was in recess.

Weekly Livestock Review

TORONTO (CP) — Cattle prices were a strong 25 cents a hundredweight higher on most grades. Calves were generally weaker. Hogs were 25 cents a hundredweight lower. Sheep and lambs were mostly unchanged while lambs sold fully steady.

Receipts of cattle were 400 head fewer than last week and about 200 fewer than the same week in 1955. Western receipts were comparable with last week at 341 head of cattle and 73 head of stock calves. Westerns were in replacement cattle. Shipments to eastern Canadian slaughterers were slightly heavier at six carloads and there were no exports to the United States.

An estimated 200 cattle will be unsold at the close, made up of common and medium replacement cattle.

A broad demand featured last week's trading. Steer quality included several fancy choice lots that sold at a premium. Most steers sold at 25 cents a hundredweight advance with heifers and yearlings establishing a record. Good cows also gained 25 cents a hundredweight.

Bulls were generally unchanged with small numbers of the good heavy bologna types on offer. The dressed beef movement was reported light.

Prices

Choice steers $31-33, sales to $32.50; good steers $29-31; medium $18-30; common $16-18; good heifers $28-30, sales to $28, medium $18-19; common 15 - 18; choice steers and heifers $19-21; choice fed yearlings $21-22; sales to $22.50; good fed yearlings $20-21; common $18-20; good cows $13-20-14; good light heifery cows $13-20-14; good $11-12-13; cows non $10-12; canner and cutters $7-10; good heavy bologna bulls were mostly $20-21, sales to $21; beef bulls $12; common and medium light bulls down to $8.

Replacement cattle: Following the same pattern of the last several weeks, good quality stockers and feeders continue in short supply with this grade in good demand. Numerous common and medium grades were slow and difficult to place. Good stockers and feeders $19-20; medium $15-19; common $13-15; some useful heifers sold back to the country at $13 a hundredweight.

Calves were steady with most of the top grades selling at $21-22. Vealers were steady to 50 cents selling to the extreme top of $25; medium $16-20; common $13-15; graisers sold for slaughter $8-12.

Grade A Hogs were $28-28.25 and closed at the latter figure. Grade B hogs were quoted at $27-28; sows $13, both on a dressed weight basis.

Lambs were stronger on the light offering. The general quality was only fair. Lambs sold $26 a hundredweight, medium and good $24-26; cull lambs down to $17; sheep $3-10 a hundredweight according to quality. Starting Monday, July 9, local lambs will be discounted $1 a hundredweight.

Girl Applies As Recruit in Mounted Police

OTTAWA (CP) — When Mike asked the RCMP for some literature on the force, the personnel branch, scenting a possible recruit, enclosed an "application form."

Mike, reports the RCMP quarterly in its latest issue, turned out to be a girl but she filled in the application form and returned it.

She modestly declined to give chest measurements but under complexion recorded: "Peaches-cream-clear."

Her weight (stripped) she reported: "Approximately 125—never stripped."

She said she was "sound," "up to standard" and "fit for engagement—ring."

The RCMP didn't identify the rejected applicant.

Couple Remanded On Murder Count Until July 12

SUDBURY (CP) — The parents of seven children Thursday were remanded to July 12 on a charge of murdering a 78-year-old recluse William Selder.

Eli Guay, 37, and his wife Christine, 37, were arrested Wednesday night as they sat in their late model car on a dusty sidetrack near North Bay, 60 miles east of here.

Their children, ranging in age from one to 11 years, were in the car when they were arrested at gunpoint. The children now are in the care of a children's aid society.

The stocky bushworker and his short wife sat quietly in court when arraigned. They showed no emotion. Guay, handcuffed, was guarded by a provincial police constable.

Guay's sister Florence and Joseph Dupuis, who lived with Selder are held as material witnesses.

Police said they think Selder was beaten to death with a woman's hatchet. Guay's hatchet has been the motive, they said.

KINGSTON (CP)—Les Douglas, coach of Kingston's disbanded hockey Goodyears for a year has been appointed to same job with the newly-formed Kingston Limeys in the senior intermediate loop. Limestones are to be the Kingston team in the Ontario Hockey Association's new Senior A loop in Eastern Ontario.

Team manager will be Art Castleton.

Union Certified By Labor Board

TORONTO (CP) — The United Steelworkers of America (CLC) has been certified by the Ontario labor relations board as bargaining agent for 450 employees of The Company at Kingston, it was announced today.

The USW would represent all Kingston employees except office staff and other designated exceptions.

Trentenaw employees last month voted to expel the leftist United Electrical and Machine Workers of America (Ind.) in favor of the USW.

Both unions are to open negotiations with the company for a new contract.

U.S. Government 'Freezes' Steel For Defence Uses

PITTSBURGH (AP)—The government today clamped a freeze on steel supplies for defence projects in the United States defence program as its country-wide steel strike continued with no sign of an early settlement.

Federal mediators conferred separately Thursday with both sides in the strike, now in its sixth day. They flew back to Washington with the word they will study the issues and "be in touch" with the parties early next week.

Otherwise, they gave no indication of the federal mediation service's future plans for breaking the impasse between the United Steelworkers Union and the basic steel industry.

The government's freeze, issued by the defence department, remains in force until further notice. It has been indicated the freeze will be lifted after a short time, possibly no longer than two weeks.

In addition to the $30,000 strikeout 30,000 employees in allied industries — chiefly railroads and trucking — have been laid off because of lack of impending layoffs.

The government's freeze applies only to selected steel products needed urgently for aircraft, guided missile and atomic energy commission projects.

Under the freeze, defence producers can stock up on vital items to insure that warehouses will be sure uninterrupted production for as long as possible during the strike. Non-defence users, with a few exceptions, won't be able to touch the selected stock-piles.

Officials have said Canadian military contractors will be able to get steel supplies on the same basis as U.S. defence users.

BELLEVILLE PAYS PENSIONS

Wednesday the Ontario Intelligencer printed an editorial on the payment of supplemental old age pensions by municipalities.

Under this system, municipalities can assist old age pensioners who pass a means test. The maximum supplemental pension is $30 a month. The Ontario Government pays 60 per cent of this supplemental pension.

The editorial, based on a news report, said that Brantford had become the second city in Ontario to authorize the payment of such pensions. The editorial was headed: "The Wrong Solution." It argued: "While Belleville residents help to pay additional pensions to residents of Toronto and Brantford, pensioners in Belleville will get no additional help."

City manager Dennis Herring points out that this is in error. Belleville has been paying supplemental pensions since 1958. In this year one pensioner received help. Now ten are being aided. Belleville may have been the first municipality in Ontario to adopt this plan, although Mr. Herring does not know if this was so. He does know, however, from consultation with Mr. George Whitman, city welfare officer, that the news story which reported that Brantford was the second city to pay supplemental pensions is wrong — Belleville was three years ahead of Brantford.

The City Council is to be commended for its early recognition of the fact that some pensioners are in urgent need of additional assistance. That, however, does not make the system right. Mr. Herring says that his personal opinion is that the original editorial was correct when it stated that the system is wrong and when it added: "If Ontario is going to pay supplemental pensions to some needy citizens over 70 it should pay them to all in similar circumstances, without these payments being dependent on municipal governments accepting a share of the burden."

WHO OWNS OUTER SPACE?

When the tenth general assembly of the International Civil Aviation Organization was held in Caracas, Venezuela, about 500 delegates from 107 countries studied the question of what rights the world's nations possess in regions beyond the atmosphere. An international convention drafted by each of the countries suffering is it complete and exclusive authority over the airspace above its territory. The agreement does not mention, however, whether this sovereignty extends into outer space.

With the United States, and possibly Russia, preparing to launch small "satellites," the question of the control of outer space is no longer purely academic.

If the U.S. launches a satellite and this passes over Moscow, or some other Russian city, every hour and a half, as it would do if it were 300 miles up, have the Russians the right to try to shoot it down with another satellite?

If the U.S. satellite was in the atmosphere, there would be no question about the Russians being within their legal rights in endeavoring to stop it. But if the satellite is beyond the atmosphere, what then? That is one question which the International Civil Aviation Organization experts may have had in mind at their conference at Caracas.

Another question may have been just exactly how high is up. The Encyclopedia Americana says "there is no definite boundary, immediately below which there is an atmosphere and immediately above which there is none." It says that "some estimates, based on the calculated heights of shooting stars when they first become luminous, place the limit at which the atmosphere has a density sufficient to produce any observable effects at about 200 miles," but adds "all estimates of this kind are necessarily tentative and unsatisfying."

Is 100 miles a sufficient length of safety to guarantee satellites from immunity from attack as they pass round the world?

SCHOOL OUT TOO SOON?

Perhaps school gets out just a little too early.

"We have children of our own," said a small one newly-promoted seventh grader to another last Sunday.

"We haven't!" queried the second new seventh-grader, who evidently had been under the impression that the summer holidays started the moment the last stepped out of the school door with that glorious free feeling on Friday afternoon.

"No," her companion explained. "Yesterday was Saturday and today is Sunday. We would have had them off anyway."

"Oh, yes." The light dawned. "Our holidays start tomorrow, Monday."

"No, not tomorrow. It is a holiday, anyway."

"It is? What is it?"

"I don't know, but Daddy has it off."

Perhaps, if school did not get out until the third or fourth of July, there would be time to explain to the students that it is the anniversary of Confederation and to attend school on July 1 is because it is the anniversary of the birth of Canada as a nation.

HIS IDEA

She baked a cake and swept the floor,
Then went up stairs and made the bed.
She talked with peddlers at the door,
Dusted while a chair that once was red.

She darned the children's stockings, and Repaired a mess she wears herself.
And when the evening meal she'd planned
Was finished cooked on a pantry shelf.

She helped a neighbor fix a dress.
Between meals, several times she fed
Her romping children more or less
On pie and cake and buttered bread.

That night she heard her husband say:
"My dear, it's pretty soft for you.
You sit around the house all day
And not a thing have you to do."

Watches Hefty in Old Days

By John Gould in The Christian Science Monitor.)

Magazine advertising has recently shown a tank of turtles swimming about with wrist watches attached to their smaller shells. Nothing, the purveyors say, to bring to show that you can get a watch that doesn't leak for a year.

One of the finer facts of life is that nobody ever has what he always has been that time is less important than many people think, and that picking and persuasion to buy a watch, leaky or not, is a waste of good money. I do not carry a watch. Even when my remote activities with city and town and the latter-day programs of organized society do need to know what the clock says, and I can always go into the house and look at the wall clock, I have two watches, and do not need to be without. Both were inherited from two vigorous uncles whose differing natures provided two different kinds.

One is a lurching great turnip of a timepiece, issued to the welcoming vistas of the old West, where bodies and digs and spurs and saddles and guns were the constituents of something to lean against. It would be a heavy, ill-constituted turtle to carry it, chain and all, and I would imagine many mariner moderns would quickly enter the duty-style works and do damage.

The stupid citizen who makes a habit of living off a wheat with his watch on it clearly a wrist-watch. Such a man needs one that is tight in the bulkheads. My gold-mining uncle made this point a memorable immersion came suddenly and he had no time to undress. Only the watch saved him, he did.

He might have got thrown from his horse, or might have been tossed in the Missouri by an irate mule, and in either case the watch would have survived. If he had been wearing his watch on a chain, he'd have gone to the bottom kerplunk', and his sudden vacancy in the scheme of the Old West would have set the Union Pacific back a generation.

Turtles, you but to be under water with an old gold miner's timepiece, kicking and threshing to get your vest off, particularly if the vest were quilted like those built for Mexican bronco whiners, is quite another matter. Quite.

My other watch-is silver, a bit more delicately wrought, but also a large device. This uncle, when a boy, admired a certain bulldog's head in a store window, and communicated his desire to his younger sister. Neither the boy nor the girl had what has later been identified as money, and the whim came to naught at the time. But the sister was a sentimental lass, and loved her brother dearly, and for years she saved her pennies until she could buy the trinket, which was really a charm for a watch chain. The uncle thus owned a watch dog so to speak, but had neither watch nor chain.

He didn't buy the first watch he saw, either, for this was a special charm and he wanted something worthy. In time he found such a young fellow learning his trade, and one day he went into a high-brow Philadelphia store and plunked down a good many weeks' wages for a silver Ben Franklin job with a proper silver chain.

I have both these watches in my bureau drawer, and thus equipped I have not had to own or wear a leakproof turtle watch, one suited for modern helter-skelter affairs. When need arises I have in the passage of time lit adequate gas for the lighting antiques. They both run, although sometimes at interesting speeds.

The interesting speeds are my own fault. I don't keep my watches wound, and I am hopeless or to bring them to the watchmaker for periodic tinkering. Of late years I hesitate to take them at all, for the watchmaker always tells me that I must not only talk time, but computes the phases of the moon, gives the current rate on loans and mortgages, estimates the magnetic drift, and a few other such weighty things, including cube root and monetary exchange in pounds sterling. I suppose you could also put it on a turtle.

Letter To The Editor

Concerned About Loss Of Manpower on Farms

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

I noted that item in the news saying that the Agricultural Industrial Committee was inquiring into reasons for dependency of manpower in agriculture during a period of prosperity"; also quoting Premier Frost as having told the Committee that the "increased mechanization has enabled Ontario farmers to increase their productivity since the war, in spite of a loss of manpower to industrial centres."

Personally, I feel that the statement is significant as it certainly is essential, if today's definitely urban well-being is to be maintained, and out of it—is to endure.

Now, I am not a farmer and am similar story in one of the farm papers recently, pointing out that there are more cows than children or farms in Canada today than as recently as 1945. This should help people to interpret this latter development in terms of the general economy. It seems to this layman that this trend merits the attention, indeed, of the Premier's inquiry, including the social philosophers. This reader is neither an economist nor a farmer, but has lived for long, I have intuitively subscribed to the old adage that "a stitch in time saves nine." It would seem that "nations break bow upon the farm" knew what he was talking about.

In closing, may I record one reader's opinion that the shift of "loss of (rural) manpower to manufacturing" apparently has been by no means limited or peculiar to Ontario. My understanding is that in the past sixteen years in the United States alone, while 15 million horses and mules were being given the technological "hook", and moving off the farm stage, the farm population in that country declined by more than five million in those same years.

In days of "food and fibre surplus" plus "multi-billion-dollar defence and cold-war expenditures", I suppose the current trend to ebullient urbanization can be taken in the nation's stride. Only the weathermen's plans can define the road ahead.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

AUTOBIOGRAPHY

Few people actually sit down and write their autobiography for publication. All of us, however, are writing our own autobiography, unconscious of the fact. Every move we make each day of our lives is something that is a vital part of what we reveal of ourselves without any pretense.

Nothing is more interesting than a human being, from the time he begins to come to a sense of his life. He is a thing of joy, of comfort, and superior companionship, and even if he is a pain he is genius is brought to light. But most of us live our lives just as if I have heard it said many times that every man and woman has a story in them, and this is very true. But most of them remain unwritten. We read the stories of others that are written and many we are inspired to worship, for heroes. Carlyle wrote a book about his called "Heroes and Hero Worship," one of the great books of the world. In my youth I read it many times.

Every writer puts much of himself, or herself, into what he writes, that he or she writes. How, otherwise, could we? We are people absorbing life and all that it contributes. We are a part of others, and others help to make all that we are as individuals and consciously or unconsciously we are adding but observful and hopeful at times.

Into much of our work, no matter what that work may be, we put ourselves, and the more people what we can, we leave much of ourselves behind, as all worthwhile people do.

Movies, Jazz Good Weapons

(Milwaukee Journal)

The United States does a lot of talking and thinking about winning the cold war in Asia. But what it is doing is fighting "with its hands tied behind its back" according to Robert Alden, New York Times writer.

We have been sending such things as the air force band and the Los Angeles symphony orchestra, to southeast Asia. We've been sending out cultural displays, too. What we should be sending, says Alden, are American movies and small jazz bands. It isn't just his opinion, he says, that the people in Asia want; experts in the area that these are our most potent weapons for winning good will.

Alden gives examples. In Indonesia, Burma, Cambodia and all over southeast Asia, he says, youngsters idolize the American cowboy — and many wear cowboy clothes and play cowboy and Indian games. Just as enthusiastic, he says, are youngsters in Bangkok, he writes, a symphony concert given just as the air force band left the American ambassador was poorly attended while just down the street crowds jammed around a group of Thai musicians playing American jazz rather excitedly.

It wouldn't cost much to send some movie stars whom Alden already knew to the area. Neither would it cost much to send a few jazz "combos" — preferably, Alden suggests, groups containing some of our excellent Negro jazz artists. The money is already popular, and they could help counteract Communist propaganda about racial prejudice.

Jazz and American movies — two items the Communists cannot match. Alden says that Communist films just don't go over. They're too serious and not exciting enough. What we fail to realize is that people are pretty much the same the world over, he says. The leaders may lack culture, philosophy and political science. The people like fun — and everywhere jazz and American movies can give it to them.

Personal Health Talks

Is There a Man Out There?

The other day I came upon this research a fat file but we found comment in a reader's letter and it bucked me up for a moment when I was feeling pretty low.

"I, too, signed the pledge about fifty years ago, not to use alcohol in any form, and have never broken it. I believe I've had more real enjoyment out of life than I could have if I were partly unconscious most of the time."

That's the idea I have tried to advance, but with little success, I fear. In fact, my efforts seemed to evoke resentment and I withdrew Little Lesson 19 from circulation—a booklet which I tried to explain why drinker drinks. My opening remark in the booklet was:

"I hope the Women's Christian Temperance Union will continue to inspire women and other women who have charge of children; to exact a pledge of total abstinence from them. I try needs more women who will see to it that their own children, at least, take such a pledge."

Then and then I receive a letter from a member or an officer stating me on the basis for my contribute to the WCTU, of which, I thank God, my mother was an ardent member, and I received also a letter from a member chiding me for occasional mention of the enjoyment I derive from my pipe.

But here, at last, was a letter from a man . . . I'd like to know does the man live? We had to get into the left lane.

I am sorry to report, being a white collar man myself, that all the pavement. Little flags set in wood blocks marked the freshly painted stripe. Far ahead, a motorized machine was slowly laying the stripe, while a truckload of workmen followed, replacing the markers.

Every hundred yards or so, as we drove, we came to places where someone had deliberately crossed over the line, leaving a nasty swipe of the fresh paint curving off onto the other lane. And, the little flags were knocked over.

Ahead of us, and behind us was a normal procession of highway traffic, with everyone keeping to the single lane, and dutifully respecting the route request of the three mile-long row of little flags.

Who then are those who cut out of line and leave those unsightly smears and overturned flags?

Never cars, in the three miles, passed us from behind in the other lane. All four would have had to cut across the paint line in order

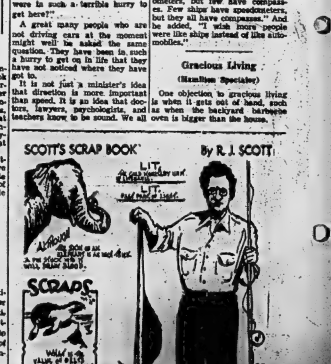
COMPASS VERSUS SPEEDOMETER

A man stopped for speeding twice in a week. He was fined and his license was taken away. As the policeman was folding up his notebook, the driver said, "Officer, would you mind telling me where I am?"



The policeman replied, "Would you mind telling me who, if you were lost, you are?" Then, you were in such a terrible hurry to get here?"

A great many people who are not driving cars are in as much trouble might well be asked the same question. Each, apparently, is in such a hurry to get to life that they have not noticed where they have got to.

It is not just a minister's idea that direction is more important than speed. It is an idea that doctors, lawyers, psychologists, and teachers know to be sound. We all own is bigger than the house.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Christianity Is Christ

By ROY L. SMITH

A missionary who had spent many years in the Orient had grown to believe that all religions were equally good. At the close of his address, a member of the audience followed him to his car and said: "Don't you think we can send Christians to the Orient without trying to make Christians out of them?" There is so much of value in Christianity that they could use to such great advantage. Why do you have to preach Christ?"

A RELIGION AND A LIFE

Christianity is unlike most of the other world religions, in the fact that it centres about a life and not about a philosophy or a system of social ethics.

It is perhaps at the point of its theology that Christianity shows its greatest weaknesses if such they can be called. Or, more probably, it is at the performance of Christians that the flaws are most easily detected.

The Uniform Sunday school lesson for July 8: "Jesus Is The Son of God," Matthew 3:13-17; Hebrews 1:1—2:3; 2:1-3.

The most virulent atheist seldom attempts to find fault with the life of Jesus, or the way He conducted Himself among men. And the most Christlike life is the most convincing argument ever offered in behalf of Christianity.

BELIEFS DO MAKE DIFFERENCE

The tolerant man stands in constant danger of watering down his beliefs until they lose all their vitality. There is absolute heresy in the doctrine that "it makes no difference what you believe, as long as you are honest in your beliefs." As a matter of truth, it makes all the difference in the world what you believe, for your beliefs make you what you are.

That one who is truly tolerant is one who believes something with all the intellectual, moral, and spiritual powers there are in him, but who also stands ready to allow someone else to believe something else in the same fervent way, without attempting to persecute him for his differences.

SOME ESSENTIAL CERTAINTY

There is a considerable tendency in our time to lay the emphasis on Christian beliefs. We accept those who say they believe certain doctrines, regardless of whether or not they live according to Jesus' way or not. We ferret out their opinions on such matters as the virgin birth, the atonement, and the resurrection, without ever asking whether or not they are Christlike in their racial, social, and economic attitudes.

Now there is much of great importance in correct theological opinions, of course. But the acceptance of a doctrine does not always mean the adoption of a way of life. This world is in desperate need of those who are willing to put Jesus' principles into actual practice in their business and labor relations. Just at the moment there is an almost excruciating need for a display of the Christlike spirit in the field of race relations, here in the United States.

A DEMONSTRATION

The whole world is waiting for a demonstration of the spirit of Jesus of Nazareth which it can lay upon alongside our doctrines concerning Him, to discover whether or not they match in any way.

This writer is one who believes that Jesus was the Son of God, for the simple reason that he has seen the Spirit of Christ transform me, and make them like unto Him. He has been convinced by what he has seen demonstrated.

Forgotten Page Of History Is Recalled

OTTAWA (CP)—An almost-forgotten page of history—how Canada claimed possession in 1904 of Ellesmere and Southampton Islands in the Arctic—has come to light in the House of Commons.

H. W. Herridge (CCF—Kootenay West) told the story Thursday from information supplied to him by Dr. L. K. Borden of Victoria, B.C., last known survivor of the first Canadian Arctic expedition in 1903-04.

Dr. Borden was the botanist and medical officer of the government expedition aboard the Neptune, pride of the Newfoundland sealing fleet, under Commander A. P. Low.

The story of the forgotten expedition is proof that the Canadian Arctic belongs to Canada, Mr. Herridge said as he expressed concern "about the maintenance of Canadian sovereignty and the apparent ignorance of certain United States army personnel concerning Canadian rights in the Arctic." (The U.S. is building the DEW (Distant Early Warning) radar line in the Arctic.)

He suggested that somebody write a popular edition of Low's 350-page book, The Cruise of the Neptune—only two copies of which are known to exist in Canada—so that "Canadians generally and the members of the United States defence forces will have a proper knowledge of Canadian rights and sovereignty in the Arctic and when these regions were taken by Canada."

Mr. Herridge said his research for information about the expedition disclosed "an amazing situation," because, apart from one or two brief mentions, the first Canadian Arctic expedition was not reported in reference books and articles about the Canadian Arctic.

Even the federal government had no records of the expedition, except for sketchy notebooks kept by Low and a copy of the commander's book now kept in the parliamentary library.

Mr. Herridge suggested that a copy of Low's report and all possible information the government might be able to obtain from Dr. Borden should be placed with the Dominion archivist for safekeeping.

Kidnappers Scorn Trap so Parents Offer Real Money

WESTBURY, N.Y. (AP) — The distraught parents of 36-day-old Peter Weinberger frantically awaited further instructions today from his kidnapper. They promised to pay real money and do anything for his ransom.

The unidentified kidnapper Thursday scorned a police ransom trap baited with wads of blank paper sandwiched between real bills.

Fears mounted for the safety of the sandy-haired, blue-eyed boy as the ransom package, left in compliance with the kidnapper's instructions, remained untouched on a rainswept wall.

The sleeping infant was snatched from his carriage on the patio of the Weinbergers' handsome brick and clapboard ranch house in this Long Island suburb Wednesday. His father, Morris Weinberger, a well-to-do wholesale drug salesman, told police he had real money ready to pay the demanded $2,000 ransom.

And the mother, Beatrice Weinberger, a pretty, 29-year-old brunette, sobbingly implored the kidnapper to "Please, please, please call anyone. Leave a note anywhere. I shall see that you get what you want."

She was near collapse Thursday as she broadcast a radio and television appeal for the return of her son.

"I am the mother of Peter Weinberger," she read from a written statement that fluttered in her trembling hand. "Whoever you are, please return my baby. . . . I assume you are desperately in need of money. . . .

"I am willing to co-operate in any way. . . . I am most concerned of all for the welfare of my baby. . . . He is only four weeks old. . . .

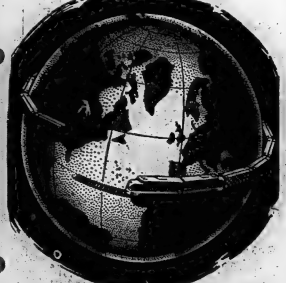
Then she was unable to continue.

"Here," she cried to detectives. "You read this . . . I can't." Weeping uncontrollably, she dropped into a chair.

Thanks, Farmers,

For 50,000,000 Tons of Purina Chows

On April 8th one of the 41 Purina Mills made the 50th Millionth Ton of Purina Chows.



It is a glorious achievement and we are mighty proud. If all the 50,000,000 tons were here today they would fill a Checkerboard train over 21,306 miles long and reaching four-fifths of the way around the world.

So you profit-minded farmers have cast your vote for far more Purina Chows than any other feed.

And the real credit goes to you progressive livestock and poultry feeders. You kept asking for more and more and better and better feeds. You kept Purina Research busy making better Chows—Purina Mills humming to fill your needs—Purina Dealers working hard to keep you supplied.

So, we say to all of you from the bottom of our hearts:

"Thanks a million for 50 Million Tons of business."

Weddings

CHURCH—SPIERS

Baskets of peonies and potted ferns adorned the chancel of Col-lins' Street United church, Picton, Ontario, for a lovely summer wedding when Hilda Elizabeth Spiers of Barrie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Hilton Spiers, became the bride of Mr. Alexander Ross of Belleville, son of Mr. and Mrs. Davis A. Church, on Saturday, June 30, at 11.00 a.m. The Rev. R. E. Lewis of Barrie, pastor of the church, officiated.

Mr. Lloyd Tufford, organist, provided the wedding music.

Given in marriage by her father, Mr. J. Hilton Spiers, the bride wore a charming floor length gown of Chantilly lace over satin fashioned with fitted bascue waist line and off-the-shoulder skirt with chapel train. Her fingertip veil was held by a coronet of matching lace with seed pearls, and she carried a cascade of red roses and bath-wood white carnations.

The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. Hazel Nash of Bermuda, wearing a gown of Alencon lace and syion net over white taffeta, with coronet of matching pearl roses and feathered carnations. She carried a matching bouquet.

Little Sylvia Nash, two-year-old niece of the bride, was dainty and sweet in her sky blue organdy with matching headdress and carrying a basket of petals and sweetheart roses.

Mr. Percy Chubb of Eastbourne, England, attended the bridegroom, while Dr. Morley Nash, of Bermuda, acted as usher.

Following the ceremony, a reception and dinner was held at Hotel Birchmere on Lake Couchiching, at Orillia, where the bride's table was adorned with peonies. The bride's mother, attired in a sheath gown of silk jacquard with jacket in rosewood shade with hat of pink roses, received, assisted by the bridegroom's mother, who was gowned in nylon sheer over taffeta in tones of purple, fashioned in redingote style, with white accessories, and sprays of pink carnations.

For the wedding trip to the Rideau Lakes, the bride travelled in South Sea Blue nylon ensemble with white accessories and a hair garland of pink roses. Mr. and Mrs. Church will reside in Belleville.

Guests attended from England, Germany, Bermuda, Hamilton and Kingston.

Prior to her marriage, the bride was honored by the teachers of the Ontario School for the Deaf, where the bride is a member of the teaching staff.

WHA Tells of Administration

(Editor's note: Following is a report on the duties and activities of a hospital administrator, submitted to a recent meeting of the Belleville General Hospital Women's Auxiliary by Mrs. J. R. Arthur):

A hospital is much like a small community with only one aim—to this case the Intelligencer Auxiliary carries out the patient. An intricate network of skills is required to deliver a personal service of a most intimate character.

In the forward to "Hospitals and take in hospitals" (which is a study conducted by the N. Y. State School of Industrial and Labor Relations, with the support and cooperation of the A. H. A.) George Bugbee states: "Hospital service does not stem only from a large working force and great expenditure. The quality of hospital service and the public acceptance of the effectiveness of hospital care are almost entirely dependent on two intangibles: the intelligent training and motivation of the individual members of the hospital staff and the adeptness with which the hospital administration welds this complicated medical, nursing and housekeeping equipment for the care of sick people . . . It is only here that intelligent, well-trained people can function. It was with a view to seeing at first-hand the administration of a hospital, that I 'shadowed' Mr. Kenneth Box on June 11.

But first what is it? What is an Administrator? What background training and experience once does he have? I had read that formerly it was believed that any good man could learn the rudiments of the job through experience. In recent years all of that time have changed may be seen in the fact that many universities now offer courses which lead to a professional degree in Hospital Administration. The product of such a course is the Administrator of Belleville General Hospital. Mr. Box did post-graduate work in the Hospital Administration Course and served a year as Interne in Hospital Administration at the North Vancouver General Hospital and on completion of his internship was placed on the staff as Director of personnel and purchasing agent. He was subsequently assistant administrator of North Vancouver General for three years and assistant administrator and Comptroller at Niagara Falls General Hospital for three years before coming to Belleville in 1953.

RUST MORNING

When I arrived at 9 a.m. at Mr. Box's office, he was busy with the morning mail and I took advantage of the opportunity to study the room. Of immediate interest was a large chart on the wall. It was later in the morning that Mr. Box explained what it was to me, but since it holds the key to the crux of the matter, I want to give you here the explanation in the very beginning. In a simple and graphic manner the chart shows the lines of authority and function within the hospital organization. On the one hand we have the Hospital Board, of 15 members (representing the City of Belleville, the County of Hastings, the Medical Staff, the W.C.A. and the Provincial Government) which outlines policy. On the other hand is the staff of the hospital (including doctors, nurses, business officer, housekeeping, maintenance, purchasing, etc.) who implement the policy. Between these two is the Administrator. His office is the heart of the whole organization — He is, in effect, an individual of many talents and skills. It is from this the policies established by the Board and directives to the heads of departments within the hospital.

The Board, with its various standing committees of finance, audits, executive, nursing, personnel, public relations and supplies and property deals directly, and only, with the Administrator who sits on all committees in an advisory capacity together with the department heads' representatives on command. It is to him and to him alone that the authority is given to carry out such decisions as are made by the Board. He in turn directs the head of each department involved, who then has the authority to carry out the work in his department. One cannot help but be impressed with the efficiency and smoothness of the function of authority breeds. With the members of each department advised and controlled by only the head of that department and the head in turn responsible to the Administrator only, there is no amount due is serious; yet, as each account was discussed it was not without compassion and due regard to the complete circumstances. Mr. Bailey and Mr. Box were able to provide valuable information on each individual concerned.

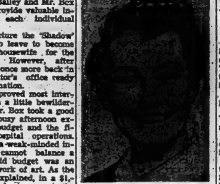
At this juncture the "Shadow" was forced to leave to become once more a housewife for the next short period. However, after lunch we were once more back in the administrator's office ready for more information.

This session proved most interesting, although a little overwhelming at times. Mr. Box took a good portion of his busy afternoon explaining the budget and the financing of hospital operations. This budget is a week-indicted individual who cannot balance a simple household budget was an awe-inspiring work of art. As the administrator explained, in a $1,000,000-a-year business, the hospital is, a good budget carefully established and rigidly followed, is essential to efficient and economical operation.

The pay-roll has been presented for approval and signature and this led to a discussion of wages and a study of the budget. The administrator had mentioned that over the past few years several professional members had been added to the staff which had increased the pay-roll enormously. Yet, through careful budgeting and the conscientious work from the services provided by this staff, the patient's financial position was better than previously.

NOT CHILD'S PLAY

I now scarcely point out that the administration staff of $1,000,000 yearly is no child's play. The aim of hospital operation is to provide, like, always with the best interest of the patient in mind, is not a task to be undertaken lightly. Indeed, under Mr. Box, every department head must accept a great deal of soul-searching before final figures are arrived at. The costs and comparisons with previous year are used as the basis upon which each department, early in September, begins to compute its financial needs for the following year. A preliminary budget reviews this estimate with the administrator and after due consideration, and such adjustments as are deemed necessary, the budget is established. Finally a monthly breakdown is made and a monthly review of each department is held. Any deviations must be accounted for, and wide variations must be found to recover any unfavorable balance in succeeding months.



Simply the estimates for 1956 were:

Expenses	$ 966,153
Salaries	823,577
Supplies	142,576
Debent. Princ. to be paid from current funds	19,950
Cap. equipment from current funds	7,715
Total cash needed	$1,013,343
Income (less per cent of increase of accounts receivable new building)	1,013,343
Surplus	1,419

What provides hospital income? Several sources—chief of which is (1) general services—i.e. private and semi-private, ward and emergency charges; (2) special services i.e. operating rooms, laboratory fees, physiotherapy; (3) grants from the province of Ontario and municipal budget.

This may appear to be an over-simplification of a very complex financial statement, but it gives the significant story which is simply that a very detailed organization, spending in excess of $1,000,000, in many different and apparently unrelated departments, adheres to its estimates and comes up not only with its estimated surplus—but actually

SURVIVES NINE DAYS PINNED UNDER AUTO

Jean Margetts, an 18-year-old Sunnyvale, California girl, is in critical condition at hospital in Salt Lake City, Utah, after surviving nine days pinned under a wrecked car at the bottom of a 250-foot gully near Salt Lake City. Her companion, James Hixon, 22, of Salt Lake City, was found dead about 20 feet from the car. An airplane spotted the wreck and reported it to the highway patrol. A rescue party of 200 men and a double chain used to carry the girl up the steep sides of the gully.

as things now stand considerably in excess of this estimate. This does not mean, however, that the patient has in any way been reduced but rather that the added expenditure is due to the fact that the hospital is able to provide through its additional qualified and competent staff, have been in excess of the estimate.

EMERGENCY BUDGET

To the uninitiated that budget was most fascinating and impressive. Those long columns of figures and rows of figures, working out to approximately one-twelfth of the administrator's concern for and the importance he attaches to the responsibility that has been invested in him.

Our discussion of this matter was by no means constant, but was interrupted from time to time by telephone calls and requests from various department-heads of the hospital.

The purchasing department had advised Mr. Box that delivery had been received of sample bassinettes for the new nursery. Later in the afternoon a visit was made to examine the equipment and to hear the opinions of the nursing staff. Finally concurred. Decision on the selection of the equipment would be made after due deliberation of its merits.

The maintenance department reported that the elevator was out by the dust blowing into the lobby. Instructions for sending for Measures which might be taken to alleviate the nuisance were discussed with the contractor.

The head of the nursing department advised the administrator that a by-product of her rest during the previous week had been a list of plans and new ideas that she wished to discuss with him.

The head of the Radiology Department also wished an interview to discuss some problems arising in the department.

A tour of the new operating and pediatrics wings and left the 'Shadow' in a state of exhaustion for her mind was already in a whirl of impressions and facts and figures which needed sorting-out. So she had a consultation her with his problems, convinced that he would approach each with the same care and determination that had carried him through the earlier lesson in budgeting with a not too apt pupil.

Requisites Needed For Heaven Told to W.M.S.

Camilton Woman's Missionary Society was hostess to the younger groups of the church—G.M.I.T., Tyro Boys and Mission Band at their July meeting held in the Sunday-school rooms.

Mrs. R. Pound, the president, presided.

A donation of $20 from the Young Women's Union was much appreciated.

Mrs. D. Brenton read a letter concerning the bale of used clothing sent.

Mrs. J. Williams had charge of the program. Worship service Scripture was given by Beverlea Willard.

This was followed by meditation by Mrs. Williams. The theme was "Witnessing". "We all can witness for Christ by the way we live each day. Jesus witnessed for God at the age of 12 and also on the cross by saying "Father forgive them, they know not what they do."

Miss Carolyn Brenton favored with a solo.

Mission Band favored with songs and the attainment of CGIT with the WMS took place.

The speaker for the afternoon was the Rev. W. G. McCrae, who told the story of the little boy who had a dream. He went to heaven and Peter was at the gate. The boy asked if he could go in but Peter said "No", because the boy's heart was not the right one. It was black.

The boy left and he met a boy with a green cloth in his hand. He said to the first boy "Don't be selfish, don't be unkind, don't be disobedient, don't lie". The boy said he would try to not do these things and again went to heaven. Peter said that was not enough.

Then he met a man with a white cloth. He said "Do be a good sport; do be trustworthy; do be dependable; do be a regular at Sunday school and church". The man said he would try to do these things. Again went to Peter but was turned down. That was not enough.

Next he met a WMS woman with a red cloth in her hand. She told him the red reminded him of the blood of Jesus and the Cross. He always go to the Cross for help. This will make your heart white. As he talked with the WMS lady, he saw Jesus in her heart and then his heart became clean. The boy said "I want to know your Jesus and see God."

On behalf of the Camilton WMS and WA Mrs. Williams was presented with a gift by Mrs. A. Hurd and Mrs. J. Bird.

Mr. McCrae and the Rev. W. R. Morrish also spoke of the service rendered by Mrs. Williams and her family. Mrs. Williams graciously responded, saying she enjoyed the work and invited everyone to be present.

CGIT favored with a song and Mr. McCrae closed with the benediction.

A social hour followed.

SERVICE FOR WEDDING RECEPTIONS IN CHURCH HALL

Dear Mrs. Beechman:

I would like to ask some questions concerning wedding receptions in the church hall, follow wedding in the church. We are considering making some changes in the serving procedure, and want to know the "do's" and "don'ts" all.

1. When serving at a wedding reception, is it proper to serve the punch glass containing the punch on a small glass plate, and then when the piece of wedding cake is served to each guest, put on the same plate, on the side of the punch glass?

2. We are tired of serving the same dessert course, cookies and ice cream. Would it be proper to serve, instead of this, strawberry shortcake and whipped cream? If you approve of this, would it be proper to serve a spoon or a dessert-size fork with the shortcake?

3. Instead of serving the tea and coffee, hot chocolate, which has been done, would it be proper to serve the beverages into the cups and then take one cup at a time to the guests? (The latter service would be done in a small room we have available. — Reader

1. This is a usual procedure when the service is informal. Usually it concentrates the serving of the two "must" items: (a) the wedding cake, and (b) the beverage for the drinking of the toasts. For the kind of service you must plan for, I should think this would be definitely the most convenient. Either in serving the punch into the glasses, special care should be taken not to fill the glasses to the full . . . it is often so carelessly done that the beverage spills over the cake, with extremely unattractive results. (Nowadays there are small, inexpensive glass holders designed for this type of service, with a division into which the glass should just fit. You might like to consider these when you have to replace any glass plates.)

2. In my observation I think strawberry shortcake is a bit too rich to serve attractively, to a large group, particularly with whipped cream which doesn't want to stay put! I think one reason why one gets bored with serving cookies and ice cream is that too, too often the cookies are the same old kinds, never an interesting variation. Why to serve ice cream with an interesting sauce (strawberries for this sauce?), and with really interesting cookies? Or how about an ice cream cake? (If you do decide to serve strawberry shortcake, you'll have to use extra silverplate, and it would doubtless be more convenient to serve a spoon with it, even though the dessert fork would be more "proper.")

3. Much better service to set aside the small room for serving the tea and coffee, with the beverage cups and saucers on a good-size tray to be passed to the guests.

A BIZARRE KIND OF WRITING PAPER

Dear Mrs. Beechman:

My young sister insists on buying (and using!) that kind of double-sheet writing paper with the first page narrower than the second page. And sometimes the margin of the second page is of a different color. She insists that this kind of paper is very smart, and also that it is correct. I think it's horrible, and moreover I don't think it could be considered correct. What do you think about this kind of writing paper? — M.

I agree with you . . . this bizarre kind of writing paper seems to go out of its way to be unattractively different. And it is not a correct paper.

CHOOSE SUMMER LIPSTICKS WITH CARE

Wondering why your favorite lipstick doesn't seem quite as attractive to you as it did a month ago? Does it seem to clash with your skin tones, even your pretty summer clothes? Well, there's probably a very good reason: you're tanning. You may not yet have achieved the golden bronze look you hope to have by summer's end but you're on the way. So your lipstick, the cosmetic — and especially the lipstick — you used while a "paleface" won't do much for you now.

To complement bronzed or bronzing skin and the pastel shades which are usually worn in summer time, you'll need a lipstick which will accent the coral, depending on the depth of your tan, the color of your eyes and hair, will depend the shade of lipstick you choose. There is such a wide selection on the cosmetics counters that you should have no difficulty. But you certainly will have to experiment. Some of the vivid pink and coral tones are especially lovely with a tan, for they give a rosy glow. Lipsticks with a slightly — and we do mean slightly — orange cast dramatically accent the truly coppery tan. And, for the girl who hasn't quite got a tan, whose skin has acquired a more radiantly healthy glow than the sports during the winter months, there are several vivid reds which should prove highly becoming.

Some girls prefer not to use face rouge when they've tanned. Others like to use just a little. Whichever your preference however be sure to use a rouge which complements your lipstick. Don't use an orange-toned rouge with a coral lipstick or vice versa. The same goes for nail polish. Be sure that all your cosmetics harmonize — and do things for your "summer look."

If swimming's your favorite sport at this season of the year, you might be interested in one or the other of the waterproof lipsticks. There are several on the market, all good, but one of the latest contains two ingredients which make it especially valuable. One is nourishing the other has healing properties. Both are to be considered if you are constantly exposed to sun, wind and salt water.

Your summer lipstick should accent tanned skin, light clothes.

ADVICE To The LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

YOU'RE OVER-ESTIMATING A LOT OF THINGS, MR. D.

Dear Beatrice Fairfax:

I've come to one of those problems in life that seems to have no solution and I'm almost going out of my mind. I've consulted all my friends and they, too, are at a loss for an answer.

After going with a girl for the last year, we became engaged two months ago. She loves me very much and I thought I loved her. I have a great deal of respect for her, I enjoy her company and I think she is the greatest. But three weeks ago, I believe I really fell in love with "the" one girl.

I'm well over the age of reason, but I know what I want out of life, and I feel I know love when I see it. The thing that's driving me crazy is that if I break off my girl I'm engaged to, it will hurt her almost beyond repair. But if I stay with her and deprive myself of the love of the other girl, I'll probably not only be miserable, but in later years might, in one way or another, hold my unhappiness against the one I stuck to. Both these girls love me, but I love only one.

Should I risk hurting one or the other and, if so, which one should it be? — Mr. D

Dear Mr. D.:

You're "well over the age of reason" you'd say you haven't even reached it! For if your reasoning powers really had attained maturity, could you actually believe that you know love when you see it and at the same time find it consistent to become engaged to one girl when you thought you loved and, two months later, want to "break" her over for another?

Stuff and nonsense, Mr. D. You're vastly over-rating not only your ability to know but your knowledge of what you "want out of life."

How about coming down to earth and getting a close-up of reality? If you're considering for that, hardly escape realizing that your reasoning on the subject of love is not yet to be trusted.

Once you've done that — and you will, you must, do — then tell the first girl that you're afraid you mistook your feelings when you asked her to marry you and that, deeply as you regret it, you simply must tell her you think it would hurt her less to break off now than to wait until later and find out in the end that you've had her living in a fool's paradise; rather think you may be overestimating your charms when you feel she'll be "broken-hearted forever" if she loses you. She'll get over it in time. That's for sure.

I'd advise you also to say nothing to her about this other girl, let her believe, rather, that it was entirely mad as to rush immediately into a second engagement. Have the will power to hold your tongue for awhile until your emotional condition clears and you've given yourself time to know definitely what you want. It might even be, you know, that before long you'll meet still another girl you like better than either of the other two. Want to bet?

Readers' Friday Column

As Conducted by Mary Moore

QUESTION:

If have a cast iron skillet in which I made the mistake of making a tomato sauce. As a result the acid in the tomatoes brought out a taste of iron which ordinary washings with cleanser and steel wool cannot remove. I have also tried hot water and baking soda with no results. Can you tell me any method I might try to remove iron taste and make the skillet usable again? —(Mrs. J. M.)

ANSWER:

I'm not sure that I am right about this but I think my mother used to put about 1-3 lb. lard (it was cheap in those days) in her iron frying-pan and heat it slowly until it came to smoking point, then let it cool and set in the frying-pan. Then she scraped out and discarded the fat and washed the pan in hot soapy water and dried it in the sun. See if that works. I should welcome help from readers on this if they have other ideas.

QUESTION:

. . . would like to make strawberry tarts like you buy. Would it be good with ice cream? Danish pastry for shells, filled with fresh strawberries and fresh berries? Would they need to be cooked or just covered with sugar and let "set" for a while then covered with a glaze? Would red currant jelly melted on top be all right, then covered with brown coconut round the edge. Have I got the right idea? I wonder if you would like to print this lovely inexpensive Cocoa Cake everybody likes!

COCOA CAKE

(Courtesy Mrs. J. C. McG.)

One and one-half cups flour, 4 tablespoons cocoa, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon soda, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 1-4 cup butter, 1 cup sugar (scant), 1-2 cup sour milk, 1 egg at last add 1-4 cup boiling water. Cream butter, sugar, then add beaten egg. Sift dry ingredients and add alternately with sour milk. Add vanilla. Lastly add boiling water. Moderate oven 300 to 350 for 30 minutes. Filling—Few dates covered with boiling water—cook a little and add some brown sugar. Carmel Icing—1-3 cups brown sugar, 2 tablespoons butter, 4 tablespoons cream, 1 teaspoon vanilla. Boil 3 minutes by clock, stirring all the time. Take from fire, beat till cool—adding a little cream if too stiff— Mrs. J. C. McG.

ANSWER:

Thank you and it was good hearing from you again. You could use either plain tender pastry or Danish pastry for the tarts. Danish Pastry is made by sifting together 2 cups flour with about 1-2 teaspoon salt, and working in with fingertips 1-4 cup shortening. Then stir in 1 egg beaten and enough ice water to bind mixture. Chill before rolling out to 1-8 inch thickness. You are right about not cooking the berries. I'd not spoon them when I pour a hot sweet glaze over. The melted red currant jelly would be lovely, and the browned coconut edging sounds delicious but is not necessary. I think it is sort of gilding the lily.

Aluminum helped today's high-speed, high-compression car engine get that way. Aluminum pistons brought not only tougher but lightness to the up-and-down job. Less weight means less inertia and so possible higher engine revolutions. It brought load-handling, too — so your engine doesn't overheat when you drive fast andfar.

It started in the treetops — and today every car produced in North America is designed with aluminum pistons. And much of the aluminum comes from Canadian smelters. To match the needs of the economic, aircraft, construction and the other industries for large quantities of aluminum, Alcan is again stepping up its already enormous smelting capacity.

HUTTON — O'CONNOR

Tonight may see the parting of the ways for Dashing Dick Hutton and his wind-whipped one-thousand dollar bill. Another rip-roaring cavalier of the mat has entered the lists and entered divorce proceedings. The final decree may be handed down this evening before a large appreciative jury of the faithful.

DICK HUTTON

Then again it may not. Master Richard has closed the door to all aspirants to the grand thus far — and that includes some of the blue-bloods of the rassling rack — pardon, game, and one called Whipper Billy Watson.

Pathrick O'Connor, whose ancestors may have been members of the Fin McCool gang when beesman Fin bested the giant off the causeway and was bested back by Finn's kid, McCool Muilhall, is not so money-hungry as to unclean to prove that the Dublin lad's toe can be pushed against the canvas and held there until the man in white pummels the mat with the fateful three-count.

The big fellow with the Irish name may not have heard the bamboon howl over the marshes of Killiecranny nor the whimpers of the cmudmuns descending from the mist-shrouded tors of the mountains o' Mourne, but step his mogrin he wears the British Empire medal and Maestro Hutton cannot remove that bauble because of nationality reasons, but he can garnish it with the wind-floppy thousand dollar bill.

All Pathrick has to do is reduce Richard to a horizontal position for the count of three before the clock ticks off twenty minutes. Many have tried. Some have come close, but that thousand-buck plaster is still there for the taking. Mebbe Pat will change it to Killmurry pounds after tonight's bassie.

Then there's the handsome duo the Brunetti Brothers popular tag-team favorites here and elsewhere, who tangle with those nasties, Mark Lewin and Jan Gotch. The Italianate era clever maimers, always good for a standout show but they are liable to run into a couple of tough customers when the Gotch-Lewin set-up. What those guys can't think off! Popular Billy Stack makes his Belleville seasonal debut against Roberto Pico, another Latin, in the opener.

JUNIOR GOLF

Here's a chance for every boy to compete in one of Canada's major golf tournaments — the Ontario Junior Championship. Whether you belong to a golf club or not and are under 19 years of age, you can play in one of the district qualifying rounds to try for a place in the finals at Toronto.

To enter the final at The Scarboro Golf Club for The Telegram Trophies, the future champions must earn their spots in district qualifying rounds to be played July 9 at seven centres. In each division, for every five entries competing, one low scorer will qualify for the finals.

At least 144 holes of medal competition will be declared this year. Dundas Valley's Ron Capra, who captured the Junior crown last year, is now too old to defend his championship so a new boy will take over the title. Both Phil Brownlee, Scarboro, the previous winner, and Bob Panaich, Sarnia, the bantam champion, will be back for another crack at an Ontario title.

After the finals are held July 17 at Scarboro, for those who qualify in the district rounds, a junior team will be chosen to play against a District of Columbia team in an international match, in Toronto in late July.

It is not necessary to be a member of a golf club to enter the district play and the entry fee is a modest $1.00. There is no entry fee for those who qualify to play in the Ontario finals at Scarboro Golf Club July 17.

Ontario's Junior golf development committee has made further steps to encourage teen-agers to play more golf. Several clubs in Toronto (St. George's, Rosedale, Thornhill, Tam O'Shanter, Lambton and Scarboro) have granted playing time to juniors on Mondays between 7 a.m. and 9 a.m. during July and August.

There are three divisions in which you may compete for Ontario championships. Junior age takes in those 16, 17 and 18 years of age; Juvenile, 14 and 15 years; and Bantam, 13 and under. However, a player must not have reached his 19th birthday before midnight, Aug. 14, the date of the first round of the 1956 Canadian junior championship.

Qualifying rounds on July 9 are being held in the following districts and courses: The Bay of Quinte Club, here; Windsor — Beach Grove Club; Hamilton - Dundas Valley Club; Sarnia - Sarnia Golf Club; and Toronto — Summit Club. Northern Ontario and Thunder Bay districts will also hold qualifying rounds with places in the finals going to the leaders.

Entries may be sent to the club at which the qualifying round is being held except for Toronto where they will go to the Ontario Golf Association office, Room 307, 41 St. Clair St., Toronto. Post entries will be accepted at the first tee providing they do not interfere with the draw.

CAN'T THROW BASS BACK

TORONTO (CP)—Ontario, anglers, taught for years to throw back under-size bass, mustn't do it any more.

The catch limit till is six a day but anglers must keep the first six caught, no matter what their size.

The rule on keeping the first six was announced by the fish and wildlife division of the department of lands and forests when it wiped out its old minimum of 12 inches for a black bass keeper.

Dr. W. J. Hartleyer, division chief, said that under the old rule many small bass died when returned to the water by an angler keeping only 11-inchers. He expects the change in regulations, effective when the season opened last Sunday, will result in more and bigger bass for anglers in future years.

Defeat Places Idle Dodgers Three Points Astern of 2nd; McDougald Sparks Yank Win

By ED WILKS

Their own County Stadium, of all places, is fast becoming a "jinx" park for Milwaukee Braves who take over the National League lead on the road, then fall flat at home.

The Braves lost their grasp on first place again Thursday night in a 7-1 defeat by the Chicago Cubs. It was the 12th defeat in their last 18 games at home (where they have only a 14-14 season mark) and shoved the Milwaukees three percentage points behind the Cincinnati Redlegs, who were idle.

What's more, the defeat left the Braves only three points ahead of the third place Brooklyn Dodgers, who were rained out at New York in the only other NL game scheduled.

LOSING AGAIN

In their last home stand, the Braves lost 10 of 15 and tumbled from first to fifth before catching fire with an 11-game winning streak on the road. Now they've lost two of three on the current home stand.

The sixth-place Cubs, who have taken six of their last nine, including three-of-four from the Braves, socked Milwaukee and Ray Crone with five runs after two were out in the seventh inning.

Eddie Miksis' eighth homer started the uprising as six straight hits snapped a 1-1 tie. Don Hoak and Dee Fondy each had RBI doubles in the big frame while Gene Baker sliced a two-run single.

Vito Valentinetti, making his first major league start, and Jim Brosnan four-hit the Braves. Starr won his second with one-bit ball over 4 1-3 relief innings, coming on when Valentinetti injured his knee covering ho mipeate on a wild pitch that scored the Milwaukee run.

Richmond Whips Marlins 4-2, Jets Blast Kings

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS 5

Bill Renna couldn't make the grade in the majors because of his hitting, for rather his lack of it) but the Richmond outfielder sure is clouting the pitchers in the International League.

In 20 games since joining the Virginians, the 29-year-old former member of the New York Yankees and Kansas City Athletics has connected with 30 hits in 71 times at bat for a .423 average. Sixteen of the hits have been for extra bases, including eight home runs, two of which were inside the park.

He smashed two doubles to account for three runs and scored once Thursday night as the Virginians whipped Miami Marlins 4-2 in one of the two league games. In the other Columbus Jets thumped Havana Sugar Kings 11-4. Toronto at Rochester and Montreal at Buffalo were rained out.

Renna doubled home one run in the first inning and then scored himself and sent the other two across the plate in the fifth as the Virginians broke the 3-3 deadlock.

Ben Dowell grand slam homer and Al Pilarcik's 17th home run of the season were the highlights of the Jets' 16-hit attack against Havana.

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Cold weather Thursday forced postponement of the B. Thomas at London scheduled Intercounty Baseball League game. Rain caused postponement of Kitchener at Oshawa.

TYLER, Tex. (AP) — Shelley Mann of the Berkeley, Calif., YMCA, and Carin Cone, 16-year-old New Jersey school girl, smashed world records Thursday night as features of the women's national AAU swimming meet.

Miss Mann did it in the 400-metre individual medley and Miss Cone in the 200-metre backstroke. Miss Mann swept through the medley in 5:32.5 to better the world record for a 20 - metre course of 6:04.2, set by Marie Gillett of Indianapolis in 1954.

Miss Cone bettered the world mark of 2:45.6 set by Judit Temes of Hungary in 1953, and tied by Miss Cone but not yet officially accepted. Her record time was 2:43.8.

Brockville Four-Man Crew Enters Henley Semi-Final

HENLEY - ON - THAMES, Eng. (AP) — The Brockville, Ont., four-man crew that won the heat in Ladies' Margaret Boat Club crew from Cambridge by three lengths again s berth in Saturday's semi-finals for the Wyford Challenge Cup.

The Canadians, troubled by crosswind currents, covered the one-mile, 550-yard Royal Henley Regatta course in seven minutes, 54 seconds.

The semi-final will be held Saturday morning with the final in the afternoon.

The Brockville lassies planned their race well today. The Cambridge University crew took an early lead and extended it by half a length at the quarter mile.

But the Canadians, better grade, ally applied the power and overtook the British crew.

The Canadians seemed to have less difficulty than the British crew in handling the current in the crosswind. The Lady Margaret Club crew wobbled a bit from side to side while the Canadians held steady.

The University young men from Brockville scored easy wins Wednesday and Thursday in preliminary heats.

The Canadians triumphed impressively Thursday over a London Rowing Club four. They showed the Britons how to buck wild waves and gusty winds at Henley was treated to the kind of weather that gives carmen bad dreams.

The Wyford event is one of 12 which make up the regatta. The Brockville eight also had an entry in the Thames Challenge Cup competition, the highest-rated single the regatta's second-seating event but was defeated in the first heat.

A pealing bell from the Leander clockhands, bidding to end an eight-year string of United States victories in the Thames Cup race, reached the quarter-finals with an impressive victory over Harvard University of Belfast, Princeton University and the Kent School of Connecticut also scored easy victories to win quarter-final berths.

Princeton Thursday defeated the Thames River Rowing Club over the mile and 320-yard course by 1¼ lengths in seven minutes, 36 seconds. Kent beat a London Rowing Club eight in 7:39.

A surprise to the British was the defeat of their highly-rated Leander Club eight in the Grand Challenge Cup, premier event of the regatta. Leander had been looked on as Olympic Games material but was humbled Thursday by three College of Cambridge in an unimpressive performance.

Canada's crew in the Wyford event won Wednesday's opening heat against a London crew stroked by five lengths and noticeably slacked off its pace in the last 100 yards to post a time of seven minutes, 54 seconds. It also ran Thursday's race against London Rowing Club in 7:58, despite wind and wavy water. Their winning margin again was several lengths.

Thomson Making Daring Bid For 3rd British Open Crown

HOYLAKE, Eng. (CP) — Australia's Peter Thomson, aided by a break in the stormy weekend in Thursday's second round, ran away and hid from most of the field in the bid for a third straight British open golf championship.

Among the late starters, he escaped most of the effects of a heavy wind and rain storm that had the scoreboard considering its appalling contortions with a sun breaking through, the defending champion fired a 69 to go 36 holes in straight 70, one under par, to take the halfway lead by one stroke.

The field was reduced to the top 44 for the final 36 holes today.

Stan Leonard of Vancouver and Lachute, Que., was among those who didn't make it Thursday, taking a huge 83 for a 36-hole score of 158, two strokes over the qualifying limit. An eight on the par-four 11th hole sealed his doom.

BALDING SLIPS BEHIND

Al Balding of Toronto, who had been tied for third place with Thomson and two others after an opening-round 70, took an 81 Thursday and virtually eliminated himself from contention. A three-over-par seven on the first hole and two-over-par sixes on the 12th and 17th were his major disasters although he strayed over par on four more holes.

The Canadians had illustrious company, South Africa's Bobby Locke, a three-time open champion, came in with two inches of rainwater in his golf bag and a 72. Big Ben-day total of 139 forced him to the sidelines.

The battered survivors included Denis Smaldon, the Welshman whose 69 gave him the first-round lead. He took a 74 Thursday. Three-time winner Henry Cotton took a 76 for 146. Gene Sarazen, the 1932 champion from Germantown, N.Y., pared his opening 73 to 74. His 147 netted him to continue but be withdrew from further play.

The two men who stayed close to Thomson were Roberto de Vicenzo, the 1950 Argentine champion, who now lives in Mexico, and Enrique Bertolino, the current Argentine titleholder.

De Vicenzo matched Thomson's 70 and Bertolino, Wednesday's runner-up, carded a 72 to tie at 141, one stroke behind the champion.

Head Faces Rosewall in Tennis Finals

WIMBLEDON, Eng. (CP)—Lew Hoad, 21-year-old Australian tennis star, is not beginning to think of the Davis Cup. He's concerned about Sydney fellow-townsman, Ken Rosewall, in the finals of the all-England tennis tournament today.

Hoad, who had shown only flashes of top-flight tennis against inferior opponents in the early rounds, turned on his full power Thursday to blast Hamilton Richardson, a member of the United States Davis Cup team, who had jolted him by winning the first set of their semi-final match.

Seemingly undeterred by the swirling near-gale which played tricks with the balls, Hoad bludgeoned the sixth-seeded Richardson into submission 2-6, 6-4, 9-7, 6-4, to set up the first all-Australian final in more than 30 years.

The Hoad - Richardson match lacked the sparkle of Wednesday's semi-final between Rosewall and Vic Seixas in which the Philadelphian battled the little Aussie perfectionist through five hard-fought sets.

Both players were erratic in the opening set, with Hoad virtually giving away his services in the seventh-game breakthrough. Richardson was outgunned thereafter.

The Australian swooped the first set while he probed Richardson's defence and while he tested the offence. Then he ran out the match almost calling his own shots.

The Americanless championship semi-finals, as nothing else has, the falling quality of players from the nation which dominated the game for years.

U.S. Davis Cup team captain Bill Talbert, in London to try to piece together an American team, said sadly: "It's gone over hopeful but I'm afraid I'm going back much less so.

"There is little encouraging here."

Toronto Firm Offers $20,000 For Lake Swim

TORONTO (CP)—In an attempt to have an annual swim across Lake Ontario organized as a world marathon swimming championship, a Toronto business concern said through an advertising agency it is prepared to offer $20,000 plus money this year and would guarantee at least that much in succeeding years.

Hugh Garvey of the agency said the sponsor, whose identity has not been disclosed, also will consider footing the cost of holding such an event, in addition to the prize money.

The sponsor would not, however, commit himself to the undertaking unless he is satisfied the swim would be properly organized by a responsible and competent organization, with particular regard to the safety of swimmers.

RESPONSIBILITY

Ideally there should be a responsible body set up overseas on Canadians to organize the swims and a governing body to draw up and approve the regulations.

"If there were two such organizations in existence" the sponsor "would have no hesitation about making a concrete offer."

A number of organizations, including the Canadian Swimming Coaches Association, have been approached. The association at a meeting Wednesday night offered to organize such a swim but suggested a "second opinion" be it.

That was taken to indicate that it would not be interested in a sponsor connected with liquor interests. Mr. Garvey said Thursday he does "not think my client's product would arouse any controversy."

Two Strokes Up

Unsung Wininger Paces Pack In Canadian Open 2nd Round

By CHARLES BABIN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

POINTE CLAIRE, Que. (CP)—Bo Wininger was the man to beat today as the field started the second round of the Canadian open golf championship.

Virtually ignored in pre-tournament selections, the 31-year-old Texan fired a record-equalling 63 over the par - 72 Beaconsfield Country Club course to capture the first-round lead by two strokes.

He followed up a first - nine total of 35, one under par, with a withering six-under back-nine 28.

If Wininger can keep reasonably up with his Thursday's performance he stands to win first prize of $2,400.

Wininger's 63 equalled the course record set 18 years ago also in the Canadian Open—by Ellsworth Vines of Los Angeles, who shot 32 - 31. The title Vines, year, however, went to George Wade after a playoff with fellow-American Dick Metz.

Wininger was two strokes up on a quarter of Canadians tied at 67. They were Dow Finsterwald, of Miami Beach, Fla.; Dale Mayer, of St. Petersburg, Fla.; Paul Harney, of Dolton, Illinois, and Art Wall, Jr., of Elmsford, N.Y.

Leading the Canadian entries was host pro Bill Kerr, who shot 68. He fired a 69 Thursday after defending champion Arnold Palmer, of Latrobe, Pa., and Don Cox of Grosse Ile, Mich., missed the Canadian amateur title in 1953.

Palmer settled down after what he described as "a terrifying start," and came in with a 70, well down the list. In all, 39 subchasers bettered par, including eight Canadians.

Doe finished out of the first-day running with a 76.

Top Canadian amateur was John Turner of Montreal. He shot a 71, tying 15 others. Robert Staats, an Elmsford, N.Y., amateur, stayed with the pack and finished in a three-way tie for third place at 68.

Also turning in 68 were Marty Furgol, of Lemont, Ill., and Dick Turner of San Antonio, Texas.

American Ted Kroll was the biggest disappointment with a 74. Kroll currently is second-leading money winner on the pro tournament circuit.

Doug Ford, of Mahopac, N.Y., shot a 71, as did Gerry Kesterton of Toronto, Gene Littler, with the day's largest gallery looking on, started with a flourish but faded with the sun to finish at 71.

The graying Wininger only once lost his composure. At the 10th he delayed his drive because of an amateur movie-camera enthusiast.

"That little machine was scaring me," he said, then went on to birdie the par-three hole.

The field, now 136 strong, will be cut to the low 100 and ties after today's round. It will be chopped again after Saturday's round to 80 lows and ties for the finals on Sunday.

SIGN 8 MORE

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Alouettes Thursday night announced signing of eight more players for the coming season, all veterans of Big Four football.

Rolled down by the Big Four club were linesmen Herb Trawick, Doug Macnicol, Ray Cicia, Juan Sheridan and Alex Sulyok and backs Bill Bewley, Jacques Belec and Bob McLelland.

Mantle Headed For Return With Braced Knee

NEW YORK (AP) — Mickey Mantle picked up a brace for his injured right knee today with the prospect of returning to action with the New York Yankees—at least in a pinch-hit role—within "two or three days."

The young slugger planned to rejoin the Yankees in Washington later today and a weekend test of the knee, injured Wednesday at Boston, will determine whether he will fill the starting role handed him by the fans for Tuesday's all-star game in Washington.

The blond, 24-year-old centerfielder, bidding to break Babe Ruth's record total of 60 home runs, left the club Thursday in Boston and showed up Thursday night for an x-ray examination. It revealed no torn ligaments, which team physician Dr. Sydney P. Gaynor indicated were not serious. It will be out the "two or three day" limit.

None of the ligaments were torn from the bone, as was feared.

Mantle, a bit glum but able to joke about his misfortunes, said "I'll throw that brace away as soon as I can."

The contraption—a single-hinge brace—is worn on the outside of the knee. It was like and unlike a nutcracker.

The klick, with 29 home runs to date—five games ahead of Ruth's record 1927 pace—has had previous trouble and worn knee braces.

G. S. Hanna of Montreal, sailing the Selene, was second with 87 points.

Two more races are scheduled today and the fifth will be held Saturday. Thirty-one boats were entered.

Macdonald won the second race. The first was won by Paul Phelan of Toronto in the Jet.

FISHING IS FUN

PIKE: Bottom and midwater feeder can be taken bait casting and still fishing from shore or boat.

Baits effectively used include Devil Baits, Metal Spoons, Plugs of every type, Spoons with feathered trebles and Live bait.

All time Ontario records 43 lbs., 3 ozs.

Pike limit six in one day, Lake Consecon not less than 22 inches, all other water regardless of length. Only few first weeks have closed season of Pike, inquire locally for regulations.

Possession limit one day's catch. Avoid the Treble Hook Menace. Barbless hooks are advocated when in a boat, a big fish plays no favorites and you will need every advantage to land him.

It is unlawful to use or have in possession for sale Rock Bass Carp, Dog fish, Gar Pike, Goldfish, Perch or Smelt.

If a fire is needed keep it small and well attended.

Yes fishing is fun, especially when you drive to your favorite lake or stream on safe tires — only a dollar and a quarter a week puts four new Dominion Royals on your car . . . Top Trade-in allowance too.

Your Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes, and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

For Saturday, July 7, 1956

March 21 to April 19 (Aries) — Tendencies toward procrastination and exaggeration prevail today, but don't yield to them. It can be a happily active or-ully restful day — whichever you make it.

April 21 to May 21 (Taurus) — Why not talk things over with those who are directly concerned and interested in your affairs? You'll have better results. A good day — but not for overdoing or dallying.

May 22 to June 21 (Gemini) — Don't dawdle time away and then have to rush. This causes many later disturbances for you and others. Be considerate. Get to it.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer) — Where there is a will — you know the rest. Today will yield to right intent and efforts. Don't lack faith in your own ability. You can do what you earnestly and consciously try.

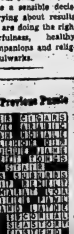
July 24 to August 23 (Leo) — Possible restrictions, especially in the a.m. Don't fly off the handle at provocation! It won't help. Look on the humorous side; grouches impede progress.

August 24 to September 23 — (Virgo) — Think twice before you voice that opinion, and don't get mixed up in others' differences or discussions if they can't be handled without you. Mind diet; don't be anxious.

September 24 to October 23 — (Libra) — How you do today will greatly depend upon how you direct, manage and get into the swing of things. The least said time-wasting.

October 24 to November 22 — (Scorpio) — You may be tempted to undertake too much new. Don't. You will be happier, really achieve more by being sensibly moderate.

November 23 to December 21 — (Sagittarius) — Stars smile on your personal and general interests. But of course, you must do your best and be at your best to gain all the benefits possible.



December 22 to January 20 — (Capricorn) — Money gains, sound investments, progress in your work or business, domestic and romantic affairs are all favored by friendly stars.

January 21 to February 19 — (Aquarius) — Sudden decisions, drastic changes in plans or action not advised, but otherwise the day is responsive, helpful to important undertakings and ordinary daily routine; also to health and general outlook.

February 20 to March 20 — (Pisces) — Don't let everyone know your plans, and surely not all your personal affairs. But do not keep worries to yourself. Discuss problems with loved ones.

You born today are sensitive, versatile and industrious. You can give much pleasure in conversation and plans, but can also engage in discussions too hastedly and fret needlessly. You are usually right in your judgments, but once you make a sensible decision, stop worrying about results, so long as you are doing the right thing. Cheerfulness, healthy, wholesome companions and religion are your bulwarks.

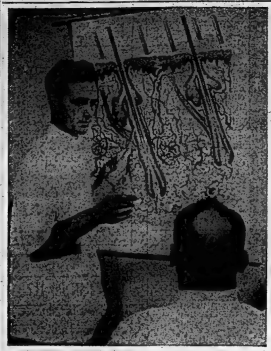
School Pupils Visit Stirling

BAWDON — On June 31st, Mrs. Burton Morton, teacher of S.S. No. 3, Allen School, Mount Pleasant - Bawdon, the 14 pupils and Mrs. Herbert Smith, spent the day in Stirling village. The trip was in connection with the social studies of grades three and four, but all the children were taken on the tour.



They visited the Stirling News Argus, where Mr. H. R. Tomkins and Mr. R. Hulin demonstrated the linotype. Later that afternoon they again visited the office and watched the weekly paper as it rolled off the press and then saw it folded and prepare for mailing.

The group visited the local creamery plant and here, Mr. Harold West explained the intricacies of butter-making.

The party then enjoyed a picnic dinner at Victoria Park. In the afternoon they visited the local railway station and the man on relief duty explained how telegraph worked and what the sign boards stand for.

From there, they travelled to the Elaine Footwear plant. Here Mr. Frank Timms guided them through and explained the details of shoe making. All of the pupils were most grateful for the courtesy shown them and it was both an educational and an enjoyable trip. Mr. Brown said this was the first school to pay his local dairy a visit since he began business in Stirling.

This tour of Stirling will give the children broader visions of what goes on in their home town and they will be able to enlighten their parents on a few of the details that they learned on their tour.

Famous Trichologist Will Demonstrate How to Grow Thicker Hair . . . and Guarantees It!

Demonstration to Be Held Here

This new method of home treatment for saving and growing thicker hair will be demonstrated in Belleville, Ontario, Sunday only, July 8.

Three private demonstrations will be held at the New Queens Hotel on Sunday only, July 8, 12 noon to 9 p.m.

LONDON, ONTARIO — In an interview here today William Keele, internationally famous trichologist, and director of the Keele Hair Experts said: "There are 18 different scalp disorders that cause most men and women to lose hair. Using common sense, a person must realize no one tonic or so called cure-all could correct all the disorders," he explained.

GUARANTEED

"The Keele firm, recognizing that most people are skeptical of claims that hair can be grown on balding heads, defer a guarantee," Keele said.

Once a person avails themselves to the Keele treatment his skepticism immediately disappears. To insure this we offer this guarantee: "If you are not completely satisfied with your hair progress at the end of 30 days your money will be returned."

HOPELESS CASES DISCOURAGED

First the trichologist is quick to tell hopeless cases that they cannot be helped. But the "hopeless" cases are few. Only if a man is completely, shiny bald is he in this lost category.

If there is fuzz, no matter how light, thin, or colorless, the Keele treatment can perform wonders.

A complete, private examination is given by a trichologist to determine the condition of his scalp, and cause for his hair trouble. Free Examinations. This examination is very thorough and highly technical, it requires 20 to 30 minutes. The trichologist makes no charge for this examination and no appointment is necessary. After the examination the person is told the required length of treatment and how much it will cost.

After starting treatment, the person makes regular reports to the Keele firm in London to check the progress of the home treatment.

To spread the opportunity of normal healthy hair to the thousands who are desperately looking for help, independent trichologists are visiting various cities throughout Canada to conduct examinations and start home treatment.

NO CURE-ALL

"We have no cure-all for slick, shiny baldness," Keele emphasizes. "If there is fuzz, the root is still capable of creating hair and we can perform what seems to be a miracle."

There is one thing Keele will not do and that is certain every man and woman knows. If a recession appears on the temples or a spot begins to show up on the crown of the head, there is something wrong and it should be given immediate attention.

HAIR FOR LIFETIME

"If clients follow our directions during the treatment and after they finish the course, there is no reason why they will not have hair all the rest of their lives," Keele said. "Our firm is definitely behind this treatment. It all depends on the individual client's faithful observation of a few simple rules."

HOWS YOUR HAIR

If it worries you, call Trichologist Raymond Lemmons at the New Queen's Hotel in Belleville, Ontario on Sunday only, July 8, 12 noon to 9 p.m. The public is invited. You do not need an appointment. The examinations are private and you will not be embarrassed or obligated in any way.

Present System Granting Bail To Be Probed

TORONTO (CP)—A committee of three law officers has been formed by Attorney - General Roberts of Ontario to investigate the present system of granting bail, it was announced Friday.

Committee members are Deputy Attorney - General C. B. Magone; W. O. Gibson, senior crown attorney for Toronto and York, and J. D. Conover, sheriff of York County.

The committee is to investigate the present system of granting bail and the maintaining of security during the period an accused person is awaiting final disposition of charges.

Mr. Robert's action followed two recent cases, one of which prompted Mr. Conover to ask the present system of bail granting "stinks."

Edwin MacDonald jumped $30,000 bail on a drugs charge. Philip Legros is free on $25,000 property bail, some of which the bail man discovered, has since been sold by the bondsmen.

Doctors State Eisenhower's Progress Steady

GETTYSBURG, Pa. (AP) — If President Eisenhower still means to make a second term—and, nothing hereabouts is strongly that he does—he has fresh encouragement from his doctors that he's in better shape.

"His convalescent progress has been steady and uneventful," he medical men reported late Friday.

This medical report was the first since the President left with his farm to continue recovery from his June 9 operation. It was issued a day after Eisenhower talked politics with his chief assistant, Sherman Adams.

There was no word on whether Eisenhower indicated he would stand by his Feb. 29 decision to seek a second term, or even that he had reached a decision on his plans.

During the night, a weak disturbance moved into southern Ontario from northern Ontario bringing light scattered showers. As this disturbance moves eastward, skies are expected to become sunny by afternoon. Fair weather will continue Sunday and temperatures should be a little higher.

MILNER QUITTING AS CONTROLLER OF GRAIN TRADE

In December Will Head Grain Commissioners

OTTAWA (CP)—A First World War sergeant-major who rose to top ranks in the grain trade will head the federal transport controller next December and step up as the new head of the board of grain commissioners.

Roy W. Milner announced during a stormy meeting of the Commons agriculture committee Friday that he will retire at the end of 1956 from the controversial controllership he held on his main as a member of the board, which regulates standards on grain and storage.

Hazen Argue (CCF—Assiniboia) later described Milner's official information which had been supplied in his absence. At year-old Mr. Milner will become the new board chief succeeding D. G. McCuaig, federal trade boss, in December. He congratulated Mr. McCuaig on his pension.

DOESN'T NEED JOB

As grain commissioner, Mr. Milner gets $15,000 a year. The Brampton, Ont.-born controller told the committee during heated questioning that he was in a unique situation that he doesn't need the board job. He was independently wealthy.

Member of the board for the last six years, the transport controller for the last five, he had been appointed to the job at the request of his good friend, Trade Minister Howe, and to help the Liberal party in election.

Mervyn Johnson (CCF—Kindersley) charged that Mr. Milner, a former president of the Winnipeg grain exchange, was "in a bed" between the producers but is concerned only with the millers.

Mr. Howe lamented that it was charity CCF criticism such as that which would make it difficult to obtain a new controller.

Mr. Argue said that why Mr. Milner is not acting as transport controller after December. Who would?

CCF members complained bitterly that straight-line freight rates Saskatchewan were not getting enough increase to move grain.

Mr. Milner, who first entered the grain trade in 1909, said the rates are fair. He said Canadian wheat board needs certain grades but prepared to see increases made by Hobbard and Co., of Pittsburgh.

The strike began last Saturday at midnight after the union refused to accept a contract that the steel companies said contained an immediate 17 3-3 cents boost.

Six Airmen Die In Labrador

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—Heli-copter rescue crews Friday night confirmed that all six airmen aboard in the crash of a U.S. United States Air Force K-67 Stratotanker on rocky Labrador mountains Friday.

The rescue crew made identification of bodies and bodies were being removed to the Goose Bay air force base.

The big aircraft, used for air-to-air refueling of jet bombers and fighters, exploded, exploded and plunged into the rugged Mealy Mountains of Labrador about 45 miles from Goose Bay airport, where it was intended. It had left Goose Bay on a training mission.

Dame Irene Ward Asks British Army To Grant Its Girls Panty Allowance

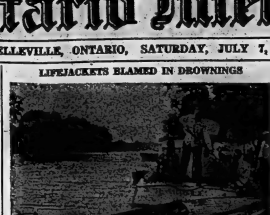
By EDDY GILMORE

LONDON (AP) — Dame Irene Ward said today that she is going to uphold efforts of British Army girls to escape wearing government-issued panties.

"When it comes to undies," said Dame Irene, a Conservative member of Parliament, "women like to chose their own."

She said she would bring up the matter in the House of Commons next Wednesday by asking the minister of defence, urbane Sir Walter Monckton, to give the army lassies a stipulated panty allowance.

"With that money" said Dame Irene, "they can buy their own and not have to wear those horrors presently supplied by the Women's Royal Army Corps."



The girls get an issue of three pairs of khaki knickers (bloom-ers) with elastic in the waist and at the legs, three pairs of very short white panties and three bras.

Two WRAC girls, interviewed at a London service club, expressed their opinions. The first, a blonde, said:

"Those khaki bloomers are so long that they would show be-neath our shirts — the way we wear them. Not one girl in 50 wears them, in my own."

Said a brunette:

"No one can feel well dressed in baggy bloomers."

LIFEJACKETS BLAMED IN DROWNINGS

Poorly designed life jackets were blamed for the deaths of three Detroit men who set out on the a few hours fishing in the Lake Simcoe, Ontario. Their boat, the Doreen S., was found tied to a buoy, and their bodies, floating face downward were found several miles out of a mile away. Police believe a sudden squall upset the boat, a sturdy craft, though probably overweighted with three men and a 35-horsepower motor, and the men swam until they were exhausted. Their jackets caused them to float face downward instead of upright as the Canadian approved types do. The victims were: Daniel Sturdevan, Frank S. Nowicki and James L. Murphy. —Central Press Canadian.

Entire Poznan Police Force Is Shifted to Unknown Spot

BERLIN (AP)—A West Berlin newspaper says today the entire police force in the Polish city of Poznan has been replaced.

The independent Telegraf — the first newspaper to break the news of last week's abortive uprising in Communist Poland—says the old police force has been "transported to an unknown destination and replaced by outside police-men."

The switch was made, the paper says, because Poznan police force had conducted themselves "passively," and had permitted themselves to be disarmed by workers during the riots for bread and freedom.

The paper also says Poznan workers report that preparations are being made in the larger factories for public executions of the rioting workers.

In its Berlin-datelined dispatch the newspaper also reports the rebellion's death toll has risen above 300. The Polish government has admitted 53 deaths, while unofficial estimates place the figure somewhere between 300 and 300. The Telegraf says more than 2,000 were injured. Poland said 270 persons were hurt.

West German Lower House Approves Law Over Protests

BONN, Germany (AP) — West Germany's lower house approved conscription for men over the Sunday over bitter protests by Chancellor Konrad Adenauer's Socialist opponents.

The controversial draft law goes next Friday to the upper house where a solid government majority assures final approval.

The draft law will make 12-000,000 German men between the ages of 18 and 45 subject to compulsory military service. The Bundestag (lower house) passed it by a vote of 270 to 166 on third and final reading.

Seven years of stormy debate preceded the Bundestag vote. Adenauer, usually heard in respectful silence by the lawmakers, was interrupted by jeers and laughter when he urged draft as the only means of building the 500,000-man army he has pledged to North Atlantic alliance defences.

Opponents of the draft argued large armies are unnecessary in an age of streamlined armed forces and nuclear weapons.

The Socialists, balky, the three parties of Adenauer's coalition government voted solidly for the law and Socialists and their allies voted solidly against it. There were 20 abstentions.

The Bundestag opposition of the draft had considerable public support. Thousands of West Germans have expressed the losses and destruction of the Second World War and fear possible atomic war. creation of new armed forces, fearing rebirth of German militarism.

But the chancellor insisted the new forces are necessary to help protect the West against possible Communist aggression and that the cold war has not ended and Europe is threatened by Communism. He said Germany needs Middle East and the Mediterranean.

"We will not lead any crusade against the Soviet Union," he told the Bundestag.

A leftist argument against German rearmament has been the danger that West Germany—with or without the approval of its allies—might launch an attack against the Communist powers to regain East Germany from the Reds.

Brading Brewery Would Back Swim

TORONTO (CP) — Brading's Brewery, Ltd., today identified itself as the would-be donor of a $20,000 prize fund for an annual Lake Ontario swim, it would not sponsor the event.

The swim, likely to be held at the same time as the Canadian National Exhibition, would have to be sponsored by other organizations.

The brewery said, at a press conference, that it would ensure that such organizations as the Junior Chamber of Commerce or the Junior Board of Trade be approached to sponsor it.

B.C. Ready to Import Teachers, Engineers

VICTORIA (CP) — British Columbia is in short of engineers and teachers "we are ready to import them from wherever they are to be found." Ray Williston said Friday, speaking in his dual capacity as lands and forests minister and minister of education.

"In other words," Mr. Williston said in an interview, "we are becoming importers of skill and talent. We have been recruiting for engineers and teachers right across Canada."

Famagusta Fine Nearly All Paid

NICOSIA (AP)—British authorities announced today that nearly all of the £40,000 collective fine imposed on the east coast port of Famagusta has been paid by the inhabitants.

The fine was imposed on all male Greek-Cypriot inhabitants of Famagusta as a punishment for 136 "acts of terrorism" in seven months.

The test case challenging the legality of the collective fine is to be heard Aug. 17. Fifty-seven prominent Greek-Cypriot citizens of Famagusta have brought the suit, claiming it is not within the power of the government to levy a collective fine.

Fire Damage Heavy

MARIONE BAY, N.S. (CP)—A four-hour fire early today wiped out seven of eight buildings of Industrial Shipping Co. Ltd. here with damage expected to run in the hundreds of thousands of dollars.

No one was injured. The plant, which manufactures plywood boat hulls, employed 200 men and was this south shore community's largest industry.

MINES MINISTER REFUSES REQUEST FOR FUEL BOARD

Increased Aid for Needy Veterans Is Proposed

OTTAWA (CP) — Renewed opposition Monday to a national fuel policy again have been rejected by Mines Minister Prudham.

He told the House of Commons Friday during discussion of his department's estimates he didn't think the Canadian people would accept directives saying what fuel they can and cannot use.

The House also opened discussion of the estimates of the veterans affairs department and heard opposition to a call for increased federal assistance to needy veterans of the First World War.

Demands for a national fuel policy were made by Clarie Gillis (CCF — Cape Breton South) and George Nowlan (PC — Digby-Annapolis-Kings). C. E. Johnston (SC — New River) suggested a limitation of imports of American coal and a zoning of the Canadian market.

IT SOUNDS GOOD

"There is no doubt that it sounds good to say that should have a national fuel policy and a national board with power to direct people as to what type of fuel they can use," Mr. Prudham said.

"I do not think the people of Canada would accept that type of direction. I do not think it would actually work out very well in practice."

Mr. Prudham told Mr. Johnston (PC — Bonavista-Twillingate) it not "a positive approach" although the government had such power. He said the price of coal in Canada as a market for Canadian coal was a "price level not which could not be supplied by Alberta.

Col. A. J. Brooks, Progressive Conservative spokesman for veterans affairs, urged an increase in the ceiling on permissible income for veterans receiving pensions allowances. Their average age now was 65 or 66, and many had no additional income.

Veterans on allowances now could earn $1,020 a year without ill single, and $1,08, if married. This ceiling would be increased next year from $20 and $90 monthly.

Veterans Minister Lapointe said the government was considering legislation under which First World War veterans might borrow to supplement their allowance with part-time work, receive additional income. Veterans in this category now receive a maximum $10 a month, under the veterans' allowance fund.

Col. Brooks also renewed opposition demands for an increase in the income ceiling, above which the allowance is reduced. The present ceiling is $840 a year for single veterans and $1,440 for married men.

Brockville Loses To Army Crew

HENLEY - ON - THAMES (AP) A British Army crew today won the Royal Wyfold Challenge Cup by defeating the Brockville, Ont., crew in one of the craziest races ever held on the Henley regatta.

Three times along the one mile, 550 - yard course the Canadians ran into the marker booms as a vicious cross wind hit their craft. But despite this the British team won by only four feet.

Oil Well in Backyards at Erindale Just Headache to Two Families

ERINDALE, Ont. (CP) — Most people figure an oil well in the backyard is a shortcut to fortune. But two couples here say it's just a headache.

Mr. and Mrs. Owen Noblett and Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Watson say they would much prefer to have water. That's what they dug the wells for.

For the last 18 months they have got what proves on analysis to be No. 2 fuel oil and diesel oil. Mr. Noblett says it has ruined their plumbing and plugging the septic tanks. They must haul water from a nearby creek.

The Nobletts and Watsons tried to sell their homes. As soon as they showed prospective buyers the oil, the deal fell through.

The area around Erindale, 12 miles west of Toronto, is not known to be oil-bearing and the two couples here say it's just by accident.

Extensive tests by fuel board officials and other oilpatch experts showed no leak.

Now, in desperation, the families have gone into the oil business.

A Toronto fuel oil firm tested the oil and found it burned well. For the last week the two couples have been filling their own oil-burner tanks and plan to make application to the Ontario fuel board for a licence to sell the oil.

Two Men Are Held As Police Hunt Baby's Kidnapper

WESTBURY, N.Y. (AP) — Two men were held in police custody today as detectives pushed their search for five - week - old Peter Weinberger who was kidnapped from his carriage Wednesday.

Police were pre - shoe - mooted when the two men except to say they were picked up Friday night, questioned during the night and were kept in custody.

The House also opened discussion of the estimates of the veterans affairs department and heard opposition to a call for increased federal assistance to needy veterans of the First World War.

Demands for a national fuel policy were made by Clarie Gillis (CCF — Cape Breton South) and George Nowlan (PC — Digby-Annapolis-Kings). C. E. Johnston (SC — New River) suggested a limitation of imports of American coal and a zoning of the Canadian market.

IT SOUNDS GOOD

"There is no doubt that it sounds good to say that should have a national fuel policy and a national board with power to direct people as to what type of fuel they can use," Mr. Prudham said.

"I do not think the people of Canada would accept that type of direction. I do not think it would actually work out very well in practice."

Mr. Prudham told Mr. Johnston (PC — Bonavista-Twillingate) it not "a positive approach" although the government had such power. He said the price of coal in Canada as a market for Canadian coal was a "price level not which could not be supplied by Alberta.

Col. A. J. Brooks, Progressive Conservative spokesman for veterans affairs, urged an increase in the ceiling on permissible income for veterans receiving pensions allowances. Their average age now was 65 or 66, and many had no additional income.

Veterans on allowances now could earn $1,020 a year without ill single, and $108, if married. This ceiling would be increased next year from $20 and $90 monthly.

Veterans Minister Lapointe said the government was considering legislation under which First World War veterans might borrow to supplement their allowance with part-time work, receive additional income. Veterans in this category now receive a maximum $10 a month, under the veterans' allowance fund.

Col. Brooks also renewed opposition demands for an increase in the income ceiling, above which the allowance is reduced. The present ceiling is $840 a year for single veterans and $1,440 for married men.

No Ransom Is Yet Paid In Westbury Abduction

WESTBURY, N.Y. (AP) — Two men were held in police custody today as detectives pushed their search for five - week - old Peter Weinberger who was kidnapped from his carriage Wednesday.

Police were pre - shoe - mooted when the two men except to say they were picked up Friday night, questioned during the night and were kept in custody.

Police said definitely no ransome money has changed hands. Meanwhile, Peter's distraught parents awaited another call from their baby's kidnapper.

The call came Friday from a New York City pay station to assure the father, wholesale drug salesman Morris Weinberger, that the baby is alive and well and to tip the ransom price from $2,000 to $5,000.

"I am ready to meet your demands . . . am waiting your call," Weinberger told the kidnapper in a pre-arranged message carried by newspapers and a night television news show.

Weinberger said he was convinced that the caller was the kidnapper who stole the baby from his carriage on the patio of the Weinberger home in this fashionable suburb July 4.

But police cautioned against overoptimism, saying the call was "problematical" that the baby was still alive.

A commentator John K. M. McCaffery of NBC's New York radio station (WRCA-WNBC) at 11 p.m. EDT news show offered to act as go-between for the parents and the kidnapper. He asked the kidnapper to call Trafalgar 4-8000, whose phone rang all times before midnight but most calls were from hotdogs or crackers.

One man, who seemed to be breathing heavily, called a number of times and hung up without uttering a word. Once he said in a tense and gruff voice: "Judas . . . I have . . . then the line went dead.

Police attempted to bait a trap for the kidnapper Thursday by placing wads of money in a satchel between real bills at two intersections on the Weinberger route in accordance with the kidnap note found near the baby's carriage. The ransom envelopes went untouched.

Hoisting Columns For New Tank

Eight ton, 96-foot steel supporting columns for the city's new 750,000 gallon water tank were being swung into place this week at the site of the old standpipe at the rear of Tabernacle United Church. Twelve such columns will support the 24-foot high elevated tank which is expected to be completed in about three months. One of the columns is indicated by the man's figure in the cage.

Dutch System Of Selling Cheese Will Be Tried

For the first time in Ontario the Dutch auction system of selling cheese will be tried at Kingston on Thursday, July 12, when cheese of factories between Toronto and the Quebec border will be offered for sale.

Charles N. Heath, secretary of the Ontario Cheese Producers' Marketing Board said the auction would be held at the Seaway building, opposite the La Salle Hotel, Kingston, commencing at 2:30 p.m.

During the morning district cheese buyers are invited to watch demonstrations so as to how the Dutch auction system works and to familiarize themselves with the procedure.

Mr. Heath explained that the Dutch auction system of cheese selling operates with a clock on the dial which the cheese prices appear rather than figures and quotations. The operator sets the clock in motion at the highest price listed on the dial. The clock runs until a buyer presses his button stopping the clock at the price he is agreable to pay.

The minimum negotiated price of 32 cents per pound will still prevail.

Cheese will be sold on a test weighed and graded basis, the product of each factory to be sold separately, first the 1st grade cheese and then the undergrade.

Many Watch 750,000 Gallon Water Tank Fast Taking Shape

Residents of the East Hill district are fast turning into sidewalk superintendents these days as they watch the city's new 750,000 gallon water tank on Hillcrest Ave. fast taking shape.

For the past two weeks the sidewalk watchers have been on hand as crewmen for the Horton Steel Company of Fort Erie completed preliminary work erecting the central column for the new elevated tank.

But this week the interest quickened as 96-foot steel supporting columns began to go up, being swung into place in one piece by a towering winch-operated crane.

Two of the twelve supporting columns went up on Wednesday, these being topped Thursday by the tank supporting frames with a third column also being swung into place.

When all 12 columns are in place the job of assembling the 24-foot high elevated tank will commence.

All steel for the huge new tank was fabricated at the Fort Erie plant of the Horton Steel Company and then shipped to Belleville for erection. According to the erection crew foreman it will take from 12 to 14 weeks to complete the tank. It will be a welding job throughout.

ERECTED ON OLD SITE

The city's new water storage tank is being erected on the site of the old standpipe tank which towered overhead at the rear of the Tabernacle Church. The old tank was torn down to make room for the new one.

But where the old tank occupied feet of ground space the new tank is taking up yards. To make room for the supporting columns two houses were moved.

But still there is a lack of space for the construction crew to store materials and manoeuvre 96-foot columns into position.

"We've got to get the columns up before we can bring in the materials for the tank itself," noted the construction foreman.

And swinging the eight-ton columns, measuring 96 feet in length and three feet in diameter, into position takes up plenty of room. The playground park on Hillcrest Ave. is being used for this purpose.

The columns arrive on the site in 30-foot sections with three of these being welded together to form one length.

BOLTED TO PIERS

Then the huge columns are swung into place and are bolted to concrete piers prepared beforehand. As the columns go up men are hoisted in cages to put steel bars in place. The large central column of the tank has a two-fold purpose. It supports the crane for lifting of materials during construction and when the tank is completed the column will also encase a smaller two-foot pipe feeding water to the tank.

The 12 big supporting columns will be vacuum sealed to prevent inside corrosion.

Three months from now the new water storage tank will be completed. It will be painted in gleaming aluminum with "huge" four-foot letters on the sides spelling out the name Belleville.

Trenton Seeks Assistance In Sewage Disposal Problem

TRENTON (Special) — An official spokesman at the town office said yesterday that the provincial government had indicated Trenton will be given closest consideration in obtaining sewage disposal facilities sought by an active Sewage and Sanitation Committee of this year's council.

A letter is going forward to the Ontario Water Resources Commission recommending that a firm of consulting engineers, Gore and Storrie, proceed with a survey and estimates on the cost of laying Trenton's sewage final sewage problems.

One source speculates that $1,000,000 will be needed to supply the town's wants.

Trenton has rapid growth in the last decade, like many other Ontario municipalities, resulted in the overtaxing of the available septic tank system. For years new sewage from the overloaded tanks collected on private property, along the harbor front and resulted in litigations that cost the taxpayers a considerable sum and embarrassment. The town is presently involved in a law action over its disposal facilities.

There is a movement afoot whereby the Ontario government would pay for the installation of the disposal services and the town would retire the debt over a period of 30 years. The town would not be asked to issue debentures under this proposed financing arrangement.

Local sources recommended disposal plants be erected on both sides of the river running through this divided town. However the final decision is in the hands of the consultants.

Spearheading the committee investigating much needed sewage and amenities is Councillor Grant Gooding, a newcomer to council in 1956.

The Patron Saint of Spain Was One of the Apostles

By DR. HOWARD V. HARPER

Wednesday, July 25— Today is her chapel, which had been in the day of St. James the Great, ruins for a thousand years. The patron saint of Spain. It is a priest to whom the peasant reholy, lively holiday in that ported the incident was not much country, for they call him improved, but soon an modest "Santiago." This James, who was dilapidated image was found one of the Apostles, is known as nearby and identified as the "the Great" to distinguish him Image of St. Anne. When word from the other Apostle James, of this discovery got around, pilwho is called "The Less." What grims by the hundreds poured in was greater about this one and and left more than enough money lesser about the other is not quite to build the chapel. The bishop clear. It may have to do with ordered that the building be age, or it may mean that this erected. James was the taller.

St. James was the brother of the Sometimes as many as 80,000 beloved St. John. These two, with pilgrims visit on these two days St. Peter, were obviously the each year. A well adjoins the Lord's favorite apostles. Several chapel and many miraculous incidents are recorded where He cures have been brought about by took these three with Him into His waters. some special situation in which the others did not participate. The most notable of these occasions was the Transfiguration.

The Spanish have a lovely legend about how St. James came to be their patron saint. They tell that when he died, in Palestine, his body was put into a boat and on the next day this little boat, without rudder or crew, arrived at Compostela on the Spanish coast. It had been guided and powered by angels.

St. James was buried, but his burial place was forgotten until about the year 800. A hermit who lived in the vicinity noted that strange heavenly lights constantly played about a certain spot. He investigated and found the body. A church was built there, around which the town of Santiago grew up. The town soon became a shrine with legends and miracles of its own. "In the 12th century people began to call the Milky Way the Way of St. James because they believed it was put in the heavens to guide the pilgrims to St. James' grave.

Some Spanish stories about their patron are much like those the English told about St. George. In the 10th Century, when Spanish troops were fighting the Moorsish, James appeared to their midst on a white charger and led them to victory, just as St. George led the British soldiers during the Crusades.

THE FABLE OF ATHAN

Thursday, July 26—The word "pardon" seems a strange term for a festival, but one of the greatest of European festivals is called "The Pardon of Auray." It is held in the town of Auray, in Brittany, every year on St. Anne's Day (today) and on the ave preceding.

The story behind this celebration is that in the year 1623, St. Anne, the mother of the Blessed Virgin Mary, appeared to a local peasant and told him to rebuild

SCARLET RUNNERS

Scarlet runners at the window
Cheer us with their color gay
When the day is dark and cheerless
When the summer clouds are gray;
Creeping to the kitchen window,
Peeping through the window pane,
While they keep their scarlet blooming
Summer holds her magic reign.

Visitors they have in plenty,
Bumble bees that sip the sweet,
Humming birds with shining plumage
Make a summer scene complete
Who could guess that in the seedling
Lay the germ of such a flower;
Lay a wise of verdant foliage
Gladdening all the sumbner hour?

So the little seeds of kindness
That we daily plant and sow,
Nurtured by the dews of heaven,
Into flower and fruitage grow;
Though so like the lifeless seedling
Seem our deeds each passing hour,
Dropped into the heart's deep garden,
They will bring forth fruit and flower.

SWALLOWS SEEDS

A number of birds feed their young by regurgitation, the method altering according to the type of food. The goldfinch and hawk are forced to protect us against the anger of fate.

Some say the appeal is to the protection of the Cross of Christ, which is, of course, the holiest of all wood. But actually, the superstition goes back much further than that.

It goes back, in fact, to the days of tree-worship. The oak was observed by primitive people to be the tree most often struck by lightning, was thought to be the favorite tree of the Sky-god, who incidentally, hated hearts. It, therefore, behooved anyone to be in touch with the Sky-god, for everything in contact with it was beneficially affected.

In its original form, the expression was probably "touch oak."

Bulletins from Birdland

By Winifred Wilson

In Birdland, whether the favorite habitat be trees, particular species be insects, seeds, or fruit, most parents feed their young by carrying dinner in their bills and stuffing it into the mouths of the nestlings. The swallow-robin is a good example of this. The worm is poised so far down that the back of the tongue is touched, starting the throat muscles working. After a few gulps the worm is finally accepted.

Ospreys bring home food in their feet. These birds have long, powerful claws, and toes with a rough surface on the soles—soles scales especially designed for both catching and carrying fish. Instead of plunging head first into the water, they dive feet first from a great height, seizing prey in all directions. On emerging, they will be seen holding the prey, one foot ahead of the other near the tail. The osprey's outer toe is made so that it can swivel around, ordinarily placed in front, but "paired" with

Stories of Famous Hymns

STORIES OF FAMOUS HYMNS
O LOVE, THAT WILT NOT LET ME GO

O Love, that will not let me go,
I rest my weary soul in Thee;
I give Thee back the life I owe,
That in Thine ocean depths its flow
May richer, fuller be.

O Light, that follow'st all my way,
I yield my flick'ring torch to Thee;
My heart restores its borrowed ray,
That in Thy sunshine's blaze its day
May brighter, fairer be.

O Joy, that seekest me through pain,
I cannot close my heart to Thee;
I trace the rainbow through the rain,
And feel the promise is not vain
That morn shall tearless be.

O Cross, that liftest up my head,
I dare not ask to fly from Thee;
I lay in dust life's glory dead,
And from the ground there blossoms red
Life that shall endless be.

"O LOVE, THAT WILT NOT LET ME GO"

Sometimes God seems to whisper the inspiration for His richest and sweetest songs to those whose spirits are crushed by affliction and tribulation.

Dr. George Matheson — had he been spared the affliction of blindness — probably would never have written his beautiful devotional hymn, "O Love That Will Not Let Me Go". The hymn was born one night while the preacher-poet was brooding over some secret sorrow which he never revealed, even to his closest friends, ... Bi

It is said that he had been disappointed in love. He had a young woman whom he had hoped to marry but refused him because of his blindness, and there are touching references in his hymn, such as "Thou dearest ray", the "flickering torch", and the "cross" in the final stanza, which seem to support this story.

Born in Glasgow in 1842, Dr. Matheson enjoyed partial vision until he was about 12. But soon after enrolling at Glasgow University in 1857, he became completely blind. Loss of sight, however, did not halt his studies and when his college days came to an end in 1861, he was graduated with high honors.

There were four more years of study in a theological seminary, than he was ready for his fiancee of 19-year pastorate at Innellan, a seaport resort in Scotland, where many vacationists flocked each season to hear his sermons. He used to memorize his addresses and, when a sermon had been read to him twice, he could repeat it—from start to finish—without a mistake.

It was during his preaching days at Innellan that Dr. Matheson wrote his most-admired hymn. His own story of its composition follows:

"My hymn was composed in the manse of Innellan on the evening of June 6, 1882. I was alone at the time. It was the day of my sister's marriage and the rest of the family were staying overnight in Glasgow. Something had happened which was known only to myself and which caused me the most severe mental suffering. The hymn was the fruit of that suffering.

"It was the quickest bit of work I ever did in my life. I had the impression rather of having it dictated to me by some inward voice than of working it out myself. I am quite sure that the whole work was completed in five minutes."

TIME - PAYMENT ECONOMY

Canada is prosperous.

Therefore Canada has a record trade deficit.

Sounds crazy?

It does, to anybody raised on the old orthodox principle that debts are nasty things to have around.

The easy-credit, time-payment, no-money-down generation should have no difficulty comprehending the situation.

Canada has bright prospects for the future. She is mortgaging tomorrow's pay cheque.

Part of that mortgage is serving a useful purpose, amongst the goods Canada is importing are machines which will help her develop her natural resources and will swell her future production and income.

Insofar as trade deficits are financed by purchases of these capital goods, Canada is just using her credit in the same wise manner employed by every businessman when he expands his operations.

But Canadians are also purchasing more consumer goods from abroad. Since Canadian exports are not sufficient to pay for all present imports, these consumer goods fall into the same category as those bought on the time-payment plan. There are the same advantages, and the same disadvantages.

It is nice to be able to enjoy these consumer goods now, instead of waiting until the day when we have the cash to pay for them.

But we cannot continue indefinitely, as a nation, purchasing more than we sell, any more than the individual can continually spend more than he makes.

One of these days the time payments will catch up with the individual—and the trade deficit with the nation.

MEYER, BEER SALESMAN

Kurt Meyer, one-time major-general in Hitler's black guards, is now selling beer to Canadian soldiers in Germany.

On Dec. 28, 1945, Meyer was convicted of inciting his troops to slay quarter of Canadian troops in the Battle of Normandy and of responsibility in the execution of 18 Canadian prisoners of war. He was sentenced to death. The death sentence was later commuted to life imprisonment. There were protests by many Canadians. In 1951 he was transferred from a Canadian prison to Germany. There were protests by many Canadians. Early in 1954 his life term was reduced to 14 years. There were protests by many Canadians. On Sept. 7, 1954, Meyer was released from the West prison in the British zone of Germany. There were protests by many Canadians. Meyer now sells beer to Canadian soldiers. There will be protests by many Canadians.

Whether Meyer was guilty as charged; whether, if guilty, the sentence should have been death or life imprisonment; whether, if the sentence should have been life imprisonment, he should have been transferred from Canada to Germany; whether the life term should have been commuted to 14 years; whether Meyer should have been granted time off for good behavior and released before the end of the 14-year term — all these are questions on which there is room for honest differences of opinion, but regarding which he can hardly be considered a fully qualified judge.

The average Canadian soldier, though, ought to be able to decide whether he wants to drink the beer sold by a man, who, if he is nothing worse, is a former High-ranking Nazi.

Nobody makes Canadian soldiers in Germany drink Meyer's brand of beer. Is it so far ahead of competitors' products that the man must be kept in business?

ARE YOU A POOR LISTENER?

"It is my belief that no one ever listens properly to anything," said Kevin Fitzgerald recently on a BBC program. "They listen to the bit which interests or amuses them."

If one is a poor listener, there is comfort in that observation. There are, it appears, many poor listeners.

But there is a warning, too, in those statements. If one finds himself in difficulty, it would appear that he is not soon is more likely to lie in one's limited interests, in the many things which neither interest nor amuse one, than in the speaker's ability.

Probably one of the most prevalent reasons for poor listening is an eagerness to speak oneself. That, however, is a circumstance covered by Kevin Fitzgerald's observation. The person who does not listen properly, or at all, wants to start talking just isn't interested in anything except his or her own opinions.

But those statements of Fitzgerald's help to cure some bad listeners, they will have served a useful purpose.

Sorry, what was that? We weren't listening.

HUMAN NATURE

Human nature is indeed unpredictable. Take the case of the fellow who was pulled from the harbor at Goderich and was saved from being drowned or crushed to death between a boat and the pier. He went away mad because the rescuer tore his shirt.

It reminds us of Sandy McTavish, whose son Jock was saved from drowning by a kindly and courageous stranger. Sandy sought out the hero and said: "Are ye the man who pulled my lad from the river?" The stranger modestly admitted that he was.

"Weel," Sandy demanded, "then whur's his cap?" (London Free Press).

JUST FOLKS

PREJUDICE

He pricked his finger on a rose
And then went forth to warn
His neighbors of the bush that grows
A sharp and dangerous thorn.

"Beware," he cried, "that little tree,
It is an ugly thing,
For once it nearly wounded me
And from it surely sting."

And so he went along his way
Proclaiming loud his woes,
Avoiding every one to stay
In terror of the rose.

And there are men who walk about
With logic just as sound,
Of other fellows pointing out
The faults that they have found.

They hid us heed their cry of fear
And fall the rose to scan;
And they would blind us with their scorn
To what is good in man.

Great Tom Takes Over

(By Beatrice Kaye in BBC Press Service)

During the summer while the clock and bell hammers of Big Ben are having their first big overhaul since 1856, the hour bell's voice in broadcasting will be silent, and in place of Big Ben the BBC will provide us with the vivid voice of Great Tom, the clock bell of St. Paul's Cathedral. Which is, incidentally, stood in for Big Ben in 1934.

The name "Big Ben" properly belongs to the great bell alone and not to the clock, but everyone now thinks of the two as one entity. The BBC first broadcast the chimes of Big Ben on December 31, 1923, and they came into regular use as a daily time signal on February 17, 1924. Except for a period of just under three months during the 1939-1945 war, they have, since 1924, the BBC has always broadcast Big Ben's chimes. The moment when the belfry is directly connected with Broadcasting House and Big Ben is just on the hour, when pushing a plug into a socket in the control room in Broadcasting House. The same procedure will now operate for Great Tom. That wonderfully rich voice which has been called "the signature tune of the Commonwealth" is heard every day in the domestic sound broadcasting services of the BBC, in many of the services to Europe and in all the overseas services, which regularly broadcast in over two languages other than English. In the Home Service in English for listeners overseas — the general overseas service — Big Ben is broadcast at 7.45 a.m. and then every program apart from the news and those programmes which begin at the hour. The full stroke is used once a day at 14.00 GMT. Incidentally, radio waves carry the sound to listeners thousands of miles before it can be heard by the man on Westminister Bridge or some 150 feet below Big Ben.

Big Ben is the largest, most accurate and most famous clock bell in the world. The four dials are each twenty-three feet in diameter, and under the dials the words of the hour will be reglared. Formerly each dial had 312 pieces of opal glass which accounted for the cobwebby look of the dials when they were illuminated at night. Now 324 smaller pieces of fosteen feet long and brass is used, thus giving more to the face of the clock every yr. Big Ben himself weighs thirteen-and-a-half tons. The striking mechanism is fully synchronised or controlled, that is to say, it is regulated automatically to Greenwich Observatory, which controls it (is it?) to a nicety. Twice checked, Freezing once stopped the quarter hour chimes, although the clock itself went on the main.

these youngsters, if they have been in Britain any length of time at all, may have only the vaguest of memories of the land where they were born and to which they in due time will return.

When they return to Canada they will bring with them impressions stamped on their minds from day-to-day living alongside English families, perhaps particularly in the kitchens. Their sturdy Canadian heritage will remain but it can be strengthened because they have had opportunities denied many compatriots to share at first hand how other people live. They will learn, as will their elder brothers and sisters and their parents, that virtues and failings of the human race are by no means distributed, which is a point well worth learning at any time but one may be tempted to adopt a smug, complacent attitude.

The more knowledge we have folk, how they meet their problems, how they rise to the occasion when this is called for, the better off all are. It is a good thing to remember we all do not turn Canson's bairns, as the old saying has it. If it is all to the good children have peculiarities, that attribute is a two-way street. If certain people elsewhere in the world do certain things in a manner different from our own, these are not necessarily wrong but doubtless there are reasons for their practice that only fully appreciated, in other quarters.

In these instances the young people taking part in the sports will be of high school age, since the families' stay on this air force station in the English Midlands will be for a relatively limited duration, it may be taken for granted that they will participate in great measure their recollections of and associations with Canada. The photograph at the top of the page — there was no accompanying story except for the catchlines — brings in three young ladies and two young men, all quite obviously of elementary school years and none, at that, very far advanced along the road of education.

The question read: "They couldn't look more English if they were." And the caption added: RCAF men in Nottingham probably fool even the Bobby who guides them across street. The policeman, incidentally, is a typical specimen of his breed: fined, and wears the familiar helmet immediately identified with the men of the British Isles. Old Land, it was this photograph, especially, which prompted the observations offered here. Some of

Canadians In Far Lands

(Timmins Daily Press)

To what extent do Canadian servicemen and their families living on stations abroad take their husbands and fathers are posted for a tour of duty acquire the characteristics of their environment? It is likely that the adults and the children of the men are greatly influenced by their surroundings, although even they cannot help but be affected to varying degrees. The younger generation of the households, living in their early formative years abroad having the same deep impressions of their environment around as their elders, might give a different picture of the situation posed.

In the last number of Weekend Magazine there appeared a page of pictures in which Canadians of the younger generation were diligently living at a Royal Canadian Air Force base in England as depicted in various poses. The photographs were three in number. In one a young lady was shown ready for the river, his car over her shoulder and she proceeded toward the racing shell of whose crew he is a member. Another had for subject canoes from the Dominion on the playing field taking part in a game of field hockey which can be a test of skill. The third picture portrayed not fully appreciated, in other quarters.

May Harness Tides of Sea

(Fredericton Gleaner)

Everyone interested in additional supplis of power — and, hence, greater prosperity for New Brunswick — will be watching the Passamaquoddy Bay tidal power project, members of the International Joint Commission are in that district to inspect sites for the proposed tidal power project which has recently come closer to reality than at any other time.

The United States" has voted $3,000,000 to determine if the proposal to harness the tides of the bay is feasible, and Canada has approved the survey, although it is not spending money at the present time.

If this inspection by Commission members warrants it, a full-scale engineering survey will follow, cost of which would be share by Canada and the United States.

Corner Stone of Baptist Church Laid. The corner stone of the new Baptist Church, which is being erected at the corner of Victoria Avenue and Pinnacle Street, was laid yesterday afternoon by Mr. H. A. Hodgson of Montreal, a former resident of this city and who here a member of the Baptist church congregation. The proceedings were opened by the pastor, the Rev. C. H. Emerson. The following city ministers were present: the Rev. George Bruce, of the Tabernacle Methodist Church; the Rev. R. S. Laidlaw of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church; the Rev. A. M. Hubly of Emmanuel Church, and the Rev. R. H. Leitch of Holloway Street Methodist Church; they all made short congratulatory addresses. Mr. A. Richardson, Clerk of the Church Board, read a brief his tory of the congregation. In the year 1873 the Rev. Alexander Hamilton sent the Rev. W. J. Patterson, as a missionary to Belleville and a few members were secured to which to hold services. In the following fall a Baptist congregation was formed with a membership of twenty-three. In March 1874 it was decided to build a chapel at the corner of Coleman street and Moira street west, and in May 1875 it was dedicated. In July 1896 the building which now stands on the site where the new church is to be erected was obtained from Mr. Robert Bogle for the sum of $6000.00. He occupied it as a business college and Mr. Bogle took over the chapel building at the corner of Coleman street and West Moira Street. The building which was obtained from Mr. Bogle had been originally Vermilyea's roller skating rink; it was a fairly large building with a rounding roof. The brick chapel, which Mr. Bogle took over from the Baptist congregation; was eventually destroyed by fire. The present edifice was opened by the pastor, the Rev. C. H. Emerson, assisted by the Rev. Mr. Lounsberry; building committee, the Rev. C. H. Emerson, Messrs. F. W. Starr, Asa Biggs, C. Stroud, J. Biggs, M. Doolittle, Mr. Thompson, and the Rev. Robert Wallace who has been a member of the congregation for 24 years. In the cavity of the corner stone were placed the following: history of the congregation, copies of the Daily Intelligencer, the Daily Ontario, the Toronto Globe, the Toronto Mail and Empire, the church paper, the Canadian Baptist and some coins of the realm.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

AS YOU ARE

All the fundamentals of a happy life can well rest with you. It is the use of things that makes them invaluable. Stand still, with no incentive, and your self will become a place of iron. Appraise yourself. Look at your weaknesses. Be in the procession, not a bystander. Develop be a d ership. Read books that enlarge your viewpoint and vision. Form the habit of doing things. Be a builder. "From none but self expect approval."

Emerson said that "the force of character is cumulative." Not only is character built up but it expands in it. Stand apart and learn courage! Let it express your mind and keep you very free.

Personal Health Talks

By DR. WM. BRADY

Be Sure You Get The Right Baby

One of the hazards of childbirth is a nineteenth century hospital—that is, a bring-in institution that persists in displaying newborn infants huddled together in the show window, where all the inmates have an equal chance to share whatever serious or minor infection any one of them happens to have—an outmoded hospitality. Despite the use of removable identification tags and other makeshifts methods, the original "authorities" deem adequate, some timid customers do take home the wrong baby.

Of course, the only way to make sure your baby is your own is to have your baby at home. If that is (very well, we'll omit the sarcasm)—if you have your baby in a hospital you can at least insist that the baby's footprints be recorded on a card along with your fingerprints, for part of your home with you. Or better still, have the baby's footprints recorded along with your fingerprints on the birth certificate. Of course this must be done immediately after birth, before the baby is taken out of the room or out of your sight.

Babies born in hospitals that have seen the light, discard the show window newborn nursery and adopted rooming-in are almost as secure in identity as they would be if born at home. For in rooming-in the baby is never out of mother's reach or sight.

Mrs. G. B. Y. writes:

I'd like to mention that I had my first baby in November by natural childbirth in spite of my doctor. He was up in occiput posterior position. I had waited for nine years for my baby, and I wanted to give my baby every advantage for a good start.

I had a very happy experience. I still become exalted just thinking about the delivery. You feel so good afterward, too— no after-effects of anaesthetics.

I am absolutely convinced that if I had a much easier time than women who were there having their second or third. I wouldn't have a baby any other way, and I'd deeply regret any woman who miss this experience and/or experiences one by nursing the baby.

And Mrs. . . . writes:

After having five, the fourth being born in the delivery room without a doctor, I found how much easier birth is when you just relax. So when number five arrived I stayed very relaxed, and in an hour and a half there she was, a 9 pound girl, with my head beautifully her. Now I know that a woman can learn to relax, labor will be much easier and easier. (Mrs. . . . .)

And Mrs. . . . writes:

Many husbands to undertake the role of doctor or midwife, except in extreme emergency. Every expectant father who is a man and not a weak sister husband should learn along with his wife about prenatal hygiene, child birth and care of the baby.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

In scene of our Canadian wilderness, it is astonishing to see plans and other species of tree growing hastily on rocks with not enough earth or clay visible to provide any support to keep a buttercup alive. How they do it was a mystery until by discovered by a friend of mine who is artistically inclined and loves to have his summer home surrounded not by lawns and flower beds but by the wild vegetation that gives his cottage the atmosphere of the wilderness.

The rocky point on which his cottage stands is already picturesque with tree and shrub that have withstood the gales of winter and the tempests and droughts of summer; and now in the chinks are ragged and tortured, as in the paintings of Tom Thomson or Lismer, and the bushes crouch low, sheltering in the crevices and depressions of the rock.

Five years ago, my friend was delighted to discover a little maple trying to grab a foothold in one of the least ironshod of the cracks of rock at his point. He left it in place; and realizing that such a tree in that particular location would be extremely decorative on his property, he at once carried a basketful of choicest black sandy loam from farther back on the point, and packed it shrewdly where he knew it would do the most good to the tiny little pine.

Then he rejoiced the next summer to find the pine flourishing. So he gave it more earth, and, during the next autumn or winter, in a pocket of the rock a good sightsize fern, a pussy willow, a little pine, and up hill from it, a sizeable patch of choice earth, ready and waiting for the seeds dispersed at having to walk a couple of hundred yards to the back of his property, here was a pocket of choice soil, on which nothing grew, ideal for the roots.

My friend uses an old army entrenching tool for this kind of planting. He drove the blade into the soil to loosen it. He had half filled the pocket with soil when a spruce root, thicker than a cigarette, along with it. It was a basic root of his pine, which had travelled, by crack and crevice, all that distance, to natural nourishment. The little tree died.

FAITH OF A SCIENTIST

We often hear that scientists are unbelievers as regards religion, materialists who see and believe nothing beyond physical cause and effect.

Before me lies a newspaper clipping bearing a date of more than twenty years ago. It tells of the death of Michael Pupin, Serbian herd-boy who became one of America's leading scientists. He it was who made the basic scientific discovery which enables long distance telephone calls to be made.

Just before his death, Pupin declared "that science gives plenty of growth for intelligent hope that physical life is only a stage in the existence of the soul. "The law of continuity and the general scientific unity of the universe tend to strengthen our belief that the soul goes on existing and developing after death."

Of heaven he said: "It is what the scriptures call a state of mind in which this world is only a picture . . . Wherever science has extended its study, it has come to be "a manifestation of a cosmic intelligence in which lead from cradle to cosmos. In that great world within us, divinity resides. Our intelligence is part of something higher. We have not discovered the limits to the mathematical universe anything higher than the human soul.

"And the human soul is progressing more and more into the mystery in a universe of unbroken continuity."

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK

By R. J. SCOTT

The Face on The Stamp

France's Most Noted Author

By Nicholas Mika

Among the famous works of world's literature is a little book. Its title is "The Last Day of a Condemned Man." It is not an exciting detective story, although the author could have easily made it into a sensational novel. But he did not want to write the story of a criminal. He wanted to write a dramatic appeal against the death penalty.

And indeed, a more dramatic one has never been written. The success of this little book was not founded in the fact that it became a best seller, but in the resulting reform of laws regarding the capital punishment. Through this little book the mighty guillotine in France lost much of its horrible power. A new law was created that considered for the first time extenuating circumstances and so saved hundreds from execution. People all over the world began to think about the death penalty and whether it was justified or not. If they did not find the answer, at least they began to fight against tyranny and despotism and let justice decide upon life or death.

The author of this book was only a young man. But he was to become the greatest writer and poet of France. His ambition was, to become famous or not to be a writer at all. He never was content to be second best. And even now, more than seventy years after his death, he still holds his place among the great writers of the world.

WONDERFUL MEMORY

He had a strong, robust nature, and one of his loves was to walk outside in a raging storm. His energy and joy showed up until his old age. What he once saw he never forgot. Even though he had talent to paint, he did not like bright colors. Even in his novels he liked the mixing of colors. What he described is either black or white, dark or light.

He possessed a deeply rooted love for every living creature, men and animals, birds and flowers. He could be gentle and considerate as well as passionate and possessive. His generosity was world famous. He accounted every penny he spent. He was married and throughout his life he was deeply in love with his wife. But at the same time for nearly fifty years he had a mistress. At the age of seventy he fell in love with a young and beautiful actress. He had a strange character and was a master of extremes, full of ideals and morals that seldom agreed with his way of life.

HAUNTED BY MEMORY

Once when he was still a little boy he met a midget with a humpback whose hair was too combed and whose features were so old and ugly that heartless people pointed their fingers at him and children made fun of him. And this boy saw in his twisted features the hunger for love and understanding. The misery and unhappiness in the eyes of this outcast haunted him all his life. The delight he brought him when he wrote his immortal novel "The Hunchback of Notre Dame."

In the political chaos of his time he was banished from France. For twenty years he lived outside, on the islands of Jersey and Guernsey. The political uproar that had fascinated him, he left with out of his reach. There was time to write novels, plays and thousands of poems in exile and his best novel "Les Miserables." Once in a while a friend from the continent visited him. To break the loneliness of his life he took dinner party every week for a crowd of poor children.

When he died France mourned one of her greatest sons. He lay in state beneath the Arch of Triumphe in Paris and two millions of his countrymen paid him homage. The suffering and persecuted had lost a friend and fighter for justice. The world had lost a great poet, Victor Hugo.

Victor Hugo appeared on French stamps in 1936.

Life Insurance Premiums Cheaper if One Payment Made

Editor's note: The interest rate quoted in the article applies to the United States of Canada we understand the interest rate is more favorable for the policy holder.

By Lois Mae Smith

The Ritter family is again forced to share its vacation plans. Every July Mr. Ritter's life insurance premium comes due and pushes his holiday trip further down the future.

The life insurance companies too are concerned about their large lump sum premiums. They have devised a monthly automatic plan for the budget-minded.

Life insurance premiums are due and payable annually in advance. Such payments give the family bank balance a hefty jolt. The companies have long pawnitted semi-annual, quarterly or even monthly payments.

However, if the policyholder pays other than annually he is charged interest for the privilege. The rate may range from four per cent to 16 per cent. Highest charges are on the monthly plan.

Assume you have a $10,000 policy for an annual premium of $300. For the privilege of paying semi-annually you would have to pay $306. The interest rate is 4 per cent. You will then make two payments of $153.00 each.

CHEAPER ANNUALLY

You have actually paid $18 or almost 17 per cent a year for deferring $144 of the premium for six months. Over 25 years you would have paid a year's premium in interest alone.

Annual payments are cheapest. If you are purchasing new policies compare the costs of several companies. Annual payments on these $10,000 policies could be spaced six months apart. Then a policy of $2,500 could be purchased at three-month intervals.

For those who must pay monthly, some insurance companies have worked out an automatic plan with the banks. The policyholder merely authorizes his bank to charge the monthly premium to this checking account. Similar authority is given the insurance company to draw such a cheque each month.

The insurance company introduced the plan this year. Some 1,200 banks are now offering this service. Bankers seem satisfied with it so it probably will be widely adopted.

The plan in operation adds three percent to the annual premium. The total is then divided into 12 monthly payments. An annual premium of $300 becomes $309 or $25.75 per month.

RELIEVED OF CONCERN

After arranging the initial setup, the policyholder is relieved of all concern. Insurance company draws the cheque each month which the bank pays. The insured person receives his cancelled cheque as his receipt.

The three per cent charge actually works out to a true interest rate of about 5½ per cent. However, this is still a considerable saving over the monthly policy loan.

Monthly payment privilege under the policy is a big help to those which results in a true rate of about 15 per cent. The automatic bank payment plan has the advantage of convenience and the assurance that premiums will not be missed by oversight.

STAND COLLAPSES

MILAN, Italy (Reuters) — At least 20 persons, most of them children, were seriously injured when a stand collapsed during a football match being played under arc lights at Cabiate, near here, Friday night, police reported.

The three escaped eight days previously from St. Vincent-de-Paul prison near Montreal. Police said Dufour and Hamel surrendered some $18,000 and were unarmed although six shots were fired during their capture. Police said the men were responsible for a hold-up at Vamachiche, 70 miles east of Montreal. (CP Photo).

Negro Claims He Was Refused Apartment Because of Color

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto's first hearing under the Fair Accommodation Practices Act opened Friday as Sidney Forbes, Negro father of two children, testified that he was refused an apartment solely because he is colored.

Claiming discrimination, Forbes, 36, testified that L. A. Shields of Shields Investments refused last May to rent an apartment to him after he had made a deposit on it.

Shields, who did not appear at Friday's hearing before Judge Thomas Dalton, contended through his counsel G. R. Dryden, that the act does not apply in this case because it refers to discrimination involving places "where the public is customarily admitted."

Judge Thomas refused to acknowledge the contention and said that it could be considered only when the whole case has been heard.

Forbes said Shields phoned him after he had made the deposit and said the apartment already had been rented.

"I asked for his address, but he wouldn't give it to me. I also asked if he were the owner of the building. He told me he was connected with it."

Forbes' said he traced Shields' business address then went to see him. "I told him I certainly didn't appreciate the situation one bit, and asked him again if there was any reason for not renting to me."

Forbes said he then asked if there were any other apartments available and was told there were, but "that they rented for $115 a month.

"I said it would take one but after five seconds Mr. Shields replied that they were all taken."

J. F. Nutland, an officer commissioner by the act, said he investigated on Forbes' complaint. He was told by Shields the apartment had been rented to a Miss Pauline Smith, but was refused her address when phone number.

Shield also refused to attend a meeting at his office, Nutland testified. "It received the letter saying that as far as they were concerned the case was closed," he said.

In summing up, Mr. Brewin said the act was nearly designed to legislate against any form of discrimination. If it was found the act did not apply to multi-family dwellings, Judge Thomas should comment on the fact and recommend clarification.

Mr. Dryden said neither he nor the commissioner could concern themselves with what the law should be, but with what the is.

Judge Thomas' report is expected within 10 days.

U.S. May Refuse To Assist Egypt Build Nile Dam

By JOHN SCALI

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has decided to refuse Egypt the offer to help Egypt build the world's biggest dam on the Nile River.

The state department, it was learned, will take a new, critical look at the deal the U.S. and British proposed to Egypt last December before deciding whether to go through with the offer.

This review demonstrates serious American concern over what diplomats refer to as the increasingly unfriendly and pro-Red side policies Premier Gamal Abdel Nasser's government has adopted over the last few months.

FUNDS REALLOCATED

As evidence of its tougher attitude, the state department has notified Egypt the foreign aid help Egypt begin fix $1,300,000,000 dam project now have been reallocated to other foreign aid programs considered to be of higher priority.

No money will be available for Egypt until Congress approves the new foreign aid program still being shaped up. And even then, responsible informants said, no new allocation is to be made for the dam project until the review examination has been completed.

The review will be undertaken, sources said, with full awareness that cancellation of the aid offer could cause Nasser's government to rely on Russia as its main source of financial and technical aid.

More Frequent Commonwealth Talks Possible

By DAVE McINTOSH
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP) — Possibility of more frequent high-level meetings among Commonwealth nations was seen here Friday evening as one result of the just-concluded London conference of Commonwealth prime ministers.

Some significance was attached to the last paragraph of the communique, issued by the Commonwealth Prime Ministers:

"The continuing exchange of views on matters of common concern is an important element in the relationship between the member countries of the Commonwealth. It is of the utmost value that it should be supplemented by the Commonwealth countries, and in a rapidly changing world the need for direct consultations has assumed a new importance."

It was suggested here that there might in future be regional meetings of Commonwealth members besides more frequent conferences of all prime ministers.

By and large, however, there was little or no reaction here to the contents of the communique. Some observers said the prime ministers' statement on the conference merely was a re-ed over what has been said frequently before.

One topic of discussion mentioned in the communique and which is considered here is probably one of the most important is that dealing with the "significant developments" the communique's words—in Russia.

External Affairs Minister Pearson has been saying for some time that the free nations must develop a more flexible policy in dealing with the "new regime" in the Kremlin.

To some observers, the communique made a strong plea for disarmament agreement with a consequent reduction in defence budgets and for increased assistance to underdeveloped countries.

Charge Jockey Extorted $2,000 At Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP) — Calvin Roy Bordeaux, 24-year-old jockey from Torbay, Nfld., was charged with extortion here Friday night. He was charged after collecting $2,000 from Jack Diamond, wealthy meat packer and sportsman. Police said extortion letters and telephone calls had demanded $20,000 as the price to prevent Diamond and members of his family from being slain.

The $2,000 was planted in a delivery package just prior to the arrest.

Vancouver newspapers were asked to hang onto the story when it was learned that Mr. Diamond had received a threatening letter June 28.

Mr. Diamond, named "Vancouver citizen of the year" in 1955, told reporters:

"I wish I had one minute alone with him. I'm glad it's over but I wish I'd had one minute."

THREATENING LETTER

Threatening telephone calls were received by Mr. Diamond at his Pacific Meat Company plant, at his home and at Lansdowne Park race track where his horses are running.

Last Saturday he left a package with bank officials treated with indelible dye as police watched from ambush. Somehow the extortionist must have left the package.

From the first, a police guard was kept on Jack Diamond family and he practised with a revolver. Diamond is a crack shot.

Friday night, telephone call said the money—wrapped in cellophane—was buried in a field "near the second lamp post" on the Georgia Street causeway to Stanley Park.

Eight detectives lounged on the causeway unnoticed as they let park employees mowing grass. Others watched from cars and rowboats as they drank cup after cup of coffee.

A policewoman strolled past the cache as the wait went on from 9 p.m. until nearly 2 a.m.

The package, with $2,000 showing through its transparent wrapping, was untouched when it left at 2 a.m.

Then, a man who had walked through the stake out area several times suddenly vaulted a low fence and picked it up. The arrest was made.

Injuries Fatal To Trapped Miner

PENZANCE, Eng. (Reuters) — Alberto Tamagno, an Italian miner trapped for more than nine hours in the Wheal Jane tin mine, has died in hospital today from his injuries.

Rescuers worked non-stop throughout the day risking their own lives to dig him up from the bottom of a chute down which he had slipped. As he waited, buried up to his shoulders in debris, his brother Mario climbed down to comfort him.

Defence Minister To Answer Claims Of Gen. Simonds

OTTAWA (CP) — Defence Minister Campney is expected to reply to charges levelled at the defence department by Lt.-Gen. Guy Simonds, retiring chief of staff, when the Commons defence debate resumes, possibly next week.

Informants said the department had hoped to ignore Gen. Simonds' allegations. But because the Progressive Conservatives had insisted in the Commons on an explanation, Mr. Campney would make a reply.

Opposition leader Drew demanded that a Commons public committee be set up and empowered to call Gen. Simonds and other senior officers as witnesses. Prime Minister St. Laurent rejected the demand.

Mr. Drew said Gen. Simonds, in effect, has alleged a complete breakdown of administration in defence department and that if the general's statements are true they comprise a "damning indictment" of the department.

GENERAL'S CHARGES

Gen. Simonds charged in a magazine article that the chiefs of staff are prevented from placing their views before the minister and that civil servants can block the carrying out of decisions made by the armed forces and the cabinet.

Mr. Campney is expected to deny Gen. Simonds' charges and give examples to show that his chiefs of staff have ready access to him to present their views on military problems.

It is understood that Gen. Simonds has in preparation a second magazine article in which he may name names.

Greatest Asset Around Office Is Femininity

EDMONTON (CP)—A panel of women journalists have decided during a closed discussion that one of their greatest assets around the newspaper office is femininity.

In a study entitled "The Influential conviction of the Canadian Women's Press Club, the panelists said that women journalists should try to maintain the feminine touch and romance while at work.

The panelists said women in the newspaper field still must earn the confidence of men. The panelists indulged in a mock self criticism, stating they should not take personally criticisms and sniping at their work. In another vein, they stressed the importance of the women's page in the paper, asserting it is becoming a newspaper within a newspaper and should be recognized.

Members of the panel were Marjorie MacKay, women's editor of the St. Catharines Standard; Isobel Armstrong, director of publicity at the University of Western Ontario, London; Ruth Bower, Edmonton Journal, and Helen Pearce, Owen Sound Sun-Times.

WEDDINGS

Muir, of Belleville, and the bridegroom, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Vanderveldе, also of Belleville. (Photo by McCormick Studio.)

VANDERVELDE—MUIR

Tabernacle United church, Belleville, was the setting on Saturday, June 23rd, at 11.00 a.m., for a pretty double-ring wedding when Miss Barbara Noreen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Maclean Muir, of Belleville, became the bride of Walter Peter Vanderveldе, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. William Vanderveldе, also of Belleville.

Fall standards and baskets of pink and white gladioli, intermingled with pink and white snapdragons, formed the background for the ceremony.

Miss Vivienne Pooley, L.R.S.M. (London), presided at the console of the organ and provided the traditional wedding music, and during the signing of the register, Mrs. Ross Bateman sang "I Will Walk Beside You."

Given in marriage by her father, Mr. Vernall Muir, the bride was radiant in her full-length bridal gown of white imported nylon, hand-clipped Chantilly lace and nylon tulle over satin fashioned with Mandarin collar, fitted bodice, studded with odd pink and blue sequins. The bouffant skirt extended into a chapel train. She wore a silver coronet set with crystal baguettes, (fashioned by the bridegroom's father, as were the lovely wedding rings), and fingertip veil of nylon tulle edged with beautifully embroidered edging, and carried a white, lace-covered Bible crested with white carnations, stephanotis and orange blossoms, and white satin streamers knotted with stephanotis.

Mrs. Renita Reid of Sarnia, Ontario, aunt of the bride, as matron of honor, and Mrs. Ruth Woodhouse, of Belleville, sister of the bride, as bridesmaid, were gowned alike in floor-length nylon tulle over taffeta with lace bodices and peplums in harmonizing shades of mauve and mint, respectively, with matching headdresses and white lace mitts. They carried nosegays of roses and 'mums with matching streamers.

Mr. William Tenhoope, of Belleville, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, was groomsman, while Mr. Dickson C. Reid, of Belleville, uncle of the bride, who was also in charge of the guest book; Mr. Robert Brennan of Kingston, and Mr. George Terpstra of Belleville, were ushers.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the church parlors where the bride's mother, attired in a printed silk dress with matching turquoise duster, and white accessories, with corsage of pink Sweetheart roses, received the guests, assisted by the bridegroom's mother, wearing green embossed satin with beige accessories and corsage of pink carnations.

The bride's table was appointed with white damask, centred by a three-tier wedding cake topped with orange blossoms, and flanked by crystal candelabra with tall white tapers. The guests' tables were centred with individual bouquets of orange blossoms.

For the wedding trip to Quebec City, St. Anne de Beaupre, and points of interest, the bride chose a turquoise crystalette ensemble with matching bolero, pink accessories and navy, faille duster, and corsage of pink Sweetheart roses. Upon their return, they will reside in their new home, East Bridge Street, Belleville.

Guests were present from Belleville, Trenton, Adolphustown, Kingston, Toronto, Newmarket, Sarnia, Sta. Adele, Quebec, Detroit, Michigan, London, England, and Clarkston, Scotland.

Prior to her marriage, the bride was the honoured guest at a bridal shower given in Waverley Hall by Mrs. A. Wright, Trent Road, with Mrs. A. Middleton as hostess; at a miscellaneous bridal shower for the bride-to-be at the home of Mrs. Barbara Ann Williams; at a presentation of a blanket and matching bedspread by the members of the Young Sewing Centre where the bride is a member, and at a miscellaneous held in Prince Charles school, by the school staff, of which the bridegroom is a member, when she was the recipient of an electric tea-kettle.

HUNT—MARNER

A pretty June wedding was solemnized on Saturday, when the Rev. W. R. Merrick united in marriage Thelma May Marner of Consecon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Marner, to Bruce Lorne Hunt, Belleville, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Lorne Hunt.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, Mr. Robert Marner, wore a floor-length gown of white rayon lace with nylon net over satin featuring a fitted bodice of nylon lace with lace jacket of lace with Peter Pan collar and pointed sleeves accentuating the fingertips, and fingertip, circular veil of nylon net with scalloped edge, was held by a crown of pearls. She carried sparkling sequins and simulated pearls and a cascade shower bouquet of red Sweetheart roses and stephanotis with satin streamers.

Miss Barbara Lucas of Belleville, as the bride's only attendant, attired in a ballerina length dress of turquoise crystalette with matching jacket. She wore a pink pill box headdress fashioned with satin bow, matching shoes and gloves and carried a semi-cascade bouquet of light pink and medium pink carnations and Canadian lilies.

Mr. James Bay of Belleville, attended the bridegroom.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at Club Cedars, Canniffon, where the guests were received by the bride's mother, who chose a pink rayon sheath dress with matching jacket and corsage of white pom 'mums. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother, attired in a navy nylon dress with navy accessories and corsage of pink 'mums.

For a wedding trip to Muskoka and around Lake Ontario, the bride chose a turquoise dress with white accessories and corsage of white 'mums. Upon their return Mr. and Mrs. Hunt will reside in Belleville.

Prior to her marriage the bride was honoured at a miscellaneous shower held at the home of Mrs. Robert Marner, Jr., and a shower held by the ladies of Office staff at the home of Miss Darrell Carr, when she was the happy recipient of a lovely floor lamp, steam iron and sleeve board.

TO SEND OBSERVERS

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — The Polish Falcons of America, meeting here in convention Thursday, Friday night voted to send a three-man delegation to Poland to observe the trials of workers arrested during recent riots in Poznan.

This - and That

Recently we were with a group of Canadian women who had travelled from parts of the country to a congress. During our chit-chat, one lady from Northern Ontario turned to a companion and said "Oh, you are from Belleville. Of all the towns and cities we drove through, Belleville was the nicest. You have ever such beautiful big trees in a city. You can be proud of Belleville." We were, and we are, delighted to hear how others are impressed by the beauty of our city as they drive through our county city.

Did you know that on ordinary door requires about eight square feet of floor space and we don't know how much cubic space if you are planning a room and every foot of space is important? T & T thought this simple little tip might be useful.

The strides being taken towards greater accomplishments in the field of drama in Canada are illustrated in tangible form this summer at Albert College, Belleville. The Christian Culture Council of Canada has been conducting workshop sessions at Albert College. The council, with headquarters in Toronto, is the result of the vision of Belleville's late Miss Isabel Squires. Miss Squires was a deaconess and loved the drama. The drama and religious plays at one time formed an integral place in worship. Miss Squires conceived the idea of introducing this into the church and Squires, the idea was serious and her objective was to bring back the drama into the religious life of the nation in the form of plays properly done. The Christian Drama Council is non-denominational and has been in existence about five years. For the first time this year that a workshop has been held in Albert College, Belleville. Later this summer a workshop will be conducted at Halifax and it is the responsibility of the council to open workshops in Western Canada. This is rapidly expanding. When we visited the workshop this week we were advised that Albert College, Belleville provide splendid facilities and an excellent location for a workshop. Attending the workshop for instruction are students from Newfoundland and Ontario and Quebec. There have been visitors from as far away as Wisconsin and the Dakotas, U.S.A. It was obvious to even the "amateur" that the enthusiasm of the instructors, who are of the highest calibre, is contagious. The students are interested, attentive, keen and happy — and Christian Drama Council of Canada workshop at Albert College is a fine contribution to the cultural development of Ontario and a compliment to Belleville.

Hockey and ladies are synonymous terms (field hockey but it is only recently that women have been playing the game seriously in Ladies. In May of this year an Indian women's team competed in the Olympic games and Asian team in an international tournament made up of teams from Americas, Germany, England, Scotland, Holland and New Zealand. The report has taken such a firm hold among the women of India that the All-India Women's Hockey Association has suggested that hockey be included in the Olympic games next November.

At the table tennis world championship games, an American girl (17 years) and a countryman won the singles and the Japanese girl duo of girls won the finals from Hungary. The Japanese girl won the women's singles and she was an unknown 23-year-old student. She has been world champion several weeks ago but T & T just came across a report and thought you might be interested in the things women around the world are doing in the realm of sport.

There is still, and will continue to be, much written, many speculations offered and many propositions offered as to the merit and demerit of the secret of the atom bomb. Only these two hundred years before man discovered the secret of the atom bomb he may content himself with an observation which seems justified by experience, that he is made more to fear from the passions of his own imagination than from the convulsions of the elements." This is left as a thought for this week-end.

T & T will originate next Wednesday from the seventh congress of the International Federation of Business and Professional Women at Montreal. It is expected that about twenty-five minutes will be represented so your reporter will endeavor to pass on bits of this and that from the floor of the congress as it is of interest to its readers.

Teachers, Pupils Display Pleasing Art Exhibit at McCarthy Theatre

The lounge of McCarthy Theatre again is "chock-a-block" with an interesting art display of oils by Miss Mary Mould, local artist, and her class of pupils, which will continue on view for a few more weeks.

The oils, which are nicely spaced at eye-level include still life; land and seascapes; scenes of summer, autumn and winter; animal studies; floral, and portrait study.

As one follows around the lounge in a counter - clockwise manner, the eye is arrested by two excellently executed pictures of sailing by it. Barker. Both of these miscellaneous scenes depict in one a golden palomino with flowing, creamy mane and tail, her little, dark foal nestled in the ground beside her; and the other, the graceful curving neck of a dark brown mare and her sprightly foal. The settings depicted breathe the springtime of the season and of the springtime of life, and of pride and care in motherhood as their young. Judging from the sympathetic delineation of the body muscles and bone structure, one would say the young artist was a lover of horses.

Margaret Wright had two studies of cats, one of autumn with reddening maples, stream and rocks, and one of stately grey sentinels in white painted store. Both were very well done, the latter showing precision; and care in execution.

CANADA GOOSE

"The Canada Goose", a peaceful study of three wild geese winging their flight through evening shadows over rust-coloured hills, in tandem fashion, drew the attention of many visitors. Miss Mary Nicol has achieved the sensation of motion in this nature study.

Geitha Burns' winding river with sailing showed movement and color appreciation. Her Mountain Lake was strongly colored and interesting in detail.

The still life, one by Joan Brownrigg, which is of some birthday things, were of the same birthday standing a yellow ribbon bow filled with reddish apples. In contrast with a vivid, green vase, and white cylinder vase, the bow was well drawn, with highlights; further balanced by a pleated fan of sage and apples near by. The grey cloth on which the objects were placed, lacked texture.

The winter scene by Doro Holloway, is well composed and colored, and depicted a winding stream with bare hardwoods and evergreens and in the distance a few cottages with snow-covered roofs. The reflected birches added a distinctive touch.

Another interesting oil was of a wide river, of the north country, painted by Mrs. Gordon Bell, Lawrence in majesty. The foreground showed three white birches, perched in a cove foreground by evergreens, and highlighted by tall grass and weeds in the foreground. The deep blue of the water, bounded with the rocky shore, the scudding bits of white cloud denoted the approach of autumn. A nice subject, nicely done by Marion Atkinson, another art student.

Two floral pictures, one by Mrs. Bert Farley, the other by Mrs. Bronskill, were of multicolored tulips in a white sugar bowl pleasingly arranged with a minimum of stiffness. The third flower painting by Mrs. Barlow was of single-

Bradshaw Family Holds 20th Reunion At Cobourg Park

The 20th annual "Bradshaw" family picnic was held at Victoria Park, Cobourg, on Monday, July second.

Under sunny skies, and during the noon hour, picnic baskets filled with basket lunches, which were enjoyed by both young and old.

Registration took place, after which the meeting was then called to order.

The president Leaman Bradshaw extended a hearty welcome to all.

The minutes of the 1955 meeting were read and duly approved.

A meeting place was then decided upon for the next picnic, which will be held at Presqu'ile July 1, 1957.

New officers were then elected for 1957: president, Bernard Fox (Miss); secretary-treasurer, Leaman Bradshaw; Plant Announcements committee, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bradshaw, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bezz, Oshawa; grounds committee, Glenn Bradshaw, Charles Bradshaw, Belleville.

The president then called upon Crown Attorney John Bradshaw of Peterborough, who thanked all for the invitation sent him, this being his first visit to the gathering.

He gave an interesting talk on his research of Bradshaw genealogy which he has traced to the Bradshaws of the 1600's and the 1250 and farther back. He has made a great deal of study in this matter and asked that all would co-operate in further research, which, obviously, is a time-taking, Anglican church service was held at a Bradshaw home in Cobourg.

But that's what's wonderful about travel in this day and age—it's cheap for your money and you can take your choice.

Another question about hotels:

(Q) "We tried following your suggestion about guaranteeing payment on our reservation in several hotels have refused to acknowledge it. They insist on firming only that they would hold it 'late' or 'until 11.' Why?" K.S., Fort Worth, Texas.

(A) Probably because they feel that in the case of guests who haven't stayed there before, or who haven't got a company account on the reservation to back up payment of the bill, it is impossible to collect from a guaranteed reservation holder who doesn't show up. A guarantee isn't much good if you don't know anything about the integrity of the guarantor.

If you're really determined about assuring yourself a room, the surest way is to send a deposit in advance.

Going Places Motor Tour Can Be Expensive

By Shirley and Bob Sloane

(Q) "How would you rate a touring holiday in Canada as to where you visit one place, such as a resort, and stay there for a week or two?" P.L.R., Oklahoma City, Okla.

(A) Like most things, they both have their advantages and disadvantages, and it's a matter of what you want out of a vacation. But it's also a matter of economics.

Many tourists feel making a motor tour is automatically the cheapest way of taking a holiday. But that's not necessarily true.

Two persons must figure on $7 a day for gas and oil if they're going to cover any ground, $13 a day for food and tips, plus at least $7 a night for lodging. This doesn't take into account big-way tolls, auto maintenance and depreciation, and the cost of sightseeing attractions, but it still comes to a minimum of $37, or $13.50 a person a day.

For that kind of money you can stay at as fine a resort hotel as you could want, in a comfortable room, with meals, horseback riding, swimming and entertainment all paid for — you can get this paper by subscription while you're away to keep up on the news from home.

Chances are, too, that some sightseeing or other travel-type activity is included in the hotel's program for guests.

This is not by way of detracting from the pleasure of touring, which, obviously, is the way of seeing more places and doing a greater variety of things.

But that's what's wonderful about travel in this day and age—it's cheap for your money and you can take your choice.

The program was prepared by the Mission Band and their leader, Mrs. R. A. Vine. Those present for Miss Isabelle Burnside, the teacher.

Miss Shirley Chisholm was at the piano.

Mrs. Carl Twiddy gave a piano solo. Several of the boys gave a short sketch and led the school sang a song "He".

Mrs. W. J. Tufts told the story of the Mission Band, asking how it should be hung, held and carried, and what each one stands for. Mrs. Tufts also read of an Estonia family who came to the west, escaped to America and through a Christian Church found work and new hope and life in a new country.

A duet by Shirley and Joan Chisholm was enjoyed.

Mrs. F. Tucker gave a chapter from the Mission Band Study Book which is on Africa.

After the scripture lesson, which was read by Mrs. Ed. Reid, the meeting closed with the Benediction.

Mrs. E. B. Phillips showed the Mission Band scroll with the stars which had been made by the band, during the time Mrs. F. Tucker was at the helm.

Mrs. Phillips also thanked those who helped make the afternoon so successful. A social hour was served and a social time enjoyed.

ADVICE To the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

I'D SHOW SOME GUMPTION, MRS. T.!

Dear Beatrice Fairfax:

My husband is the type who will never lift a hand to help me around the house, or with the children.

When he comes home at night, he wants his dinner ready and waiting for him, and after he eats it, instead of helping with the dishes, while I get the children to bed, he goes and sits in the living room reading the paper. After he finishes the paper, he goes down town to the billiard parlor and stays there all the rest of the evening. This is his routine every night of the week, leaving me to stay home to do any work that's waiting and to mind the children.

Weekends it's even worse. He stays out Saturday night until all hours, then sleeps all Sunday morning. When he wakes up, he wants room service, so I fix his breakfast on a tray and one of the children takes it to him. When he finally gets up, he's off and out somewhere, and we don't see him again until he's good and ready to come home.

Not one thing will he ever do for me, and I am about sick and tired of doing everything that has to be done.

What would you do with a useless lout like this? — Mrs. T.

Dear Mrs. T.:

You want to know what I'd with a useless husband like this? Well, I'd with a useless husband just what I'd do with any other useless thing around the house.

First, I'd see if that useless thing could possibly be mended so that it would be useful again. And if that didn't work; if I was beyond repair, then I'd dispense with it. But definitely.

Perhaps you can't exactly throw such a husband out as you would a useless article, but you can achieve the same result by taking yourself off.

So how would I go at the business of trying to make a useless husband useful again?

I'd tell him, calmly but very firmly, that marriage is a partnership; that I'm not only willing but anxious to do my share, but not both mine and his. I'd say that it's like hoss: just as much as mine, good it is's not interested in doing his part to make it a pleasant and happy place, you're not going to do it for him. I'd add that if I'm going to have to do all the work to make a home for myself and my children, I'd prefer to do it under a roof I'd own for myself and them; that I'd be losing nothing by so doing since I get neither help nor money from him anyway.

I'd do my very best to avoid a bitter quarrel, but I'd make it all very clear.

Then, having spoken my piece, I'd say nothing more on the subject while I waited for a reasonable length of time to see what he intended doing. And if what he did was exactly nothing, then he'd come home one night and find the house dark and empty, no dinner ready to eat and no family anywhere to be seen. For in the meantime, I would have made plans and they would definitely not include him.

That's what I'd do, Mrs. T. I'd show some gumption. How about you?

NEW LOTION ADDS TO SUMMER COMFORT

Have you reached the point where you dread each new heat wave? Practically pass out each time the radio or TV weather reporters announce that the temperature has risen another degree or two? Or do you just resign yourself to "suffering" and take out your gripe against the weather man on family and friends? Well, none of this is necessary at all. You can, and should, "keep cool." And it's quite easy with a new lotion especially designed for summer comfort.

Combining chlorophyll, nature's wonder deodorizer, and menthol, one of the most cooling products known, the lotion has no fragrance whatsoever except the menthol, which evaporates quickly after application, leaving no odor at all. For this reason, men like it as well as women.

Applied, as you would cologne or toilet water, to the forehead, back of the neck, inside wrists and elbows and ankles, the lotion is actually "cold" to the touch and brings quick relief during uncomfortably damp and sticky weather as well as on hot days.

It's an ideal lotion for the busy homemaker and for the career girl since frequent use throughout the day will keep one "cool, calm and collected" no matter what the pressures of the job at hand. A bottle kept in office desk, the kitchen or boudoir will prove a boon throughout the summer months.

The lotion is also effective in the relief of hot, tired feet and swollen ankles. Applied after a foot bath or at any time of the day, it makes you feel actually light-footed, ready to take off with the proverbial hop, skip and jump. It will also relieve headaches caused by heat and humidity. Remember, however, that as we said before, the chlorophyll, which can be obtained at cosmetics counters of leading department and drug stores everywhere, is not a perfumed lotion. It is not to be confused with the fragrance you use for summer cooling. It does do the job, though, and what more can one ask as the thermometer soars and sours and sours?

Kept handy in her desk, the busy career girl finds a chlorophyll lotion cooling and refreshing.

LETTUCE:

Dear Mary: After I offered these recipes to you I had to try them again a few times to get the amounts more exact. I do hope you'll be able to use them as we enjoy them very much.

CABBAGE ROLLS

One head sauerkraut, 1 cup leftover cooked meat (diced or chopped) or 1-2 lb. ground raw pork, 1 cup cooked rice (drained but not rinsed), 1 medium head cabbage, 1 or 2 cloves garlic (optional). Combine sauerkraut, meat and chopped garlic in a large sauce pan. Remove outer leaves from cabbage. Pare the centre stem of the leaves to the thickness of the rest of the leaf, and rinse under cold water. Place the leaves curled side down in the saucepan with the kraut and meat and cut till the leaves are tender. If uncooked pork is used it may be necessary to cook the meat and kraut further, after removing the cabbage leaves. Combine the cooked rice with the meat and kraut and add salt to taste. Roll the meat mixture in the cabbage leaves (which may be halved if too large). Serve hot with boiled potatoes. Cooked vegetables. (I go heavy on onions and celery since celery leaves and light on potatoes.) Add rice or macaroni or pre-soaked barley. Simmer for an hour or so till the vegetables are just tender. Makes 2 quarts.

Thank you for the recipes you sent. We were very pleased with the whole wheat bread and looking forward to the tomato season to try the tomato marmalade . . . congratulations on the birth of your grandson . . . could have arrived over the difficult time Marilyn and when the baby was born but happy for all of you that everything turned out well.—Leslie G.

Make about three quarts soup.

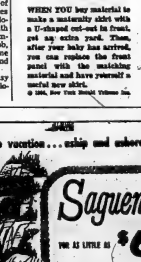
VEGETABLE SOUP

(Courtesy Leslie G.)



One soup bone without meat, 1 bovril or oxo cube, 2 1-3 quarts water, salt to taste, 1 pint canned tomatoes, vegetables, rice, macaroni, pre-soaked barley. Wash soup bone (I prefer a piece from the joint plus a piece from the leg) and soak in cold water for about 1-4 hour. Add bovril cube and salt and bring to a boil and simmer for about three hours. Remove the bone and refrigerate soup till the fat cake solidifies and can be easily removed. Return soup to the heat and add canned tomatoes and any cut up vegetables desired as well as the rice and macaroni or pre-soaked vegetables. (I go heavy on onions and celery since celery leaves and light on potatoes.) Add rice or macaroni or pre-soaked barley. Simmer for an hour or so till the vegetables are just tender. Makes 3 quarts.

Norwegians Show Appreciation of Woman Worker

VANCOUVER (CP) — Norwegian seamen visiting Vancouver have finally found a way to show their appreciation to the woman they call "Tante."

In a simple ceremony aboard the Norwegian motor ship Powell River, the seamen gave Noel Lowndes of the Flying Angel Mission here an order for a new English car, worth $2,300.

Norwegian seamen are noted for having many dollars to spend and the gift must have required many months of pennysaving. They said they felt it would help Miss Lowndes in her welfare work as well as show their gratitude for her kindnesses to them during their visits to port.

Miss Lowndes, as "Tante," the Scandinavian word for "aunt," visits incoming ships taking home town magazines and papers to the crew members. She arranges football games, and picnics. She organizes asking excursions and bus rides.

GOOD MANNERS

WHO IS INVITED TO THE WEDDING REHEARSAL PARTY?

Dear Mrs. Beechman:

1. At a rehearsal dinner, should a toast be proposed to the prospective bride and groom?

2. And may fruit juice be substituted for an alcoholic beverage?

3. I'm not sure who, properly, should be invited to a rehearsal dinner. Husbands of the bride's attendants, wives of the groom's attendants? When a member of the wedding party is engaged, should the fiance (or fiancee) be invited? Should the minister and his wife be invited? Who else may be invited?—H.

1. A toast may be proposed to the prospective bride and groom, but there should be no emphasis on the proposing of toasts, to take away from this important feature of the wedding reception.

2. Of course a non-alcoholic beverage may be served instead of an alcoholic beverage. But instead of fruit juice I suggest you serve the more customary fruit punch, which, made with care and imagination, can be very delicious indeed.

3. The only 'must' is that the hosts of the party invite every member of the wedding party to the before-rehearsal or the after-rehearsal parties. The bride's mother and father are present, of course, either as hosts or guests. They don't invite the minister and his wife unless they are friends of the family, they may be. Sometimes special wedding guests from out-of-town are invited. But the party shouldn't get to be too large, and unwieldy, since attendants must arrive promptly at the church to meet the minister, organist, and any others essential to the rehearsal.

PROPER AGE FOR FLOWER GIRL, RING BEARER

Dear Mrs. Beechman:

My daughter and I would like to know if a 7-year-old girl is too old to be a flower girl? And if a 5-year-old boy is too old to be a ring bearer?—L.

A 7-year-old girl is not too old to be a flower girl. Flower girls are usually between 4 and 7 years of age. But a 5-year-old boy is too old to be a ring bearer . . . 4 or 5 is the usual age for a ring bearer.

26 Canadian Beauties Left In Second Round

HAMILTON (CP) — Twenty-six beauties step before the critical eyes of the judges tonight in the second round of the three-day Miss Canada contest.

Thirteen of them will dress in bathing suits to be judged for their beauty, and 13 will dress in gowns to be judged for their talent.

In the first round of the contest Thursday night, a shapely five-foot - seven blonde, Carole Stewart of Toronto, with a 36-25-36½ figure, took top points in the bathing suit half of the contest.

A Montreal singer, Dorothy Moreau, 25, won top points for talent.

Tonight the girls reverse the order. Those who wore gowns will wear bathing suits and vice versa. Saturday night all points will be added up and the final judgment given and one lovely head will wear the crown.

The winner is to receive a cash award or a university scholarship, a screen test in England and the right to represent Canada in the Miss America beauty pageant at Atlantic City, N.J.

Contestants include Wendy Cooper, 19, Kingston; Lynda Hagen, 24, Windsor; Lorna Hood, 18, Arnold's Cut; Kay Lothian, 18, North Bay; Gwen Stevenson, 19, Guelph.

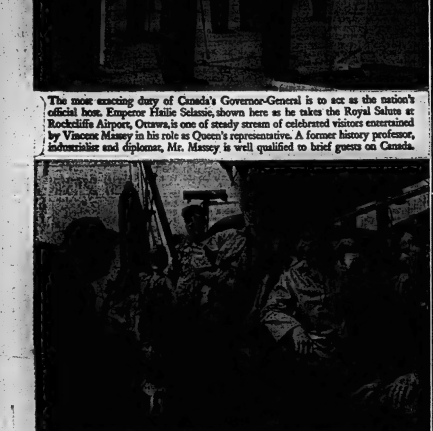
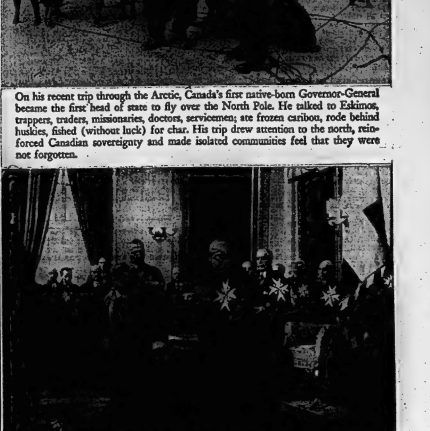
Number One Canadian the Nation's Busiest Man



The most exacting duty of Canada's Governor-General is to act as the nation's official host. Emperor Haile Selassie, shown here as he takes the Royal Salute at Rockcliffe Airport, Ottawa, is one of steady stream of celebrated visitors entertained by Vincent Massey in his role as Queen's representative. A former history professor, industrialist and diplomat, Mr. Massey is well qualified to brief guests on Canada.



On his recent trip through the Arctic, Canada's first native-born Governor-General became the first head of state to fly over the North Pole. He talked to Eskimos, trappers, traders, missionaries, doctors, servicemen; ate frozen caribou, rode behind huskies, fished (without luck) for char. His trip drew attention to the north, reinforced Canadian sovereignty and made isolated communities feel that they were not forgotten.

"H.E.", as his staff calls him, travels 25,000 miles a year to make the Crown a symbol of democracy. He has made 357 speeches, not including such off-the-cuff talks as this chat with fishermen on the wharf at St. John's, Nfld. Mr. Massey works hard on speeches to sidestep controversy while avoiding what Lord Tweedsmuir termed "Governor-Generalities".

His Excellency opens the third session of Canada's twenty-second Parliament by reading the Speech from the Throne to the assembled members of the Senate and of the House of Commons. The Speech indicates forthcoming business of Parliament. Mr. Massey first reads in English and then in fluent French.

This investiture of General H. D. G. Crerar as a Knight of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem is typical of the constant round of ceremony at Government House. Here Mr. Massey spends his days working and signing government documents and entertaining Canadians of differing races, creeds and politics.

Your Car

Check Auto Throughout in Warm Weather

By Espree Milnes

In having your car prepared for lots of hot weather driving, don't stop when you find out the cooling system is in perfect shape to dissipate summer heat. Several other factors can be troublemakers when it comes to overheating.

As a matter of fact, anything that puts an added strain on your engine can cause temperatures to soar beyond the safe point. This list includes such things as poor ignition timing (a common fault), faulty carburetion, clutch slippage, slight brake drag and even under - inflated tires.

The exhaust system is another place worth checking. Clogging, kinks or collapsed pipes will quickly hamper efficient engine cooling and bring on trouble.

Be sure that the manifold heat control valve moves freely when the choke lever or mechanism to the exhaust manifold is rotated. It it sticks, hinds or is frozen in the closed position, engine overheating is sure to result.

GREASE JOBS

From L. P.: "Since I bought my 1956 car, there's been a grease nipple from the rear when I put my foot off the gas pedal and slow up. The dealer was asked to check it but apparently nothing was done. Would rear axle trouble cause this noise?"

(A) It probably is. Too much end play in the differential bearings will bring on such symptoms.

D. B. asks: "Isn't it true that regular oil will actually damage a car engine just as well as the more expensive grades?"

(A) No, it will not. Regular oil does not contain many of the carbon inhibitors and detergent additives found in the premium fluids sold in the higher grades. Thus, it cannot possibly do the same job of controlling oxidation and keeping the engine free of grit, sludge and gum deposits which contribute to trouble.

NEW CARBURETOR

M. K. writes: "My car is a 1954 V-8 model with 39,000 miles registered. It has a new carburetor which I had installed very recently. I consider myself a careful driver, do not speed excessively or start suddenly, yet the best I can get is approximately 10 miles per gallon. Is there a gas consumption or should I suspect some kind of trouble?"

(A) Under average driving conditions, you should do a little better than that. It would be hurt to have the ignition system double-checked. It's often to blame for poor gas mileage.

From W. M. — "I have a truck which will start instantaneously when the engine is cold, but after I run it for a while and then stop, it will not start again even though I have a new battery. Why is it that the truck will not start until the engine cools off again?"

(A) It's either due to vapor lock blocking the fuel flow or an overrich mixture which floods the engine so that it's evaporated by heat when you stop the engine. In the latter case, the engine will start if you pump out the excess by the cranking.

Garden Notes

Plant Fragrant Flowers

By Flora M. Saville

Many of the new hybrid flowers have lost their original perfume in the process. But flower scents have a definite appeal and should be planned for in choosing plants.

At one time all roses had a perfume, now the fancy beauties are grown for show, but some of these have retained their smell. Include some for their perfume. Mirgold, Sunset, Will Rogers, Mojave and Chief Seattle have fragrance and outstanding beauty.

In shrubs there are many that have a pleasing scent too, notably lilac, mock orange and honeysuckle. Viburnum Carlesi is exquisite and Burkwoodi is also fine.

In the perennial border there are many to choose for their scent. Lily-of-the-valley is one of the very most treasured scents. Old - fashioned lemon lilies and white bellotrope are still grown for their scent.

ANNUALS

In the annuals the choice is very wide. There is the heliotrope and nigonette. These two are seldom remembered now, but they are attractive as well as sweet smelling. Nasturtiums, petunias, verbenas, and mignonette (sweet alyssum) add much to the garden as well as being good cutting materials. Perhaps the most fragrant annual is matthiolo or evening-scented stocks. These have no great beauty of form, but should be tucked in some inconspicuous place for their lovely scent which is strongest in the evening after a rain.

Large, flowered stocks should be planted too. They make handsome plants with soft grey green foliage and fine spikes of small fragrant flowers, blooms, sometimes fifteen to a stem. The new hybrids come in the widest variety of soft colors such as chamois, flesh pink, pure white, lavender and rose. There are brilliant colors too, which include clear blue, and two fine reds.

Stocks are good material: Used by themselves or with other plant material for artistic flower arrangements. They are graceful in habit of growth and interest in the simplest bouquet.

VARIETIES

The newer varieties achieve stocks of twelve to 15 inches in length and the flowers are much larger than the old types. The flowers are more compact and last well in the garden or as cut flowers.

There are the double dwarf and tall types which made fine bedding plants and their fragrance is one of their outstanding points as well as their long season of bloom.

Due to the late season many nurseymen still have flats of stocks to sell. You will likely find them if you shop around.

HEIDELBERG, Germany (AP) — The United States is returning to Germany most of the big war crimes prison at Landsberg: It now holds hundreds of Nazi criminals and now holds only 30. The U.S. will retain control of a part of the prison being used to house the few persons still under sentence.

SAFETY FIRST

CLACTON, England (Reuters)— A lifeboat was rushed to sea early Thursday after flares were seen from the shore of this coastal town. Rescuers found—not a sinking ship, but safety-conscious Americans winding up their Independence Day celebrations by setting off fireworks where they wouldn't injure anybody.

Wellington on the Lake

JULY

I love the July weather
The month the poets scorn,
I love the morning quiet
When the day is newly born,
The fragrance of the meadow,
The summer shaded shore—
With every fleeting summer
I love them more and more.

The little bare-foot urchin
Happy at work or play,
The busy birds a-winging
From morning's dewy gray,
The tourist seeking leisure
In the calm countryside,
With quiet peace within the heart
To linger and abide.

Even in the heat of noonday,
When nature seems At rest,
When earth's wild timid creatures
Cease from their endless quest,
I joy with fervid feeling
In the glint the summer brings,
For soon, too soon, the moments
Slip by on fleeting wings.

Gladly I greet the dawning
Of each glowing July day,
Glad that the snows of winter
Are, as far away
Thankful in Him, the Giver
Of each pink-petalled rose,
Who reigns in the field of harvest
His golden mantle throws.

And so may summer sunshine
In my life play a part,
And like a golden lustre
Sink deep within the heart.
—Helen B. Anderson.

We must have stability—take time to do and learn the things that are worthwhile; time in the morning to acknowledge God throughout the day; time on Sunday to acknowledge God and the need of services. We must have faith.

"Peole think we of the Christian Church are not factual people but we are factual. We have the greatest fact of all — the fact from which Christianity has sprung. This fact is the coming of Christ. Faith is the substance of things hoped for the evidence of things not seen. Evidence suggests fact. Our faith in Christ follows the fact of His coming."

Rare, Medium, Well-Done

WELL-EARNED!

Pretty Helena Moravick looked up and smiled shyly as this reporter waved a greeting to her in the bustling office of the Simpson's-Sears branch store here.

Efficiently she completed what she was doing before rising. The modest, green-eyed young beauty is not exactly the answer to a reporter's dream insofar as getting news is concerned. She is reticent almost to the point of shyness, but willingly answers any and all questions.

HELENA MORAVICK

The rose-tinted skin of her face under the darkish blonde hair glowed with a warm smile when she was told she would be the recipient of a handsome Rolex watch, as a tribute to her endurance and "guts" in the heart-breaking 15-mile Quinte sw'm grind.

"It will be so nice," she said in her quaintly-dialected English. She said the sudden entrance in the cold water of the bay "where the lake comes in" was a distinct shock. She shivered involuntarily recalling the near-icy touch.

She believed the other swimmers would have finished had the water not been so cold. She refused to say or is recovering nicely from her cold - water ordeal.

She was ready to enter the bay protected by sweaters a practice swim but arrangements for the watch presentation prevented it.

Memories of her victory are a slightly-pulled muscle in an arm, she said. "The doctor has not yet got all the water out of the arm." Her pulled muscle resulted from the efforts of a well-meaning spectator at the Prince Edward Yacht Club dock to pull her from the wat'er after she "touched" the finish line. It is not serious, she said.

Was there any truth in the story that she would attempt the Quinte down Trenton to Belleville in the near future?

Again there flashed that warm, shy smile. "I cannot say as yet," she dimpled. "I suppose I must leave that to Tommy. He is my manager, you know."

Later we discovered that Helena was making light of her arm injury. Tommy revealed that Helena's shoulder is stiff and has difficulty raising her arm over her head. He ordered treatment for the shoulder."

The pretty Czech-Canadian teen-ager showed perhaps her greatest emotion than far when she was presented with a handsome Rolex watch last night at Jerry O'Connor's Jersey Diner, formerly made in behalf of the Belleville Company and Helena's face lighted up in a heart-warming smile of appreciation. She could scarcely voice her thanks.

"Manager" and coach Tommy Pedder also beamed his appreciation, and later spoke in glowing terms of his young protege's potentialities.

"She has not yet learned to master the proper strokes and she has not been trained for speed. She entered the Quinte swim to test her endurance — and you know the answer," said Tommy.

He predicted that with future training, with Helena's development of the proper strokes which in turn will develop her speed, that she would negotiate the Deseronto-Picton swim next year in two hours less time.

"She has such possibilities and I have such faith in her future that if everything runs according to plan, I will enter her in the Catalina swim next year," he said. Then he added rather wistfully, "If we can get a sponsor."

When Helena's arm rights itself she will go into immediate training again. Tommy confirmed the report that his young swimmer will negotiate the distance between Trenton and Belleville so that Belleville people can see her swim.

"She is an apt pupil," Tommy said, and there was no mistaking the pride in his voice. "I know she would finish the Quinte grind, once she started. She's that kind of a swimmer, and gamest, boy does everything she is told with no murmur of dissent."

Asked about his own experience, Pedder said it was gasoline fumes from motor craft on the bay that caused him to black out. "I have done a lot of distance swimming," he said, "and that is the first time I ever lost consciousness. Of course, all stick on the water which I swallowed did not help matters."

Like the tough good little sportsman he is, Pedder had no alibis for his failure to finish. "It was one of those things that could not be helped — and that was that," he stated.

But he admitted that he and Helena had planned the swim. Tommy was confident he could win from the field and intended to lead the pack from the start. In doing so he could pace Helena with the hope they could finish one-two. Well that is almost the way it happened.

Whether it was coincidental dates or planned that way, this corner is not aware "how come" the Picton regatta and the Quinte swim were lined up for the same date. In any event, the subsequent events proved that like gasoline and whiskey, regattas and marathon swims do not mix in the same waters.

In the future, by holding them on separate dates, not only is the danger hazard removed, but swimmers will not have to face heavy chop from speedboat wakes, gasoline fumes and oil slicks. It will be better for all concerned.

Even a lame Mickey Mantle languishing on the bench pulls the fans to the ball park.

Mantle and the New York Yankees came to Washington Friday night and, in whacking the Senators 8-4, drew a crowd of 12,513, second only to the full house of 28,500 on opening day.

Although Mantle's injured right knee kept him out of the game, it's a cinch he was the main attraction for the pair.

And what did Mantle do? He took his cuts in batting practice and set off cheers with a couple of runs over the high right-field wall. He caught a ball or two, then ambled to the bench to rest his knee while Bob Turley pitched the Yanks to their 59th victory of the season.

KEPT INTACT

The win kept Yankees four-game American League lead. Second-place Chicago socked Detroit 14-0. Cleveland defeated Kansas City 4-2 as Jim Piersall, who hadn't hit a major league grand-slammer before Thursday night, made it two back-to-back homers in two straight games to tie a major league mark held by the Babe, Bill Dickey and Jimmy Foxx.

Yankee Manager Casey Stengel (Al Mc. Dougald's two - run single that broke a 2-2 tie in the seventh inning. Then he tagged Eddie Yost's lead-off homer in a two-run fifth inning. That fourth hit a major league grand-slammer before Thursday night, made it two back-to-back homers in two straight games to tie a major league mark held by the Babe, Bill Dickey and Jimmy Foxx.

Yankee Manager Casey Stengel (Al Mc. Dougald's two - run single that broke a 2-2 tie in the seventh inning. Then he tagged Eddie Yost's lead-off homer in a two-run fifth inning. That fourth but needed relief help in the ninth.

Bunky's bustup blast, his eighth home run of the season, came in the fourth inning off Troy Herriage, 1[illegible] 3-8, as Indians made it seven-out-of - eight over As this year.

Jack Harshman, 6-4, picked up his fourth shutout of the season with relief help from Ray Narleski and smacked a three-run homer for a 5-0 lead over Steve Gromek in the second inning.

Ted Kluszewski is hammering the tar out of baseballs these days as though he can't do anything else.

Big Klu, who has rapped seven homers among nine hits in six games, Friday night made his 21st of the season of a three-run shot in the fifth inning to hoist Redlegs into a 6-4 victory over St. Louis Cardinals. With it, Cincinnati preserved its three-percentage point lead in the National League race.

Don Gross, a 25-year-old lefty recalled from Havana last week, picked up his second victory with an eight-hitter, although he needed help from bullpen whiz Buster Freeman in the seventh inning.

While Redlegs were making it 19 victories in 14 games, runner-up place Milwaukee bopped Chicago Cubs 5-3 behind Warren Spahn's four-hitter to stay three points ahead of Brooklyn Dodgers, who beat Philadelphia 3-1.

GAVE ONE WALK

Gross, one of four southpaws to beat Brooklyn's world champs last season when he was a rookie,gave up one walk to the Cards—his first in 31 1-3 innings this year. A lefty with control could be just what the Redlegs need to go with righthanders Brooks Lawrence, Johnny Klippstein, Art Fowler and maybe Joe Nuxhall.

Ed Bailey, the National League's starting all-star catcher, tagged his 14th homer off loser Tom Poholsky in the fifth to give Redlegs the fourth inning. But the fourth-place Cards, who lost 3-2 again, made four hits for three runs in the fifth, setting up Kluszewski's shiner.

Spahn, winning his seventh with his 37th career shutout, allowed only one Cub runner as far as second base as Braves got home runs from Joe Adcock and Hank Aaron and touched bonus kid Don Kaiser for his third decision. Four walks and Johnny Logan's two-run single gave Milwaukee a 3-0 lead in the first inning.

Randy Jackson's two-run triple in the sixth inning handed Robin Roberts his 10th defeat as 'Dodgers' Carl Erskine went all the way for the first time since Sunday. May 12 no-hitter against Giants.

Brewer, Mayer Tied for Lead In Canadian Open Tournament

By CHARLES BAKIN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

POINTE CLAIRE, Que. (CP)—Ray Brewer Jr., a rookie on the pro golf circuit, relied on a straight-shooting iron game to move into a tie for the halfway lead in the Canadian open golf championship.

The 24 - year - old Cincinnati golfer used 27 putts to shoot a seven-under-par 65, the second record-equalling score of the day. Beaconsfield courses in two days.

Brewer's hot round gave him a halfway total of 135, the same as Dick Mayer of St. Petersburg, Fla., who fired a 36 Friday for his 67 first round 67. Brewer shot a 70 the first day.

The pair were one stroke up on Don Fitzsimmons, of Redford Heights, Ohio, and amateur Doug Sanders, of Miami Beach, Fla., at 136.

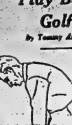
101 COMPETE TODAY

The starting field of 140 will cut Thursday's work down to 101 today as the third round got under way. Among the survivors, 37 reached the third round with sub-par scores of 142 or better for the first two rounds.

First-round leader Bo Wininger, of Odessa, Texas, had equalled or tutored the first 65 of the tournament Thursday — equalling the course record made 12 years ago —here to a par 72 in the second round. He carded a 77 today for a third-place tie with Mike Fetchik, of Mahopac, N.Y., both at 139.

Some of the best players of the first round blew sky high. But Doug Ford, from Mahopac, N.Y., turned in a 67. His 138 total, three strokes back of the leaders, put him in a contending position.

KAY BEST CANUCK



Beaconsfield pro Bill Kerr, who had led the Canadian representation after one round with a 68, climbed to a one-over-par 71 and surrendered Canadian honors to Jay Hebert of the Montreal Mount Bruno club.

Kay added a 68 to his 71 and tied Bill Casper, Bob Rosburg and Fred Hawkins at the top places with 139.

A steady stream and intermittent showers plagued the players Friday.

"Sit down" before addressing iron shots

As stated earlier, there's no basic difference between the wood club and iron club swings. Your stance with the irons is a bit more "sitting down," because the iron club shafts are shorter than those of the woods. Your hands, in addressing the irons, are a bit ahead of the ball and the ball is near the center of your stance. Something else to bear in mind is to have your weight at address stronger on your left foot. All this leads up to having the iron club follow a slightly more upright arc than the wider sweep of the longer-shafted wooden club. Play the iron shots from a square stance, and open the stance as distance shortens.

ITALIAN WINS

NEW YORK (AP)—Paoli Rosi of Rieti, Italy, closed with a rush against grubby Joey Lopes, dropping the favored Californian just one point in the final bell to gain a unanimous decision in a 10-round match at Madison Square Garden Friday night. After the bell sounded, Lopes had to be helped to his corner by his handlers. Lopes weighed 134 Rosi 133½.

Swimmer Taken From Lake After 12 Miles

YOUNGSTOWN, N.Y. (CP) — Lake Ontario claimed its second beaten status Friday night as Jim Woods succumbed to the cold and was hauled out of the calm, chilly waters after swimming only 12 miles of a 32-mile course from Toronto.

At 11:35 p.m. EDT, six hours and 40 minutes after diving in from a rowboat, the 40-year-old Asbville, N.C., veteran was pulled gasping from 58-degree water into a launch that accompanied him.

It was Woods' second attempt. Marilyn Bell of Toronto remains the lake's only conqueror.

Woods had the distinction of being the first of this year's victims of the marathon crans. Thirty miles out, he "near - shored" Nine Mile Point and quit.

A battle of Atlantic-born current carried him up the Niagara River, a counterpoint to the launch Anna III and two rowboats.

Woods then until 9 p.m. radio reports from the accompanying boats indicated that all was well.

Woods was swimming a strong, steady, 2½ strokes a minute, for the cold water, though cold, was dead calm. He passed through a school of jellyfish in the water.

GIVEN CEREAL

He was fed twice for nourishment—between the seven-and eight-mile marks—and was given "boiled chicken, egg and beef extract"—He headed for Youngstown after the 12th hour of cold.

Woods was no untried marathoner. He's a farmer, he trained in North Carolina and Florida and was a veteran of the 30-mile Biscayne Bay course in Miami.

First in what will probably be a long procession, was to be Canadian Marilyn Bell, 17, of Toronto, who announced he would make the attempt today.

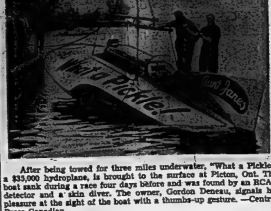
This afternoon Eastern Ontario league soccer action will be centred in the trial game to be played at Belleville. From it the game will be selected an All Star team to represent the Eastern Ontario League against the Toronto Senior League All Stars in Toronto next week. It is expected that their trial game and opportunity have selected a strong team, but the players won in the last encounter the Torontonians will be out to avenge the defeat in the return at Toronto's Greenwood Park.

Jack Graham, Toronto Senior League secretary, who is in Belleville this week-end informs us that the visitors and their supporters will be well looked after. An supper has been arranged for both teams after the game and all followed this there will be a dance.

Due to several of their players being away at the various army summer camps Picton Army pulled out leaving the Belleville players left to field a team until August when they have themselves had to default their last two league games but will be back in competition again when the knockout competitions start at the beginning of August for the Belleville Charity Cup and the Trenton Challenge Cup.

RCAF Station picked up two easy points from Batawa on Tuesday night. The RCAF team were ready for action on the field but no one turned up to play them. Tony Kukic of Batawa, called up later to say that he had made a mistake in the date and he thought the game was the following night.



Batawa led by edging Belleville Northern two goals to nothing last week. Belleville Northern had on top place which they now share with the RCAF Station. It would be that the last game in the league which is scheduled for Belleville between the Air Force teams meet could very easily determine which team will finish up as league champions.

Three games are scheduled for next week. Belleville Northern play 8 RD on Monday night on the Belleville sports field while on Wednesday evening Belleville Northern have an away game when RCAF Station provide the opposition. In the evening game also scheduled for Wednesday night Batawa and Trenton Rangers meet in the hometown. All games are called for 7 p.m. kick-off.

PASSPORT GRANTED

WASHINGTON (AP)—The state department Friday granted a limited passport to playwright Arthur Miller. It means he can take a European honeymoon with Actress Marilyn Monroe who became his bride last week.

SUBMARINE TOW SALVAGES BOAT

After being towed for three miles underwater, "What a Pickle," a $35,000 hydroplane, is brought to the surface at Picton, Ont. The boat sank during a race four days before and was found by an RCAF helicopter and a skin diver. The owner, Gordon Dewsnap, stands his pleasure at the sight of the boat with a thumbs-up gesture. —Central Press Canadian.

Head Triumphs Over Rosewall In All-England Tennis Final

WIMBLEDON, Eng. (CP) — Lew Hoad's singles victory over Ken Rosewall in the all-England tennis championships may be the start of a decade of Australian mastery in world tennis.

The two Aussies who fought it out on Wimbledon's centre court Friday are only 21 and unless one or both decide to turn professional they probably will be able to split the major tennis titles between them for years to come.

Hoad already has won the French and Australian singles crowns in addition to Wimbledon and needs only the United States singles title to match Donald Budge's unprecedented sweep in 1938. Rosewall was a finalist in both the Wimbledon and Australian tournaments but did not compete in Paris.

On the basis of the play seen here for the last two weeks there does not seem to be anyone around who can challenge them. The only one who has given either a tough match was Vic Seixas of the U.S., who took Rosewall to five sets in the semi-final. And he's almost 33.

FRENCH PARALLEL

The situation is similar to when Jean Borotra, René Lacoste and Henri Cochet of France split the Wimbledon singles among themselves from 1924 to 1929, the longest period one country has kept its grip on the title.

In addition, Rosewall and Hoad are an almost unbeatable doubles team. They won the Wimbledon doubles in 1953, were split up after that, and now have been reunited and play in the final today against the Italian pair of Nicola Pietrangeli and Orlando Sirola.

As long as Rosewall and Hoad are around in amateur ranks it looks pretty sure the Davis Cup will stay Down Under with the kookaburra bears and kangaroos. The only chance is if some young challenger suddenly pops up to confound the experts.

Even if one does come along and Hoad and Rosewall suddenly waver, Australia has a crop of kids who may be able to have off all comers. Ashley Cooper, Neale Fraser, Roy Emerson and Mal Anderson, all in their teens or very early 20s, are still improving.

A MILLION TO GO

NEW YORK (AP) — Nashua, who cost the Leslie Combs II syndicate $125,000, world record price of $1,251,200 last December, has now returned $213,300, on the investment.

The four-year-old colt, world's greatest money - winning horse, added $55,900 to his earnings by taking the Dixon Handicap July 4 at Belmont Park. This boosted his career total to $1,338,165. He needs $842,435 of that in 1954 and 1955 for the Belair Stud of late Willian Woodward, Jr.

Australia's Peter Thomson Wins 3rd British Open Title

HOYLAKE, Eng. (CP)—British golf writers view Peter Thomson as the greatest young golfer in the world. The 26-year-old Australian won the British Open title for the third straight time Friday.

Many of the experts think he will join the great names in the game, Bobby Jones and Australian who guided Thomson to golfing glory, thinks the young golfer can match the American Ben Hogan over Hoylake's gruelling 6,960 yards (6,365m).

"I would back Thomson for £1,000 ($2,800) against Hogan on his course," said von Nida.

Thomson's aggregation in winning the title was 70-70-72-74—286.

PREVIOUSLY WAS A SCOT

The last player to win the British Open three times in a row was a Scot, Sandy Herd, over Prestwick. But his victories in 1890, 1891 and 1902 were won when the event was decided on 36 holes. The championship was extended to 72 holes in 1892.

Overseas players took the first three and seven of the first nine places in the tournament which ended Friday. John Panton of Scotland was the first British player, six strokes behind Thomson and one ahead of the veteran Englishman, Henry Cotton.

Cotton, representative in the final round, Al Balding of Toronto, Eric Brown of Scotland and Peter Thomson.

Reporters asked: "What do you want to win most, Peter?"

Back came the reply: "The Irish Sweepstake."

PROTEST REJECTED

WASHINGTON (AP) — Communist Poland Friday protested against U.S. Air Force flights and expressed shock at the shooting of demonstrating workers in Poznan. But Soviet Bloc Amb. Ambassador Romuald Spasowski told reporters: "We consider it direct government interference in our foreign affairs."

Frankford Gains On Bobcats With 8-1 Victory

By GARRY ALEXANDER

Frankford crept to within percentage points of the Belleville Bobcats in their battle for second place last night by downing the Bobcats 8-1 at CNRAAA Park. Belleville has won seven and lost three in the B. and D. Softball League, while the second place Frankford has captured eight of 12.

The Frankford attack balanced Heam's boys with a pair of runs in the first inning and added two more in the fourth when a home run explosion in the sixth wrapped it up while the Cats came back for one in the seventh.

Southpaw Bobby Green stopped the Belleville boys cold, giving up just two singles over the nine-inning route. He left a dozen runners on base, the result of wildness. He walked ten and fanned five while Heam's batting strikes by ten, three in the sixth.

Jimmy Cornish opened the city nine and was charged with the loss in 5-3 innings he gave up all the runs Frankford got, fanning three and walking six. Murray Hamilton came to bat blank the Merchants over the remainder on two safeties and a walk with the bases passing none in a good relief job.

Frankford got one hit, a line single to right by Harry Wardaugh in the third frame in the seventh. Art Chilton, Frankford Gord Donovan slashed a solid single down the left field line and Bobcats' lone run and final hit.

Cosgrove's infield single and a pair of walks to Bobcats' Dufoe's single in the first, plating two markers in the second inning. Cosgrove was made a throwing error. Mike Cosgrove hit in position but Dufoe, who was first to take the throw, be retired on a force play and an RBI. Carr's fly made it 4-0.

A beautiful peg from centre by Bill Hamilton nipped Frankford rally in the fifth, nipping Wickson at the plate. Bobcats added to the sixth as Bob Green opened the inning with a single. Dufoe's infield hit and Cosgrove sacrificed while Ogden's error scored Green. Carr and Cosgrove had another infield hit, Carr drove in a run with an infield hit and Bob Green made it 8-0. Madden came on, striking out Hamilton and Sanders for dousing the fire.

Catcher Harry Wickson was the big gun for Frankford, slamming three...solid singles, while Cosgrove also had a trio of base knocks. Dufoe poked two singles with one each for Bill Rankin and Bob Green.

Line ups:

Frankford — Barclay, Arnsby, Cosgrove, Carr, Wickson, Rankin, Dafoe, Green, Stoliker, Johnson.

Bobcats — Culkin, Wardhaugh, Empey, Ogden, Heam, Hamilton, Sanders, Wolfe, Donovan, Batchelor, Madden.

Umpires — Williams and Carson.

Solmar Notes

Fish Where the Fish Are

By JOHN ALDEN KNIGHT
Noted Sportsman, Author and Creator of Solmar Tables.

During the course of a year, it is not surprising that anybody who is in the outdoors as much as I am sees, inescapably, a great deal of fishing. Fishermen I know are two characteristics which show up in the behavior of the duck and flie of the anglers on lake or stream — nearly all of them are abominable casters and about 90 per cent of them fish in the wrong places.

For example, consider the behavior of some of the boys when fishing one of the good pools of a large trout stream near my home. The rifles at the head of the pool throws the current against the left bank (left as you look downstream) and the water so steep and it drops off into fairly deep water which flows fast and inviting, over a jumble of large rocks.

The right bank is gently sloping and the wading is easy as far as mid-stream. Most of the anglers live between mid-stream and the left bank, but they are within casting distance of the fish lying on the right side. Yet day after day the pounding boys, these fishermen mostly, make their laborious way down that left bank, putting down the wary trout and spoiling the fishing for themselves and everybody else.

Another annoying trait of the fellows who don't know how is their refusal to learn is their fondness for high rocks. Always they must climb to the top of high rocks to do their fishing.

CURRENT FLOWS

Where the current flows, depth of water, produces cover and feeding places of the trout in that water — all of these things are ignored. They cast quickly from the rocks and there-they stand, contemptuous of a landscape in which where every trout in the vicinity can have a real good look at their beautiful casting. I'm sure, they don't catch much but they don't seem to mind — or to learn. Such a thing as fishing the water correctly — matter which can learn quickly from other anglers never seems to occur to them.

The same is true in bass water, be it lake or stream. Their boats may be equipped with an anchor and this is dropped into deep water. There they sit, hour after hour, waiting for a bite. To be sure they do catch fish now and then and that probably justifies their mislead, at least to them.

Deep water in a bass river or a bass lake holds little or no food. Thus, when a bass is hungry he must go where the food is — in the shallows. If you fish the shallows, day after day you catch them at a respectable distance so that you will not scare the fish — you will do better than if you confine your efforts to deep water. Yet I have had "old timers" call to me in pitying tones that I won't catch anything in that river water; it's only a couple feet deep.

Bass are warm-water fish, particularly in large-mouth bass. Their able-bodied citizens are perfectly happy in water of eighty degrees and upward. To be sure, small-mouth can live in such water if they have to, but their preference is water that is in the high sixties.

STUDY TERRAIN

In a small-mouth river, always it is a good plan to study the terrain through which the river flows so that you can find the probable spots where spring seepage finds its way into the river. A fold in the hills usually means the presence of a feeder stream. Even though no stream is in evidence, there is bound to be a certain amount of cold water seepage water which...will drain into the river, thus such a place and nearly always you will find bass.

Remember, also, that small-mouth like "live water" — that is, they like to live in the current, not in the slack water. Fish, which throws the current definitely against that shore, is the place to look for your best concentrations. Where the current is not so definite, usually the shore line is one long, still backwater and smallmouth do not like quiet water in a river.

In a lake, there is always a typical arrangement of warm-water layers. There is a warm-water layer at the surface. This is usually the deepest and, rarely more than a few feet thick. Then there is a cold water is in the cold lower layer, usually in the high forties or low fifties.

TWO LAYERS

Between these two layers lies a definite layer called the thermocline. At the top of this layer the temperature is the same as that of the upper warm-water layer; at the bottom it is the same as that of the lower layer. Rarely is this layer more than a few feet thick. Between yet its temperature scale ranges from the upper to the lower, in the middle forties.

A maximum and minimum reading thermometer will tell you, very quickly, where the 67 degree level happens to be in this thermocline. Knowing this, find a rocky shoreline or bar which is sloping the deep water, nine line out of ten, you will find your bass.

As this is written, I know perfectly well that many who read will not be equipped with an anchor and anchored boat. In addition, water. These days, when water temperatures is too expensive and too much trouble, I'm afraid that is the case. After all, with the number of fishermen on our lakes and streams, there aren't enough fish to go around anyway.

Hutton Buttons Pat O'Connor But Bout Ends in Stalemate

By GEO. E. CARVER
Sports Editor

That 1,000-block bill is still going strong in the balmy town of Dick Hutton.

Pat O'Connor, British Empire welter king, has knocked down, out, or whatever's physiog adorns the "ground" (how many times, he knows!) nearly a dozen times on a couple of occasions.

But that won't do O'Connor in fact can count himself lucky the bout ended in a spill-fall stalemate.

For Hutton, after wrestling "classic" style, almost, reverted to the "villain" type and gave Mr. O'Connor the well-known works on the B.E. champ failed to show much that resembled classic wrestling.

Hutton won the first fall in 32 minutes and 30 seconds with a secret. In fact the New Zealand Irisher won a third flop but it didn't count.

It seems O'Connor after a flying leap landed astraddle a prone form which he promptly spread-eagled.

But the victory three-count never came. When Pathrick opened his eyes he discovered he was sticking himself to sleep aboard the rotund figure of one Referee Bert Maxwell.

However no harm was done. The pair smiled, shook hands, and made a date for the next Ring gossip.

O'Connor had the thousand-dollar plaster in his grasp midway through the first fall. He flattened Hutton and pinned him for several two-counts but could not hold him for the "grand" three.

It was crowd-pleasing wrestling for ten minutes in the first fall, then Hutton decided to toss away his Scout badges. He sank a fist wrist-deep in the O'Connor middriff and that was it. Except for sporadic "fury" outbursts by O'Connor, Hutton had the upper hand in an Alphonse-Gaston bout.

Even-Stephen going into the third fall. O'Connor put on his best effort of the evening. Both were wobbly on their feet after exchanges of punishment and at one time both appeared to be "out".

In the latter minutes O'Connor had the upper hand and again he nearly had the referee in the cosgrace to party Maxwell.

He leaped on the corner ropes with Hutton underneath him. He poised a powerful fist but pulled the punch in time. The looking up at him with a "please mister" smile was what who had been caught in the traffic jam. The song ended the calisthenics.

The Brunetti Brothers, popular Italian champions added another victory to their tag-team string, defeating Jan Gotch and Mark Lewin in one of the best action-packed foursomes seen here this season.

Lewin infuriated Billy Stack pounded and pummelled Roberto Rico, a lively Mexican, in one of the longest bouts in the ring. It means he can take a European honeymoon with Actress Marilyn Monroe who became his bride last week.

Leafs Hottest Team in League Take Over Second

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Toronto Maple Leafs are the hottest team in the International League. Their eight-game winning streak has carried them into second place.

Leafs, who have won 14 of their last 17 games, Friday night beat the Royals here 4-3 and 5-1 and 4-1. The first game was a completion of a scheduled 9-inning game, and in the second contest, Leafs notched a seven-hitter for their 13th win of the season.

Rochester Red Wings lost at home for the fifth straight time, as the tail-end Buffalo Bisons posted a 5-3 decision on them, dropping the Wings into third place by two percentage points.

At Columbus, Miami Marlins exploded for 11 hits and routed Jersey Jets, against four Jet hurlers to take the first of a four-game set, 15-1.

The doubleheader between Havana and Richmond at the Virginians' home ground was postponed because of rain.

MORTON HITTING STAR

After the Royals had grabbed a one-run lead in the second, Toronto rightfielder Lew Morton exploded his first of two home runs into the left field stands. His second blast with one aboard iced the game in the fourth.

Lefty Roger Bowman gave up three two-run runs to the Red Wings over the first eight frames, but gained the win for the Buffalo nine as Rochester could score but one run off Bowman.

Next week, Belleville Northern play 8 RD on Monday night on the Belleville sports field whilst on Wednesday evening Belleville Northern have an away game when RCAF Station provide the opposition. In the evening game also scheduled for Wednesday night Batawa and Trenton Rangers meet in the hometown. All games are called for 7 p.m. kick-off.

Spectacular Series Is Being Launched for Viewing in Fall

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

The guys attempting slams galore have surely learned to take it. To bid one's not the only chore. The next thing is to make it.

When slams are running thick and fast, the boys at the corner table have a field day. Anything that looks like a slam gets a good workout. As in the deal you see here:

NORTH
♥ Q J 4 3
♦ K Q 6 4 3
♣ A K

WEST	EAST
♠ 10 8 6	♠ J 9 7 3
♥ 10 9	♥ 8 6 5
♦ A	♦ J 10 8 5
♣ Q J 10 8 4	♣ 9 3

SOUTH
♠ A K Q 5 4
♥ A K 7
♦ 9 7 2

South was not excited with what he held until he heard north shove him into six no-trump. The opening lead from west was a club and south had vicious of needing a couple more tricks.

Dummy had to take the first trick. South was entered with a heart to the king. A diamond from south looked good when it was hopped on at once with the west diamond ace.

Return of a club took the final stopper in that suit from the declarer. His hopes now rested on the diamond break. So, a second heart went to south's ace and a diamond was led.

When west showed out, east was forced to have a stopper in that suit. But the declarer hoped that east also had four or more diamonds. Because he did, east could be squeezed.

Therefore, the second diamond trick was won with diamond queen and one of the top dummy hearts was cashed. On this east shuffled his small club in order to protect spades and diamonds.

This left east with four spades and two diamonds. Dummy had a good heart, two spades, and a king with two diamonds. South held four spades, a small diamond, and a small club.

Right now dummy led his fourth heart on which the south hand shifted his third club. Meantime, however, east was squeezed. He must give up a spade or a diamond.

Not often does a squeeze work so early in the proceedings, it probably because the west was not looking for it so soon.

NIP DYNAMITE PLOT

GUATEMALA (AP) — Military police announced Friday a patrol had seized a group of men suspected of planting dynamite in a railroad tunnel on the line from the capital to Puerto Barrios, the banana port.

AT THE McCARTHY — Lex Barker and Patricia Medina, co-stars of Columbia Pictures' "Duel on the Mississippi," in color by Technicolor at the McCarthy Theatre Monday, watch Jan Keith count the night's receipts of a gambling ship. "Monte Carlo Baby", featuring Audrey Hepburn is the added feature.

Former 'Mr. Peepers' Is Readying New TV Series

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Can you imagine Wally Cox as a bullfighter?

No, I couldn't either. But there he was, the shy little man with spectacles, learning to fling a cape around and stand commandingly before the bull. This was taking place at the Vincent Gomez School of Spanish Culture. His teacher was Lulu Mc-Mannis, a Mexican-born matador who instructs movie stars in the art of the bull ring.

"You must stand like this, with your feet together, your stomach out and your head down," he told Cox in the dirt arena behind the school. "You do not say, 'please come here, Mr. Bull.'"

"Your attitude is always defiant. You say, 'Hey, toro, come here.'"

Fortunately for NBC, there was no real bull present to endanger the networks star. The beast was simulated by McManus, who held on a pair of horns and steered past Cox as the latter swung his cape defiantly.

FOR TV SERIES

All this was not without a purpose. Cox, you see, is taking a second fling at a TV series. His Mister Peepers expired after a few seasons. Now he's coming back with "The Adventures of Hiram Holliday."

After completing his bullfight lesson, Cox explained what the series is all about. He plays a proofreader on a New York newspaper who spies a comma error and saves the publisher a million dollar libel suit. The boss rewards him with a round - the - world trip and sends a reporter along to record his experiences.

And such experiences Holliday turns out to be a fellow who can do everything well, despite his meek appearance. And so he proves himself a champion skier, skindiver, bobsleder, ball fighter, etc.

"We plan to film the series in various places — Mexico, Europe and all over," Cox said. The series is based on Paul Gallico magazine stories and will appear on TV this fall.

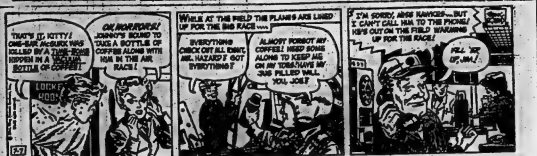
Stuffy Mueller Dies At 50

TORONTO (CP) — Norbert E. (Stuffy) Mueller, 50, one of Canada's outstanding amateur hockey goaltenders in his youth died of a heart attack Friday.

Mr. Mueller, an insurance underwriter, was born at Waterloo. He learned to skate and play hockey during his public school days, specializing as a goalie.



He played with Waterloo Juniors and later with St. Andrews College and University of Toronto teams. In 1928 he was a member of the Varsity Grads squad which won the Olympic title.

Shortly afterwards, he joined a Toronto team called the National Sea Flies, helped the Fleas win the Allan Cup, and was presented with a trophy as the most valuable player in the club. That triumph climaxed his career as a hockey star and he retired.

Mr. Mueller maintained a lively interest in hockey, golf and curling until his death. Surviving are his widow and two children.

Your Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

You in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

For Monday, July 9, 1956

March 21 to April 20 (Aries) — High hopes fill the air, with several major planets in fine aspects. An auspicious time for making strides in your work, gaining new clients, customers, making improvements.

April 21 to May 21 (Taurus) — The sort of day one would wish for to start the new week. Impetus, push are in the air and you must be on the alert and eager to take advantage of offerings.

May 22 to June 21 (Gemini) — A fine period for inspiration and enablism. Keep your silliness fleeting, mental alertness, skill (your attributes) favored.

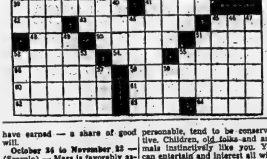
June 22 to July 22 (Cancer) — No time for trifles this "big" day. Heed propositions, difficult discussions, meetings, estimates, etc., among day's many sponsored issues. Sports, good entertainment honored. Try!

July 24 to August 23 (Leo) — A "small" day for making honest money at trade, business, through sound investment, education. A responsive period in which to seek advancement, grant favors to those who earn them.

August 24 to September 23 — (Virgo) — Through your natural artistry, finesse and knowledge of interesting subjects, you can make this day a challenge to enjoy a real success. Variations favor pleasant relaxation, too.

September 24 to October 23 — (Libra) — No need to follow "hunches." Obvious opportunities have earned — a share of good will.

October 24 to November 22 — (Scorpio) — Mars is favorably aspected and this can spell quick action of a valuable nature, surer returns for intelligent plans and management. Without straining, move ahead smoothly.



November 23 to December 21 — (Sagittarius) — You should wear a big smile and have confidence in achieving what you set out to do. Difficult matters equally favored with luxury and delicate affairs. Fine aspects all day.

December 22 to January 20 — (Capricorn) — No "clouds" in your sky either. And there is plenty of activity to fill all and to keep all honorably, usefully occupied. Make some time for fun in leisure hours.

January 21 to February 19 — (Aquarius) — Now you can follow advice to Sagittarius today. It's mostly up to you and your acceptance of day's obligations, cheerfully and willingly, of course.

February 20 to March 20 — (Pisces — Mild rays in the early hours will become more stimulating as the day goes on; evening and tomorrow are tops. Don't overdo, but plan and prepare wisely for more action tomorrow.

Answer To Previous Puzzle

personable, tend to be conservative. Children, old folks and animals instinctively like you. You can entertain and interest all with your gift for intriguing story-telling, and perhaps singing, dancing. By all means, develop and use well these grand God-given gifts. And, overcome any tendency to jealousy, fretting, "moods." You can attain a high mark in your profession or occupation, especially if you don't permit a love for change to override common sense.

10 KICKED OFF
VIENNA, Austria (Reuters)—Six swimmers and four fencers have been expelled from the Polish Olympic team for disciplinary reasons, the Polish Communist newspaper Trybuna Ludu reported in an issue reaching here.

Peas Too Large For Peashooters, Major Annoyed

LONDON (AP) — Peashooters have touched off a row between British sergeants and their peashooter makers.

The sergeants are British peashooters getting too small to shoot peas, or are peas getting too large to be shot in peashooters?

To John Christian, 5, this is an important matter. When he recently reported to his father, Maj. John Hayes of the war effects, that only about one dried pea in 20 would pass through his new shooter, the major issued an indignant statement to the press, saying in part:

"In my youth peas fitted peashooters perfectly. Have peas grown larger or pea shooters smaller nowadays?

"Whatever it is, it shows a shocking lack of industrial co-ordination. We are losing our export markets and it is a scandal if peashooters are offered for sale which are too small to shoot peas."

Brewing Firm To Finance Swim Says Telegram

TORONTO (CP) — The Telegram says that a hitherto unidentified Lake Ontario swim sponsor is a brewery.

Reading Breweries, Ltd., says the Toronto daily newspaper, is offering $20,000 to the winner of a cross-lake marathon which is still in the early stages of organization.

"It is understood that the firm, through the Hayhurst advertising agency, today will outline its offer to the Canadian National Exhibition and ask for co-operation in staging the race during the big fair, with an Ex waterfront fiesta".

If the CNE declines co-operation the firm would try forming an association—to be called the Lake Ontario Marathon Swimmers' Association—to organize a mass race.

CNE President William A. Harris was quoted: "If a definite proposition is made to us, it will go before the CNE board of directors. I do not wish to give an opinion before that."

The Telegram says: "A battle looms over whether water and beer should mix.

"It is known that the directors are divided over whether the CNE should link itself with a brewery-sponsored event."

Controller William Allen of Toronto, a CNE director, is reported by The Telegram as saying:

"I feel the CNE must avoid any position which would involve it in any public controversy. As a result I would oppose the CNE associating itself with a project financed this way."

Millard Named World Director Of Free Unions

TORONTO (CP) — Charles H. Millard, Canadian director of the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions, it was announced Friday.

It is the first such appointment in labor history.

Announcement of his appointment was made by Murray Colorill, public relations director of the steelworkers.

J. H. Oldenbrook, general secretary of the ICFTU, had called that Mr. Millard's appointment was unanimous.

Lamprey Control Program May Take 8 Years

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — The Michigan conservation department said Friday new evidence indicates that electrical fish weirs used in the lamprey control in the Great Lakes program may have to remain in place eight years to be effective.

The information joined hopes that control could be achieved in half that time.

Lampreys stay in the Great Lakes as fish-killing adults at least one year, then migrate up inland streams and lay their eggs in gravel beds. The eggs ratch, and the young spend their larval stage in mudbanks.

Formerly, it was thought this larval stage lasted four years before the young moved downstream.

However, research by the U.S. fish and wildlife service and the department's institute for fisheries research has shown the larval stage is "at least seven to eight years and possibly longer," the conservation department said.

Fisheries workers said the outlook is discouraging.

An alternative method of control, use of recently discovered chemicals, appears too expensive to consider seriously at this time.

Three Convicts Back in Custody

MONTREAL (CP)—Three convicts were in provincial police cells here Friday a week after their daylight escape from the federal penitentiary at nearby St. Vincent-de-Paul.

The last of the convicts, Gaston Martel, 25, was captured in Montreal early Friday about 12 hours after one fellow prisoner, Fernand Dube, 28, and Gilles Hamel, 22—had been nabbed near Quebec City.

Dube, described as the ringleader, was serving a five-year term for assault, theft and other offences. Hamel was serving 18 years for armed robbery while Hamel was serving a five-year sentence for breaking and entering and theft.

Prior to their escape, the convicts had replaced the nuts and bolts on the prison gate lock with plastic ones, dusted with graphite to make them look genuine. They made the break during a blood donors clinic.

A Lift for Living

To Live Your Whole Life

We all want to live our whole lives. We do not want to make anything if we can help it. Hence we would all say "yes" to the quaint old question, "Will they be made whole?" As we know, it is the question posed by the Great Physician to the sick man at the pool of Bethesda. While the language sounds obsolete, the situation is very modern indeed. This invalid desired to be made well, and health is what we all crave. He thought he could be cured if he only had someone to help him to the pool at those times when it bubbled, for at such moments its watery wave supposed to have healing powers.

The man not only wanted health, as we do, but like many of us he thought his condition would be bettered if only somebody else was with him. But as he was always a step away by those more active who went in ahead of him, he felt sorry for himself. Thus this man, whose infirmity had been in him for thirty-eight years, waited, wanting to be made well, pitying himself and blaming others for not making him better — all of which seems pretty modern, does it not?

MORE THAN HEALTH

As for the old-fashioned language of the question, "Will thou be made whole?" it is translated in up-to-date terms by some modern versions of the New Testament. The Revised Standard Version of the Bible puts it like this: "Do you want to be healed?" But we know that to the Nazarene Physician, health meant more than mere soundness of body. It meant the well-being of the whole nature, body, mind and spirit.

I know a fellow who is about the most pitiful physical spectacle one could imagine. He has no aches or pains. He has no infirmity. He eats what he wants, does what he likes, but he is narrow in his prejudices, provincial in his outlook, smug in his whole attitude. He is merely contained in too small a container! What he needs is to be stirred out of his self-satisfaction. He needs to have his outlook enlarged and his mind stretched. To be made whole is to be restored to the norm or standard which was in the mind of theses us.

Creator when He gave us life.

If I were to ask, "Will thou be made normal?", most of us would hardly deign to answer. We regard ourselves as normal. We would scorn the idea that we are abnormal or subnormal. We usually determine normality by taking a composite of the traits observed in the persons around us and if we measure up to the average, then we consider ourselves normal. But what is the norm of wholeness to which the Great Physician would have us measure up?

NORMALCY'S CREDENTIALS

The late Dr. Karl Stolz once listed the marks of a normal person as follows:

1) He is engaged in a socially useful occupation.

2) He is wholesomely related to other persons.

3) He is honest and capable enough to examine and improve himself.

4) He has a sympathetic understanding of the needs of others.

5) He cultivates a tension-reducing sense of humor.

6) He has a sound philosophy.

Let us take one of these tests of normality. First, are we honest and capable enough to examine ourselves? Can we look at ourselves without excusing or pretending? Can we laugh at ourselves, puncturing our foibles and pet ways of thinking? Can we condemn ourselves in the sense of not excusing or hiding ourselves to the penalty, or do we parole ourselves in our own custody and then, when we while forget the guilt?

It is not easy to keep honest and capable enough to examine ourselves. Some days we are not ourselves. Yesterday, when I flew off the handle in anger, I was not myself. You see, we human beings need not only be told to be true to ourselves — we need to be shown what our true self is. That is why we do need Him whom the Epistle of John calls our "Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ, the righteous." He stands at the bar of judgment like a good lawyer pleading the strong points of our case but also putting His finger on the weak points. His righteousness shows up the shoddiness of our so-called respectability. He does not let us off in the lax custody of our own conscience but sets our sins in the light of a Heavenly Father's love, until we see ourselves not merely as others see us but as God sees us.

Stirling

STIRLING — The property owners of the village had the opportunity to cast their opinion on "sewerage", Tuesday, thirty-nine per cent used the ballot. The two questions were something in this style: "Do you favor sewerage and wish the work to proceed, by having a full survey made and complete plans drawn in order that an exact cost may be determined and every detail of a proposed system shown?," and 144 cast a "yes" vote.

Second: "If you do not favor sewerage, and do not wish council to proceed any further in obtaining plans for a sewer system". 116 registered a "No" vote.

Republicans Prefer Ike to Inferno's Nudes

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—A plaster of three rugged but dispirited bronze male nudes has been kicked off the cover of the official program for the Republican national convention.

In their place will be a portrait of President Eisenhower. This was announced Thursday night by Mayor George Christopher and Edmund O'Brien, executive director of the Republican arrangements committee, after a day in which Christopher's criticism of the photograph of sculptor Augustus Rodin's statue of the three nudes brought out:

1. That Rodin created the statue, now at the Palace of the Legion of Honor here, for a Paris museum to illustrate a passage from Dante's Inferno.

2. That he called it "les trois hombres," part of a group entitled "abandon hope, all ye who enter here."

3. That the three unclothed male figures, rugged in the Rodin manner of the sculptor but distorted with heads bowed sideways, were meant to represent "three shades at the gate of Hell."

"I don't think it's a very healthful picture for the Republican party," said Mayor Christopher. "I wouldn't have chosen it myself."

Famous Trichologist Will Demonstrate How to Grow Thicker Hair . . . and Guarantees It!

Demonstration to Be Held Here

This new method of home treatment for saving and growing thicker hair will be demonstrated in Belleville, Ontario, Sunday only, July 8.

These private demonstrations will be held at the New Queens Hotel on Sunday only, July 8, 12 noon to 9 p.m.

LONDON, ONTARIO — In an interview here today William Keele, internationally famous trichologist, and director of the Keele Hair Experts said: "There are 18 different scalp disorders that cause most men and women to lose hair. Using common sense, a person must realize no one tonic or treatment will cure all could correct all the disorders," he explained.

"GUARANTEED

"The Keele firm, recognizing that most people are skeptical of claims that can be grown on balding heads, defer a guarantee," Keele said.

Once a person avails themselves to the Keele treatment his skepticism immediately disappears. To insure this we offer this guarantee. "If you are not completely satisfied with your hair progress at the end of 30 days your money will be returned."

HOPELESS CASES DISCOURAGED

First the trichologist is quick to tell hopeless cases that they cannot be helped. But the "hopeless" cases are few. Only if a man is completely, shiny bald is he in this lost category.

If there is fuzz, no matter how light, thin, or colorless, the Keele treatment can perform wonders.

A complete, private examination is given by a trichologist to determine the condition of his scalp, and cause for his hair problem. Free examinations. This examination is very thorough and highly technical, it requires 20 to 30 minutes. The trichologist makes no charge for this examination and no appointment is necessary. After the examination the person is told the required length of treatment and how much it will cost.

After the examination, the person makes regular reports to the Keele firm in London to check the progress of the home treatment.

To spread the opportunity of normal healthy hair to the thousands who are desperately looking for help, independent trichologists are visiting various cities throughout Canada to conduct examinations and start home treatments.

NO CURE-ALL

"We have no cure-all for slick, shiny baldness," Keele emphasizes. "If there is fuzz, the root is still capable of creating hair and we can perform what seems to be a miracle."

There is one thing Keele knows for certain every man and woman knows. If a recession appears at the temples or a part begins to show up on the crown of the head, there is something wrong and it should be given immediate attention.

HAIR FOR LIFETIME

"If clients follow our directions during the treatment and after they finish the course, there is no reason why they should not have hair all the rest of their lives," Keele said. "Our firm is definitely behind this treatment, it all depends on the individual client's faithful observation of a few simple rules."

HOW'S YOUR HAIR

If it worries you, call Trichologist Raymond Lemmons at the New Queen's Hotel in Belleville, Ontario on Sunday only, July 8, 12 noon to 9 p.m. The public is invited. You do not need an appointment. The examinations are private and you will not be embarrassed or obligated in any way.

Mother of Kidnapped Boy May Have Seen Abductor

WESTBURY, N.Y. (AP) — The mother of kidnapped Peter Weinberger is reported to have left her home Sunday evening and returned about 3:30 a.m. today, but police said they knew nothing of her absence or a possible rendezvous with the kidnapper.

A reporter watching the home from which the five-week-old boy was taken last Wednesday said he saw the mother leave the house and return.

Meanwhile, three men were arrested in New York City after police traced telephone calls made from two taverns in the Westbury area to the home. They were questioned for three hours early today and then taken to an unannounced destination.

Police also disclosed that the baby's mother made a fruitless attempt to meet the kidnapper last Friday.

They said she took $5,000 and tried in vain to keep a rendezvous with the kidnapper. The kidnapper did not turn up.

Meanwhile, the distraught mother made another pitch Sunday for the return of her five-week-old son.

Peter was snatched from his carriage in the patio of the Weinberger's handsome ranch-style home last Wednesday afternoon. The kidnapper left a note, demanding $2,000 ransom. Police telephoned the home twice on Friday and boosted the demand to $5,000.

Tuesday will be show clearing with a continuation of the cooler weather.

Longshoreman Saves Girl From Drowning

MONTREAL (CP)—A 43-year-old longshoreman whose swimming ability is restricted to "dog paddle" plunged into the St. Lawrence River Sunday and rescued a 10-year-old girl who fell from Victoria Pier.

"Any man with kids would have done the same," George Dunn of Beaconsfield told reporters shortly after he had saved young Jeannette Eile of Montreal from drowning.

Dunn said he was at work loading a vessel when he heard screams about 100 yards away. He ran to investigate and saw the girl floundering in the water.

He slipped into the water and after two attempts managed to drag Jeannette to the surface. A boat was towed by Dunn's fellow workers and the pair was hauled out.

Kingston Pilot Lands on Oshawa Road; Allan Seeks to Prevent Repetition

OSHAWA (CP)—Highways Minister Allan of Ontario said today he is checking with the attorney-general's office to see what can be done to prevent airplanes taking off from highways.

A small plane, flown by Bernie Ward-Hervoe, 35, of Kingston, landed Sunday on Highway 401 near here when it ran short of fuel. It took off again after mechanic Allan Mathers, 24, of Bowmanville got some aviation gasoline.

Police stopped traffic on the busy, divided highway for 15 minutes to let the plane take off.

Mr. Allan said there are no known laws to take care of planes landing on highways. Rules have been made to prevent airplanes taking off from highways.

Like a similar incident on the Queen Elizabeth Way two weeks ago Deputy Highways Minister Elson said in Mr. Allan's absence that provincial police would be asked to see that there are no more takeoffs from highways. Planes using highways for emergency landings would have to be towed away by trailer.

VICIOUS STORM SWEEPS ONTARIO WOMAN KILLED

11 Barns Flattened By Wind, Lightning

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The second vicious storm in a week lashed southwestern Ontario today, killing one woman and causing thousands of dollars damage. At least 11 barns were flattened.

A series of thunderstorms which petered out as they moved in a northeasterly direction, knocked down hydro wires, blew over barns, toppled trees and caused scores of traffic accidents. It was, however, less severe than the storms that struck much of the province Friday and Saturday holiday.

Lightning killed a 53-year-old woman taking part in an archery tournament at Byron, near London. Mrs. Zemlina Tessman of Simcoe was struck as she stood beneath a tree. She was among the archery range.

The weather office in Toronto said the storms would be replaced by cooler air over most of Southern Ontario.

REPORT TORNADO

Some residents near Listowel reported seeing a black funnel move over the area. They said it looked like a tornado. But weather officials, however, doubted it.

Farms near the Bruce County town of Paisley were hit hard.

Eleven barns were wrecked, several others severely damaged and hydro and telephone services were disrupted. Buildings of the Paisley Brick and Tile Company were virtually destroyed. Loss was estimated at $30,000.

A large frame barn at Dublin, 30 miles north of London, was smashed. Farm implements, including a manure spreader, were extensively damaged while farm house chimneys fell like children's blocks.

Mount Hyndes with a log in his Middlesex County was without hydro for a few hours when a car crashed into a hydro pole during the storm and knocked down a transformer.

FLASH, CRASH-LANDS

Aircraft pilots aloft had a bumpy time. A Canadian Wayfarer pilot crashed in landing his Harvard trainer at Mount Hope airport near Hamilton.

A gust of wind caught the small plane as it touched down. The aircraft grounded-looped but the pilot, Barry Craig, 22, of Toronto, escaped injury. The private plane landed on the 401 highway near Oshawa, was rushed and then took off again as traffic was stopped to clear the way.

6 Planes Reach Finish Line At Flint, Mich.

FLINT, Mich. (AP)—Refreshed by an overnight rest, scores of women pilots headed for Flint today in the 10th annual Powder Puff Derby.

The pilots carrying 11 women aviators reached the finish line at Flint city airport before dark Saturday in the 1,200-mile cross-country event won't be announced until Wednesday.

Pilots of the other 43 planes, which left San Carlos, Calif., Saturday afternoon for the 2,396-mile flight, landed safely at flying fields in four states. Race rules forbid flying after dark.

The women pilots, most of them veteran fliers with commercial licences, are racing for a $2,500 prize. It is divided among the first five places.

Refugee Reports Czech Reds Plan Revolt Against Regime

LONDON (AP)—Czech Communists recently hunted President Antonin Zapotocky at a public meeting in Prague and demanded the life his cabinet and many of their Stalinist connections, a refugee Czech symphony conductor was quoted as saying today.

The report came from Vojtech Vycel, former conductor of the new Prague National Theatre Opera, in an interview with the London Daily Mail.

Vogel recently fled to Britain with his English-born wife and family while on a musical tour of East Berlin.

The musician claimed officials within the Czech hierarchy are organizing a revolt against the leaders. He also reported riots similar to those in Poland's Poznan are brewing in Czechoslovakia. He said Czech workers are seething over low wages and poor working conditions.

Vogel said leading Communists in their speeches at the meeting left Zapotocky "in no doubt that they want a clean sweep of all Stalinist men in power in Czechoslovakia."

Windsor Girl Annoys Wife Of 'Miss Canada' Contest Head

TORONTO (CP) — The Star says Windsor's Linda Hagen, 24, was unofficially disqualified during last weekend's Miss Canada beauty pageant for a quote attributed to her in a newspaper article.

Tom Farmer of the Hamilton Spectator, one of the judges, said today that Miss Hagen was judged on the same basis as the other girls. If she had been disqualified on the judges weren't told of it.

Dorothy Moreau, a 25-year-old redhead from Miss Canada, named Miss Canada Saturday after two days of judging based on tape-measure and talent. Twenty-six girls competed.

Miss Hagen, a native of Vienna, Austria, said in an article for the Toronto Star: "Canadian women are inferior to European women when it comes to intelligence."

The newspaper says Miss Hagen was told by Mrs. S. Radcliffe Weaver, wife of the Hamilton hairdresser who runs the show: "These remarks are ridiculous and irresponsible. I'm telling you right now you can't win. You're disqualified."

Mr. Weaver is quoted as telling reporters Saturday that disqualification could be ruled only by the directors.

Mrs. Weaver is quoted as replying: "She was disqualified because I told her she was disqualified and she needn't bother going on the stage."

Miss Hagen, however, did go on the stage.

The Star says that after the contest angry exchanges broke out at a reception in the Royal York Hotel ballroom when newspaper reporters found Miss Hagen alone in a corner crying. An argument developed between them and Evelyn Webster, a pageant official.

"This girl can't even do anything to strange men," Miss Webster said. "She is still under our jurisdiction."

Toronto tenor Jimmy Shields, president of the pageant, said reporters had treated the 1956 contest "shabbily." They somebody called reporters "a bunch of punks" and a scuffle broke out.

While it was taking place Miss Hagen was hustled into an elevator and confined to her room.

SNAP ELECTION NOT CONSIDERED SAYS ST. LAURENT

Denies Conjecture Of Ottawa Groups

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister St. Laurent said Saturday there is "no chance" of the government calling a snap election.

He was commenting following a cabinet meeting on a Toronto report stating that speculation is spreading in the capital that the government is considering dissolving Parliament and calling an election.

The Toronto report said Trade Minister Howe conferred Thursday with Governor-General Massey in his capacity of acting prime minister. The report said it is the governor-general's prerogative to dissolve Parliament at the request of the government.

Asked if the government is considering a snap election, Mr. St. Laurent said:

"I can deny that positively."

PARLIAMENT RECALLED

An official in the prime minister's office said Mr. Howe's meeting with Mr. Massey preceded the governor-general's departure on a trip to Western Canada. He said it is normal for the prime minister or acting prime minister to see the governor-general on such occasions.

Mr. St. Laurent said there is no change in his position on a general election. He said the statement he made in the House of Commons during the controversial pipeline debate still stands.

At that time Mr. St. Laurent said an election would be called in "due course."

NO DECISION

Mr. St. Laurent also said Saturday he had not reached no immediate decision on the acceptance of the resignation of Commons Speaker Rene Beaudoin.

"I will mull it over and decide later," he told reporters, after the two-hour meeting held shortly after his return from the Commonwealth prime ministers' conference in London.

Mr. St. Laurent, who had been absent for two weeks, said the speakership problem was discussed at the cabinet session and he was brought up to date on developments.

Rene Jutras, Liberal member of Portneuf, has launched a drive for the speakership of Provencher, has been nominated by Conservatives to succeed Mr. Beaudoin if the Speaker's resignation is accepted.

Forty Killed By Earthquakes In Aegean Islands

Tidal Waves Also Strike Isle of Crete Three Times

ATHENS (AP) — Earthquakes and repeated tidal waves struck the Aegean Islands off southern Greece today. At least 40 persons were reported killed.

The brunt of the quakes was felt by the island of Thera (santorini), where 30 persons were reported dead, and Ios, where at least 10 were said to have perished.

Local police said an unknown number of victims still lay beneath the debris on Ios, due north of Thera.

Tidal waves struck the island of Crete three times in less than half an hour. Huge waves also hit Santorini and Kalimnos in the Dodecanese, and the islands of Astilpalia, Paros, Amorgos and Ikaria.

The police chief on the Aegean island of Syros telephoned that the quakes which shook Athens—were accompanied by an eruption of the volcano on Thera 125 miles southeast of the Greek capital.

ROUSES COLLAPSE

The government announced that most of the houses on Thera had collapsed and the rest were unin habitable. The island has a population of nearly 10,000.

About 20 per cent of the houses on Amorgos were reported damaged and four property losses were listed on other islands. Coastal residents in Kalimnos, Leros moved to the interior after a 13-foot wave swept the harbor at Pothia.

The earth of water smashed 200 feet inland on Kalimnos, wrecking shops and houses. Several ships were sunk in the harbor.

More damage was reported on the Dodecanese islands of Lerna, Latmos and Nisyros, bringing to 11 the number of islands known to have suffered.

In Leros, the tidal wave destroyed a power station, flooded fields and wrecked shipping. At Patmos, a tidal wave damaged the historic monastery where St. John wrote the Revelations—the last book in the New Testament.

A United States Air Force plane left Athens this morning for Santorini with American relief experts aboard. The British Embassy here said that the help of Britain's navy for the stricken islands.

The government rushed relief and supplies by air to stricken islands. Rescue parties with tents and medical supplies were sped to the scene by navy ships. Army planes and helicopters made repeated surveys flights over the area.

Undersecretary of Welfare John Pesmazoglou flew by party to Thera, which was reported blanketed by a cloud of smoke and dust.

ATHENIANS FLEE

The tremors were first felt in Athens at about 5:15 a.m. (11:15 p.m. EDT Sunday). The initial shocks in the capital were slight, but heavier ones which came about an hour later sent thousands running outdoors.

Today's quake appeared to be the most since August, 1953, when a series of major quakes killed more than 500 persons in Greece's west coast. Those earth shocks killed an estimated 1,000 persons and left 130,000 homeless.

Present Leadership of Soviet Union Will Not Last Says Trotsky's Widow

NEW YORK (AP)—Leon Trotsky's widow said in a statement Sunday that it's unlikely the present Soviet leadership will last long.

It was Mrs. Trotsky's first comment on the Soviet Union's campaign to downgrade her husband's bitter enemy, Joseph Stalin. Mrs. Trotsky was a close collaborator of her husband, who was one of the important leaders of the Bolshevik revolution.

Trotsky led the opposition to Stalin until he was assassinated in Mexico in 1940.

Mrs. Trotsky said the downgrading of Stalin is an effort by the present Soviet leaders to "distract from themselves the powerful wave of dissatisfaction and hatred for the thieves of the victories of the proletarian revolution."

Mrs. Trotsky condemned Nikita Khrushchev and his associates as "nonentities" who "supported Stalin in all his bloody misdeeds."

Layoffs Continue To Climb Due To U.S. Strike

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Federal conciliators may meet some light today or Tuesday on government plans aimed at ending the coun try-wide strike of 650,000 steelworkers, now in its ninth day.

Spokesmen for talks in Pittsburgh last week with steel negotiators convinced the government it would have to take the initiative in scheduling further peace meetings, the mediators said.

Meantime, business in the United State is slidin off and layoffs continue to climb. Steel magazine figures the U.S. economy has $230,000,000 last week because of the strike. Some 50,000 persons already have been laid off in industries dependent on steel and the effects of the strike will be felt more this week.

During the weekend the Pennsylvania Railroad placed 7,000 more union workers on reduced work schedules, resulting in a 10 per cent layoff in its top 7,000 each. The railroad, a large steel user, had previously laid off 18,000 employees.

Coal mines owned by steel companies also are closed Tuesday. One source estimates 30,000 are employed in captive fields.

And in Baltimore, shipping officials report their ports are "practically dead" for most business. The Baltimore port's principal import is iron ore and manganese for the U.S.

In Philadelphia, thousands of tons of ore destined for struck mills in that area began piling up on docks and yards as ships with loaded cargoes from as far as Labrador and Venezuela.

The strike began at midnight June 30 after a deadlock over wages in conflict of fringe benefit gains. Industry offered a 53-month package, figuring what it said was a 17 3-3 cents an hour first year "package." It was valued by the Steelworkers at 24 cents. The average pay has been $2.46 an hour.

Immigrant Meets Skunk in Bush With Dire Results

To mistake a rabbit for a skunk can be alarming. To mistake a skunk for a rabbit can be fatal.

Somewhere north of Napanee railroaders were surreptitiously chuckling about this one recently.

A Portuguese immigrant, not too long in the country to be familiar with all features of his new life, was working with a railroad gang in the Belleville district.

One day he wandered into some nearby bush and found himself staring at a creature he had never seen before. The creature was staring nonchalantly back at him.

After the mutual survey had lasted some time the new Canadian decided he should make some kind of rabbit. So he dropped his hoe to scare it off.

The animal merely continued to stare, gently lifted its tail, and shortly afterwards the railroaders was consoling the experience by telling his fellow-men—but not his recollection of what a North American skunk looks like.

Parts of City Blacked Out Hour by Storm

Parts of Belleville were blacked out for nearly an hour last night in the wake of a short, vicious storm that whipped the Quinte district in the late evening.

A number of streets on the east side of town—including the main thoroughfare — were plunged in darkness around 11 p.m. as limbs toppled across city hydro wires, shorting the power.

Public utilities workers were on the job immediately and the power supply restored before midnight.

In all, a half-inch of rain fell on the Belleville area. Gusts of wind up to 70 miles per hour lashed the city and district at the beginning of the storm.

However, no serious damage was reported.

A very successful Field Day was held Thursday, July 5th, at Zwicks Island by the 9th Belleville Cubs and Scouts under the leadership of Akela Mrs. L. Ashley and Scoutmaster W. J. Elliott with assistance by members of the Men's group committee.

Approximately twenty-five boys attended and quite a number were successful in passing their Athletes Badge. During the afternoon the Cubs and Scouts were actively engaged in a variety of tests and games such as the high jump, 40 yard dash, three-legged race etc.

After a picnic supper, a soft ball game was enjoyed between the Fathers and Mothers of the Scouts and Cubs. The Mothers' team which the Scouts and Cubs won by a close margin.

Roy Brown ran the draw, while Hector Graham, chairman of the tournament committee distributed the prizes and thanked the bowlers for their attendance.

A Belleville rink of Claude D. Tice, Mrs. Joan Watkin and Gordon Wilkins as skip won the first three-game high score at Cobourg on Wednesday in a successful mixed triples tournament was held. The other rinks that took part in William Wright with Austin Watkin as skip failed to make the prize money circle. There were 32 rinks on hand from Oshawa on the west to Brighton on the east. The games were exceptionally keen and true, the weather was delightful, the tournament was thoroughly enjoyed by the Belleville contingent. The winning rink had three tough games and missed winning the tournament by a single point.

The mixed doubles tournament slated for the local greens on Wednesday next has been postponed for two weeks, as the club games will continue tonight with trebles or doubles being played according to the number on hand. These games are most exciting and give the club members a chance to have a lot of fun.

Youth Arrested Faces Charges of Theft Car, Money

A 21-year-old youth, who managed to evade swift-moving police here Saturday night was arrested on car theft about 12 hours later near Bayside.

Charged is Charles Parr, of no fixed abode, but said to be from Hamilton. He also has been charged by city police with theft of money from a parked car here during the chase.

The pursuit started around 10 Saturday night, when a car answering the description of a vehicle stolen earlier in Kingston, was spotted by OPP officer Lawrence Calnan west of the city.

Chased by the patrol car, the suspect headed into the city, where the car was suddenly abandoned at the Four corners, after ramming another car. Constable Calnan Parr leapt from the vehicle and ran along the Main's east bank, coming out onto Front street by the alleyway alongside Ed. Thomas store.

Police converged on the area and the suspect was cornered by OPP officer Ken Williamson crossing the CPR bridge over the river at the entrance to Ontario Manufacturing premises.

A watchman at the plant reported he heard someone on the roof, and an aerial inspection of the department was despatched to give police easy access to the roof.

However, investigation of the premises failed to unearth the wanted man, and it is believed he may have been hiding in rubber surrounding the plant.

Sunday morning, however, Parr was spotted by OPP officers Jim Hall, Peter Ryer, G. McCorquodale and R. E. Edney as skip won the trophy and their prizes accompanying, while another Kingston rink, R. Springer, William Jagger and Sid Gamble won the second three-game high. Stephen Way, Rink Hall of Fame member skipped of Trenton had the two-game high single with Ken Baker, Belleville rink of William Hazzard, Robert Deloro, Brighton, Cobourg-Kingston, Trenton and Belleville-Kingston rinks also had a particularly good condition and the bowling excellent. Roy Brown ran the draw, while Hector Graham, chairman of the tournament committee distributed the prizes and thanked the bowlers for their attendance.

Thieves Take $10,000 Cash From Two Cans

Wyszniadi talked him into it.

"Why didn't you notify police?" he was asked.

"I didn't see any point in it," said the stay-quiet Polish Canadian, a retired businessman.

Two weeks ago thieves took $10,000 cash from two cans in his home. Then weekend thieves raided his safety deposit box while he played checkers across the street, but he wasn't sure just what was missing.

"I'll only know when I get this place cleaned up," he reported mildly today.

Conservatives Retain Control Of Jap House

TOKYO (AP)—Prime Minister Ichiro Hatoyama's Conservative supporters won renewed control of the Japanese Diet in Sunday's election. But Socialist upsets threatened the government's plan to rewrite the constitution to speed rearmament.

Midway in the vote counting, Socialists and one Communist had captured at least 11 additional seats the leftists need to block Hatoyama's demand for two-thirds majority necessary to revise the charter.

Final returns, including three major upsets, came in races for 76 Upper House seats elected by districts. Counting was just starting on the additional seats filled by the country at large, races in which the Socialists were expected to show the strongest showing.

Complete unofficial results for the 75 seats chosen by district showed 46 Conservative and 29 opposition members elected to the House of Councillors. With 90 present councillors and 33 opposition members still having three years of their six-year term to serve, the Conservatives' 136 members already were 19 more than the 126 needed to give Hatoyama a majority in the 250-member House. But the Socialist gains raised doubts that the final tabulation would seat the 167 Conservatives needed to amend the constitution.

The Socialists, Communists and other leftists bitterly oppose Hatoyama's plans to remove from the constitution the occupation-dictated clause renouncing war. That clause has barred the large enlargement of Japan's small defence force which the United States has been urging.

Nixon in Karachi On His Way Home From Asian Tour

KARACHI, Pakistan (Reuters) United States Vice-President Richard Nixon arrived here today for a brief stop on his way home from his tour of Southeast Asia.

Before leaving Taipei, Formosa, Sunday, Nixon declared that President Eisenhower was still firmly behind the policy of friendship with China and admission of Peiping to the United Nations.

Any suggestion that the president had modified his position against U.S. recognition and UN membership for the Red regime, he said, was false.

The vice-president and his wife left this Nationalist Chinese island after breakfast with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and a 2½-hour talk with the Nationalist chief which he described as most agreeable.

Maritimes Open Economic Parley

FREDERICTON (CP)—The top politicians and their advisers from the Atlantic provinces met into conference today to study combined action to combat a lagging regional economy.

Premier Flemming, who called the meeting, said he hoped the conference "will mark the beginning of a new era of co-operation and goodwill among us which will in turn help to strengthen Canada."

Premier Joseph Smallwood of Newfoundland, Premier Alex Matheson of Prince Edward Island, Premier Harry Hicks of Nova Scotia, and Mr. Flemming went into the meeting with newserved optimism.

Plan Mass Burial Of Crash Victims

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. (AP) — Sixty-seven coffins, symbols of commercial aviation's most tragic moment, stood in rows under green and graceful pines in the Flagstaff cemetery today.

They were brought to the gentle, grassy slope to be lowered into the earth at a mass burial service for those who lost their lives when a Trans World Airlines Super-Constellation crashed in the Grand Canyon June 30. Partial remains of only nine of the victims have been identified.

There were no persons aboard the plane when it slammed into a canyon butte after colliding with a United Air Lines DC-7. Separate services are being arranged for the 56 people killed aboard the DC-7.

Supreme Soviet To Hold Session On Wednesday

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Russia's parliament, the Supreme Soviet, meets in Moscow Wednesday for the first time since Communist party chief Nikita Khrushchev launched his current drive against Stalinism.

Observers expected the session to demonstrate Whether the Kremlin is ready yet to allow its citizens the right to criticize their government.

There is speculation the deputies are being brought together to show new-style Soviet democracy in action. But to many Soviet observers, this may open the way for some franker speaking from the floor about shortcomings, although all the signs indicate that the Kremlin right at critics direct criticism of any of its policies.

The sharp break with the past shown by "de-Stalinization" has led to great pressure by critics of present Soviet leaders — and even to suggestions that there should be more than one party.

These ideas have been sharply condemned by Pravda, the Communist party newspaper, which has made it clear that the Soviet is not ready to change its one-party system.

According to Soviet sources, foreign affairs are unlikely to be included in the agenda of the session, which is expected to last for four or five days.

Stratford Music

By ROBERT TANNER

There is something about the Stratford festival that is habit forming like a drug: make a firm resolve that you are only going to pay it one visit, and before you know where you are, you are back again to see some new facet of the varied program, or perhaps to watch a second look at something already seen. Which was perhaps the reason why we found ourselves last Saturday at the opening concert of the Music Festival, which was devoted entirely to Benjamin Britten's opera "The Rape of Lucretia." To accommodate this production, the stage has been considerably enlarged, and a small orchestra pit provided, as well as a considerably improved lighting system. With last summer's intense heat in mind, two large circulating fans were ordered several months ago, arriving just in time for one to be installed temporarily on Saturday afternoon.

Not being too familiar with the modern idiom in music and opera, we were amazed and delighted to find how much we enjoyed the performance and how it gripped us from beginning to end. This indeed appeared to be a very general reaction among the capacity audience who gave a standing ovation to the players in token of their appreciation. Simply, yet effectively staged, the opera tells the story, which has fascinated authors and poets from Livy, through Shakespeare, down to such modern writers as Andre Obey and Ronald Duncan, the latter providing Britten with his libretto.

TALENTED CAST ASSEMBLED

A very talented cast has been assembled, headed by Patricia Tourel and Jon Vickers as the two commentators. Regina Resnik as Lucretia is supported by Patricia Rideout and Adelaide Bishop as nurse and maid respectively, while the male roles are taken by Jon Rubes as Lucretia's husband Collatinus, Bernard Turgeon as Junius, another Roman General, and Harry Mossfield as Tarquinius, the villain of the piece. All sang the difficult music well and with a wonderful sense of ease, at the same time demonstrating acting ability of a high order. But perhaps the greatest credit for the success of the performance should go to Thomas Mayer, the conductor, who wielded his twelve expert instrumentalists and eight singers into one cohesive and beautifully blended whole. The staging of Norman Gelgen-Torel, and the costumes of Marie Day made telling contributions to our exciting and memorable evening.

The opera is being played a total of six times between July 7th and 24th, as part of a very complete musical festival which includes pianists Glenn Gould, Rudolf Serkin Arrau and Rudolf Serkin, singers Jennie Tourel, Inge Borkh and Alexander Welitsch as well as the Festival Chorus and Orchestra.

The full program of drama and music together with up-to-date infomation regarding ticket availabilities for the plays may be obtained by calling Woodland 8-8130.

During the Saturday afternoon, we revisited "The Merry Wives of Windsor" and found that somewhat cooler surroundings than a week previously resulted in a more responsive audience and a more lively production, lending weight to the comment overheard outside the theatre after the play. "I don't mind what the critics say, I enjoyed the "Merry Wives" just as much as "Henry V." Incidentally, what with the French parts in the latter play and the Moliere farces, the French influence is strong in Stratford at present, and second Festival headquarters Shakespeare's historical masterpiece is familiarly referred to as "Hank Cling."

Poland Changes Two Ministers

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Communist Poland has announced a shakeup in two production ministries, apparently a result of the workers' revolt in Poznan 10 days ago.

Radio Warsaw announced the removal of Julian Tokarski as minister of automobile production and Roman Fidelski as head of the ministry of machine industry. The Polish radio gave no reason for the changes, but their connection with the Poznan outbreak June 28 was apparent. The violence began with a general strike by workers at the Stalin (Zizpo) railway car works after reports that secret police had arrested a workers' delegation demanding higher wages, more consumer goods and better working conditions.

The government of another Communist satellite, Hungary, meanwhile announced the release of 11,256 persons from prisons, duties (Minister Erik Molnar indicated a "rehabilitation" commission had found they had been unjustly imprisoned.

SIMONDS AND MARTIN

Two prominent Canadians have commented on the world's most pressing problem, the devising of a method by which man may avoid committing suicide.

Lt.-Gen. Guy Simonds, retired chief of the Canadian general staff, told the Royal Canadian Military Institute on Wednesday that a method must be found to track guided missiles at their firing point. Present defence plans for Canada provide for everyone to run to the woods and to salvage anything that might be left afterwards, he declared. This he termed "the most frightful form of defeatism."

Hon. Paul Martin, Federal Minister of Health, on Thursday told the United Nations disarmament commission that "the world is rapidly approaching the point of no return"—the time when the effective control of disarmament may no longer be feasible." Mr. Martin estimated that this point would be reached in five years, that the world has only that long to arrest the process of stockpiling nuclear weapons, if it wishes to avoid living perpetually under the shadow of sudden annihilation.

These two figures advocate the two Canadians see the development of new weapons and the devising of a means to control existing ones, both aim at the same objective, the elimination of the threat to the very existence of mankind. But it would appear that these two approaches to the problem are so diametrically opposed that they cannot co-exist.

It may well be that that "frightful form of defeatism" of which Lt.-Gen. Simonds complains, that pinning of hopes for survival on running to the woods and then salvaging the pieces if there are any, will provide just the impetus necessary to push the world into the disarmament arrangements which Mr. Martin desires.

It would appear that this attitude, while it may be labelled defeatism, can by no means be considered as realism, for recent revelations regarding the killing power of radiation produced by thermo-nuclear weapons would appear to outdate, even before devised, any method of tracking a missile to its point of firing and attack. The missile might be stopped short of its target, but nobody has yet suggested any way in which the radiation released by its explosion could be prevented from spreading death over hundreds or even thousands of miles.

It may well be that future historians, if there are any, will record with astonishment man's endeavor to devise a defence against a weapon which could not be stopped.

It may well be that the only men who do not deserve to be labelled defeatists are those like Mr. Martin who still, despite all the obvious obstacles, hope that man may decide not to commit suicide.

A PRAISEWORTHY DECISION

Britain has refused to hand over a million Africans to the tender mercies of Prime Minister J. G. Strijdom of South Africa.

This decision should be universally applauded wherever men believe that black people are human beings, too.

Strijdom wants Swaziland, Basutoland and Bechuanaland "for strategic reasons and for resettlement of Negroes displaced by South Africa's policy of apartheid (racial separation)."

Despite everything that apologists for the South African Government have written, it becomes increasingly apparent that "apartheid"-does not visualize the gradual admission and elevation of the native population, but their retention as hewers of wood and drawers of water for the whites.

In other words, Prime Minister Strijdom was asking Britain to hand over to his anti-Negro government control of these three protectorates in order that he could use them as convenient dumping grounds for natives now living in South Africa, there confining them against the day when their labor might be required by the enlightened supporters of "apartheid."

Britain said: "No."

Hurray!

THE WEATHER AND FOOD

In May the Canadian consumer price index took its biggest jump in 1956, as higher prices for food were almost entirely responsible. The food sub-index soared 3.2 points.

How much of the higher prices for food were the result of the unseasonably cool spring is problematic. It might be argued that May was much to early for the unfavorable crop prospects to be reflected in retail prices for food. But a survey of agricultural conditions made by the Ontario Department of Agriculture presents statistics which clearly indicate the effect of the weather on butter and cheese production.

In April Ontario's creamery butter production, at 7,032,400 pounds, was off 1.6 per cent from the figure for April of 1955. Cheese production, at 3,587,400 pounds, was down 3.3 per cent. These declines were moderate compared to what happened in May, when butter production, at 8,562,000 pounds, was 17.6 per cent below the figure for May of 1955 and cheese production, at 5,-948,500 pounds, was off 21.4 per cent.

In Hastings and Prince Edward counties the declines in butter production were much greater than the provincial averages. Butter production in Hastings was 377,570 pounds in May, off 26 per cent, while in Prince Edward the month's production of 26,774 pounds was down 35 per cent. Hastings produced 321,500 pounds of cheese in May, down 34 per cent from the figure for May of 1955, but Prince Edward's production held up well, its output of 264,663 pounds being only 5 per cent below the comparable figure for the previous year.

CHILD DISCUSSES WEATHER

On a pleasant summer day
In my annuals I can play.
And I can race about and run,
Never bothered by the sun.

In my leggings and my coat
And a mumfler round my throat,
Just as warm as I can be
Winter never bothers me.

When the rain comes pit-a-pat,
In my rubber coat and hat,
I go splashing up and down.
Just the happiest child in town.

So, it really seems to me
If you're dressed as you should be
And can get outdoors and run,
Any sort of weather's fun.

Set Authors Difficult Job

(The Times of London)

"The hero or heroine or other sympathetic characters should be portrayed as intelligent and reasonably courageous." This ukase was promulgated (it 'that is the right word) by the Broadcasting Control Board in Australia; its purpose is to prevent children from seeing television programs which might give them the wrong ideas, and a bill much to respect has undoubtedly, but in the literary world the board's decrees can hardly fail to cause grave concern. The more old-fashioned type of writer has no objection to the heroine's being with moral courage ("Jack could contain himself no longer. 'You unspeakable cad!' he blurted out."); but it is asking a bit much to expect the villain should mean that the trap-door had opened under her and she was now a prisoner in the secret passage." That is the sort of stuff that the best thrillers are made of. Is it small wonder that her creator views with alarm a compulsory increase in Marcia's IQ?

And what about those "other sympathetic characters"? They have got to be intelligent, too. Not a ghastly prospect for the story-tellers and the dramatists. This edict puts Dr. Watson beyond the pale and Dr. Watson on the suspect list. The soulless children will have to accept mediocralities among their favorites. Alas that Biding Hood was the Marcia type; Man Friday's intellect was small; Little Miss Muffet was conspicuously lacking in moral courage The whole thing confounds the writer in his new and serious problems. If none of the nice characters are allowed to be stupid, the nasty ones will have to be even more diabolically clever than they are already and the upshot of it all may well be that Australian children, debasing of the barely comprehensible dramas which they see upon the screen, will renounce all together the joys of television. Perhaps that is the object of the exercise.

S'icky Key Is a Plague

(St. Catharines Standard)

During the recent heat wave, our typewriter decided it was too sticky as the weather. Or at least one key decided to stick. It was the key bearing the letter "t".

Now when the mercury rises and temperatures, a stick key on a typewriter can be a terrible annoyance. Not only is good thought gets going, the key sticks, half a dozen other keys pile up, and progress is halted. By the time the key is finally sorted out and separated, the good thought has been driven out by a variety of less thoughtful, so when this durina a heat wave, with the humidity high, it is almost more than the human soul can bear.

We wondered whether anything could be written without the letter "t" which was causing all our trouble. Apparently it's impossible, at least without a terrible trouble than pulling stuck keys apart. For instance, the editorial which we were writing consisted of 208 words, including the title. There was one change when a "t" had to be used — almost one for every two words on an average. The letter "e" appeared 100 times, "i" occurred 60 times and "s" appeared 60 times.

Even in twwrjk—whoops; even in-'his ed!'orial, which con'ains 221 words, the la'ter "e" appears 70 times. Gosss we're stuck w!th i!!

Education Never Wasted

(Brandon Sun)

How often have you heard people say, "What a shame, and she never uses a bit of what she got in education." In so many instances the suggestion is advanced that because girls seldom make extended use of their education to earn a living, there is little reason for them to take it. Yet the knowledge gained from the ranks of engineering or of nursing is not money spent on the academic training is a waste of.

In this day and age, sound educationists do not share this opinion. They have come to realize and recognize the ancient maxim that the hand that rocks the cradle rules the world. The mother, with reasonable agreement, is potentially the greatest teacher in the child's life. The better she is equipped for her intellectual tasks, the more successful her job in raising the youngster.

Fixing Things With a Kick

(Buffalo Evening News)

Even older than the "Do It Yourself" movement is the "Give It a Good Kick" cult. This is composed of all who undertake assorted repair jobs by the sheer force of primeval violence. Wrench bangers are perhaps the charter members of this large and dedicated group.

No task is too forbidding for the Give-It-a-Good-Kick specialist. In London recently, for example, traffic was snarled for 15 minutes when the lights at a main intersection turned red and refused that way. It required for a talented bus river, also seeing red, to trigger the flashy solution: the simple expedient of giving the light standard a single well-aimed boot.

Of course, this is one technique that can boast an authority. Also, it has known its failures, many of them disconcerting. Still, life has not many pleasures to match the one experienced when, after all manner of coaxing and threatening has failed, you suddenly set some pesky gadget aright by one angry eminently satisfying kick, bang, shove or slap.

Invents New Slide Rule

(Windsor Star)

A Canadian engineer, Prof. Gerald W. Farrell of McGill, has invented an "electronic slide rule" that can give the answer to tough mathematical problems in less than a minute. It is an improved type of slide rule, and the latest word in the field which engineer can be taught to use it in a few hours.

It there is a catch in it, those last few words expose it. No slide rule should need to be forbeen for the masses, and this one is no exception. It is to be operated only by those persons of special mathematical bent who have spent years on the problem, way, if they had the time.

The machine would already reduce the universal computer. Univac, to the simple dimensions of a slide rule. But that won't do most of us any good. We wouldn't know how to ask the questions, even if we could read the answers.

So we must continue to accept the advanced gadgetry of applied sciences with a round of applause while regretting that nothing similar is being done, or perhaps ever can be done, to make solution of our problems any simpler.

Strength for The Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

LIFE A VAST COMPLEX

A minister was talking to a woman who had lost her husband. She was not only filled with grief over her loss but kept torturing herself with much self-accusation. She believed that had she not neglected him in this or that little detail on certain measures at certain times, the tragedy would have been averted.

"Life is too complicated," said the pastor, "to enable us to pick out any one circumstance and say that it is the cause of anything. Everything that happens is the result of many causes. Had you done all the things you now accuse yourself of neglecting, the outcome would probably have been no different. Had you taken every measure you failed to take, each and all of them would have proved unavailing.

"This does not mean that your husband was fated to die and nothing could be done about it. It only means that every circumstance in life is a vast complex, that all we can do is to do the best we know how, and that no matter how much we do, we will always think that we have not done enough.

"Last of all, we must remember that the issues of life are in hands more powerful than ours. The sovereign God presides over all the events immensely and in its details. In Him is peace. Only in Him all things work together for good."

Little Elbow Room Please

(Hamilton Spectator)

We have noticed an unfortunate trend in the restaurants of our nation, particularly in the new or remodelled ones, to jam the stools and tables so that customers are seated practically cheek by jowl. This must be a devilish device to get the maximum income from the available space, but we suggest a way that patrons can show their sources of supply — even to their own homes.

The average commercial eater doesn't like to expose his face to scraping by his neighbor's elbow 2 o'clock shadow when he reaches for the sugar bowl or when he wants to read while he eats; he doesn't appreciate having to fold his newspaper into a one-column column width to avoid dunking his elbow in someone else's tomato soup or rice pudding.

In these establishments, designed on the theory that every man's a midget, there is the risk of applying one's fork to a neighboring but extraneous plate; especially if the service has put too many people at the best forgotten what he ordered. This could lead to such unsavory luncheon combinations as the absent-minded as oysters and ice cream.

We don't think the trend is serious enough to forecast the ultimate breakdown of the Canadian digestive system, but we do think there is a point for the consideration of restaurant architects. If there is to be any sort of jam in restaurants, it shouldn't be a traffic or parking one, but only the type served with bread or toast.

Small Town's Peace Is Lost

(Wingham Advance - Times)

People in the big city have been wont to picture life in the small town as a peaceful, somnolent existence with no hustle and bustle, no excitement, nothing to do and nothing to do but stay home and tend the garden or mow the lawn. But recent events go to figure that small town life has none of the attributes of city living which cause jangled nerves, frayed tempers and nervous disorders of the stomach.

Things are changing, however. Right now there are a few people who never stay home. Almost every evening at home. What with lodge, church work, golf and service clubs, they never seem to make it. More and more people are getting into the pastime where supper is just a momentary pause for a round which goes from early morning to late at night.

The overorganized social life of many small towns has been blamed for absentee husbands and wives. Add to this more modern means of transportation as the family sedan and you have a pace of living that is positively to be just about as frantic as that of the city. For instance, a family will motor from motor trips to the weekend, town people seem to think nothing of taking off on a hundred mile jaunt after supper.

Almost everywhere is going at a faster clip than it was 25 years ago. Small towners, it is true, are somewhat behind the times in this matter, as they may be in some others, but they're catching up fast.

Personal Health Talks

Anybody Need a Family Doctor

According to the 19th edition of the American Medical Directory (1956), published by the American Medical Association, there are 318,661 physicians in the United States, 17,906 in Canada. Only 30 out of each hundred physicians in the United States are in general practice, Thirty-one out of each hundred are listed as real specialists — they say they limit their practice to specialty. Ten out of each hundred physicians give special attention to a specialty but do more or less general practice too. The remaining 11 per cent of physicians in the U.S. are serving in internships or residencies, 5 per cent in other full-time hospital services, 5 per cent retired or not in practice, 4 per cent not in private practice and 3 per cent in military or other government service.

These official statistics show that most physicians now in practice are real or fish specialists—by "trick specialists" of course, I mean doctors who specialize in whatever a patient with brush this suggestion aside with characteristically blunt words. Medical educators are even now considering ways and means of establishing just schools for the training of general practitioners. Perhaps there is enough of the present medical schools to train real specialists.

At the top of the social scale are those who are never flustered by the sudden arrival of the unannounced. TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

START ALL OVER AGAIN

Success in life is made up of innumerable failures. No one ever won all the time. "Down, but not out" is a Salvation Army slogan. Edison used to say that every failure brought one that much nearer to success.

The child starts all over again in its attempts to stand up and walk. It's the same with all of us on the journey through life. No matter how serious the failure, there is something better ahead. If we are going to fail at any time let us try and fail forward, and not backward!

It's no disgrace to start all over again. It's been the secret of many a successful career. John G. Gough, the famous temperance orator, did So did Walt Mason, the unique prose stymster. He was a drunkard, the fine and attractive actress and entertainer. Our great inventors would never have made a success of had they paid any attention to their failures. Continually they started all over again

How familiar to every school boy is that famous saying: "If at first you do not succeed, try, try again." It's a wonderful proverb and I would say: Keep going. Have a plan and a purpose, and never admit defeat. Don't let it be too much of a hurry. Take time to do what you do, the best you know how. Keep perfection in view. It's not all. It is merely an incident along the way, but it is a beautifully kind is an important triumph. Those who make the tools at hand and make them do double duty. When you get discouraged and feel like throwing the world up and you, start all over again. Climb the mountain slowly. Slight-existence is a great gain in life.

Cardinal James Gibbons once wrote: "I am seventy-eight-six years. I have watched men climb to success, hundreds of them, and of all the elements that are important for success, the most important is that of character. Good for any man unless he has courage." Start all over again—with courage!

Gov.-General Gets Taste of Wild West

CALGARY (CP) — Governor-General Vincent Massey today gets a taste of the wild western atmosphere of Calgary at stampede time, starting off a full day of activity by heading a two-hour parade and winding it up with a look at the chuck wagon races, perhaps the most exciting of all rodeo sports.

Mr. Massey and his party tasted western hospitality and beef Sunday, attending a breakfast party at a farm and an outdoor barbecue at the football stadium. His secretary and son, Lionel Massey, had his excellency enjoyed every minute of it.

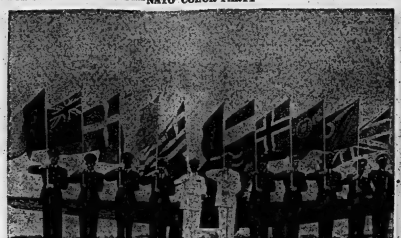
Today's schedule calls for the governor-general's party to lead the parade through downtown Calgary, attend a luncheon with directors of the Calgary Exhibition and Stampede, watch the afternoon rodeo competition, attend a Canadian Women's Press Club reception and then officially open the show during the evening chuck wagon races at the stage show.

The Calgary visit, which started Saturday afternoon when an RCAF North Star brought the party from Ottawa, will end Tuesday when the governor - general goes to British Columbia for 10 days.

A record $35,000 persons are expected to attend the six-day stampede here, topping the mark of $20,794 set last year.

Child Not Hurt

NEW YORK (AP) — Victor Fernandez, 22, was walking in lower Manhattan Saturday when he heard a scream.



He looked up, braced himself and held out his arms. Edwin Tavavera, 7, fell right into them. Neither Fernandez nor the child was hurt.

Edwin had fallen out of a third-story bedroom window while his mother was in another room. He weighs 49 pounds.

INSPECTOR DIES

As one of Canada's NATO committments, the RCAF trains aircrew from 10 other NATO countries, who learn to fly alongside RCAF fledgling aircrew. Since 1951, the RCAF has trained more than 4,000 airmen from other NATO countries. McKEESPORT, Pa. (AP) — A steel worker's wife thoughtfully counts the coins she has been hiding in a cream pitcher, and drops in another 50-cent piece.

Next door, a striker is on the telephone. "How about painting your house again while the strike is on? Sure, same deal—$100. I'll start right away."

In the police station, lines of men are registering for free surplus commodities—butter, powdered milk, cheese, and shortening. The rations won't become available until Aug. 1 but nearly 1,000 signed up the day the depot opened.

Things are quiet in front of the main gate of U.S. Steel's tube plant . . . only token picketing . . . no card game today . . . just groups of men standing around talking.

QUIET IMPRESSES

The quiet is what impresses you most today about McKeesport, a typical steel mill city of 55,000 near Pittsburgh. There is no tension, no high emotion, no bitterness. The old patters of volcanic anger seething just beneath "the surface on both sides doesn't exist. This is a sophisticated strike.

Men are drawing the last paycheques they will get for some time. How long?

"This could be a long one," they say. The consensus is that it will be three or four weeks, but it's only a guess.

"Most of the boys are in good shape, financially, for that long," says Christy Elliolei an electrician who is one of the three pickets.

"But after that, it's going to start hurting."

SHEBA RETURNS

PLATTSBURGH, N.Y. (CP)—Sheba, the German shepherd sentry dog trained to attack anyone who runs, is back in her kennel today. Her handler, Airman Matthew Bardsley, summoned back from home leave, called her and she came quietly out of a patch of woods near Plattsburgh air force base Saturday. Sheba escaped after Bardsley left for home and district residents had been warned.

Cypriots Murder Man and His Wife Out for Picnic

NICOSIA (AP)—Gen. Sir George Templer, chief of the imperial general staff, inspected British troops today after the slaying Sunday of three Britons by Cypriot extremists seeking union with Greece.

The killings climaxed a day of violence which ranged from one end of the island to the other. It coincided with Templer's arrival for a quick inspection of this vital British stronghold and talks with Governor Sir John Harding.

The island's British colony seethed over the slaying of a British senior customs official and his wife by Cyriots while the couple was driving into the country for a picnic.

Sunday night a British soldier was killed in a gun battle between four Cypriots and a British search patrol at Morphou, 25 miles west of Nicosia.

Mr. and Mrs. George Kaberry were slain while driving along a coastal road and after they were stopped by a group of men set up by a group of extremists. The band then hurled three bombs at the car.

News of the ambush brought talk in the British colony of civilians, but no such official move developed. However, authorities said that British civilians can be armed if they enlist in the auxiliary police set up by constables without pay. Some 350 civilians already have joined the constabulary.

Templer, who arrived here from Turkey, is to return Monday to Britain. There Prime Minister Eden was reported holding new urgent conference on the Cyprus situation.

Eden summoned three cabinet ministers to his country home, Chequers, Sunday night amid reports a new move was near on Cyprus.

Some people will hesitate before answering yes—a trick, they think. Others hesitate before adding to their necessary expenses the cost of adequate insurance in sound companies. They may wait too long.

"is this seat taken?"

On a train, you're in a little, warm and lighted world, sharing in an experience of which memories are made . . .

In the diner the young man said: "I do a lot of travelling by car, but whenever I can, I hop aboard CNR. I can think on a train. I can work if I feel like it, but mostly I enjoy that wonderful feeling of relaxing completely.

Nowadays, the only two places I can really relax in are my house and on a train."

The older man said: "I love travelling by train . . . you know, today is an important anniversary to me." Before the young man had a chance to say anything he went on: "Many years ago I was a salesman, too, I was cocky.

I was our firm's biggest producer and I knew everything.

One day I got a letter from the president raking me over the coals for what I thought was a small mistake.

I was on a train in ten minutes, roaring mad.

I was going to quit, but first I was going to tell the old boy off.

"In the diner, still fuming, I was seated opposite a pretty girl. She radiated a sort of quiet dignity that seemed to calm me down. The six hours we travelled together changed my life. The next day I apologized to the president, and four months later I married the girl. In sixteen years, I was president. On every anniversary of that meeting, my wife and I have managed to be on a CNR train."

By CNR, travelling is a relaxing, rewarding experience — that's why every week more and more Canadians go CNR on such famous "name" trains as the Super Continental, the Continental, the Ocean Limited.

Conference Int. Business Women Opens in Montreal

By CAROLYN WILLETT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

MONTREAL (CP) — More than 900 women from some 23 countries met high atop Mount Royal Sunday to officially open the 9th triennial conference of the International Federation of Business and Professional Women.

Meeting in Canada for the first time, the congress began Saturday with a United Nations seminar, and ends Thursday. It will be followed Friday and Saturday by the annual meeting of the Canadian federation.

Transport Minister Marler, welcoming the group on behalf of Prime Minister St. Laurent, said that 25 years ago such a gathering of women at Mount Royal's Chateau would have "struck terror in the hearts of most men."

There was no justification for such fear today, Woman, who have always dominated men, now shared that domination politely, and women now were welcomed to posts in affairs of state and government.

Welcomes were also extended by Canadian Federation President Mrs. Hazel Laycock of Winnipeg; deputy Mayor Albert Gilbeault of Montreal; Mrs. Alan Turner-Bone of Montreal, representing the Ilahoo committee of the women's international organizations and International Deputy-President Mrs. Agda Rossel of Stockholm, Sweden.

Mrs. Rossel, acting president in the absence of Dame Caroline Haslett of England, will also conduct congress business sessions which begin today with the presentation of 31 committee reports. A panel discussion on The Woman Executive, with Senator Muriel McQueen Fergusson of Fredericton, N.B., as moderator and a four - member international panel, is planned for tonight.

Mrs. Rossel read greeting telegrams from the international president and from Queen Juliana of the Netherlands.

When it comes to flowers, those gorgeous tawny chrysanthemums, those vivid red camellias and green orchids look simply wonderful on you! Here is your make-up chart:

If your skin is dry, sallow, muddy or aging, cream or paste foundations which cover the skin more completely than do the liquids.

If your skin is oily, a dry cake foundation, a vanishing cream type or a liquid foundation with an astringent base.

ADVICE To The LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

YOU HAVE TWO CHOICES — TAKE THE ONE THAT WILL BRING YOU HAPPINESS

Dear Beatrice Fairfax:

Before I married my husband six months ago we had been seeing each other only on weekends for the previous six months, as he was in college and didn't get home often.

Lately he has seemed a little confused, and I knew there was something on his mind. Last night he told me what was wrong.

It seems that while he was in college he had an affair with a girl who has since borne him a child. He claims he didn't know about the child at the time we were married.

I expect my first child in November, and my husband seems to be happy about it, but I can't live with him knowing that he is the father of another woman's child. Neither can I live without him, since I love him and, besides, cannot bring up a child without help. He claims he loves me and I have no legally of my own. I'm 22 years old.

What shall I do? — D.

Dear D.:

I need hardly say that it's understandable that you should feel as you do right now. You've had a terrible shock, but I want to give you only fact begun.

On the other hand, you admittedly love your husband and I think you believe he loves you. Both of you are looking forward to the coming of your child. I feel sure he has told you how bitterly he regrets what happened and assured you that such a thing will never happen again.

So - which of these two things will, in the last analysis, make you feel happiest and most self-respecting: to walk out on your marriage and live an emotionally starved and brooding life, or to shoulder this problem with courage and the will to work together with your husband to build for's future that would almost certainly return to you everything of good you put into it?

ON AN overnight train trip in a bedroom, you can keep your child from falling or sliding out of that upper berth by using an extra sheet. Run the sheet over the top bar where the webbing stops, pin it both to the edge of the webbing and to the mattress.

EMBARRASSED AT NOT BRINGING GRADUATION GIFT

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

While attending my daughter's graduation I met the parents of one of her school friends, and was invited to an informal reception for that evening along with several other parents and their graduating daughters. I had never met any of the parents before, but I did know the students, all girls, as they had come to our house at various times. Since my daughter very much wished to attend this gathering, we went along, not wishing to just in time to see our hostess' daughter unwrap a gift that a parent and daughter, having arrived a few minutes before we did, had brought, to her. I felt greatly embarrassed because we arrived empty-handed. The thought of bringing a gift had just not occurred to me. To add further to my uncomfortable feeling, the hostess handed my daughter a gift as we were leaving. I feel rather foolish sending a gift to the graduate at this time. But would it be proper for me to write a note now and send a gift to the hostess? If so, how shall I word the note? And what kind of gift would be proper? Or would it be best to drop the matter entirely? Thank you for your solution.

—Embarrassed

Don't worry or feel a bit embarrassed that you didn't bring a gift to your hostess' daughter . . . after all, her invitation was given on the spur of the moment, and I'm positive no gift would have been expected. But I do very much like the idea of your writing a note of appreciation to the hostess (as soon as possible), and enclosing it in a box of flowers (perhaps flowers from your garden). Your note might read something like this:

Dear Mrs. Clark,

Dorothy and I read such a delightful time at your party the evening of the graduation and we would like to have these posies tell you our thank-you for such happiness and for the wonderful memories we have of this charming occasion.

Thank you, so very much, for your gracious invitation, and for the happy hours.

Friendliest greetings to you all,

from all of us,
Sincerely,
Margaret Allen.

I think too it would be a fine idea of your daughter to write a thank-you note to her friend, the hostess' daughter, and perhaps send her a thoughtful little gift . . . never mind that it's late.

DINNER IN HONOR OF SON'S BRIDE-TO-BE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My son is to be married quite soon. I am planning to give a dinner party for his bride-to-be. About 25 guests, which will include the bride's family and my own. Will you suggest the correct seating arrangements, please? — D.

You, the hostess, sit at the head of your table; your husband, the bride-to-be's father, opposite you. The bride-to-be, as guest of honor, would be seated at the right of your husband, the host. Your son may be seated next to her (the side-by-side seating as done at the wedding reception) or he may be seated at your right. The bride's mother, at your husband's left; the bride's father at your left, if your son is at your right, with the man who should be given next honor, at your left. You didn't tell me who the other guests will be, but the idea is to seat the women and men alternately (husbands and wives should not be seated together at the table), and to arrange the seating according to what you know of (or can find out about) their congeniality.

Pretty Flowered Print

By TRACY ADRIAN

Many pretty frocks that are shown for warm weather wear have taken on a new versatility this year and have been created to be worn for either daytime or evening.

The dress pictured comes from this group and is ideal for around the clock occasions. It is in a flower printed Swiss cotton belting with the new wider look across the top. The bodice is crisscrossed in a delicate fold and the ribbon belt boasts a front bow. The skirt is full and graceful.

Calgary Garrison on Parade

By Mary Moore

The family of a military man has a wonderful life — that is if they like to travel and change and gain military events. I do. During May and June military pageantry was in full swing and I observed the whole issue. I even adopted the military vernacular.

When I arrived in Calgary in April 'Marianne's' friends would say to me, "Oh, you'll be here for the Feu de Joie." Blankly I'd answer, "Yes, that lovely word" not knowing what kind of joyous fire I was in for. But it was a great thrill to hear the riflemen shoot that chain reaction salute. The spectator mothers he'd their hands over their little ones' ears, but our wee Gary slept peacefully in his car bed through it all.

The next event was Viscount Montgomery's review of the whole of Calgary Garrison and we had a completely satisfactory front row view of this famous soldier.

The Trooping of the Colors by the P.P.C.L.I. followed the next week with the new U.S. ambassador to Canada, Mr. Merchant, there to pin U.S. Air Medals on two of their men. A thrilling example of the close liaison between our two countries.

Before the troops moved to Wainwright for their summer training the Queen's Own Rifles mess laid on a formal dinner with the ladies present. Mary had time to quick write home for a long dress,

The dinner reminded me of one we had in Falmouth when we were in England last June. It was patterned on English formality and for we went to dinner at about 8:15 and left the table at about 10:45 p.m. — after seven courses interspersed with appropriate wines. Dancing afterwards with the R.C.D. and other charming officers made your typewriterbound correspondent feel young again.

I have the menu before me and I want to pay tribute to the Messing Officer because we could dance comfortably after doing justice to Seafood Cocktail, Jellied consomme, Grilled Fillet of Sole with tartar Sauce, Broiled Filet Mignon Buttered saute Mushrooms, Shoe String Potatoes, Corn Riblets, French Style Green Beans, Chef's Salad, Pumpkin Pie with Whipped Cream, Fresh Fruit, Assorted Cheese, Biscuits, Mints, Mixed Nuts. Coffee.

The grilled Fillet of Sole and the pumpkin pie stand out in my memory as something that you and I must not forget to serve at our dinner parties — just small perfect portion though.

You might think that apples, oranges and bananas were superfluous after such a varied and elegant spread, but those young folk demolished the fruit, too.

Beneath every one of those immaculate dress uniforms was a hungry soldier - athlete in fighting trim. It made me proud of Canada's army.

Mantle May Play

American League Favored 6-5 Over Power-Laden National

By JOE REICHLER

WASHINGTON (AP) — The once-dominant American League was a surprising 6-5 favorite today to win the annual all-star baseball game tonight from the power-laden National League, which has won five of the last six.

The expected availability of Mickey Mantle as a starter, a modest pitching edge plus a persistent home park jinx have combined to create a feeling that the Yanks' circuit may regain some of its prestige during this 23rd midsummer show.

Barring a surprise move on the part of the all-star managers, the operative pitchers' figure to be Whitey Ford, New York Yankee southpaw (10-4) for the American against Robin Roberts, Philadelphia righthander (9-10) for the National.

Bob Friend (11-7) of Pittsburgh Pirates, mentioned as the original choice for the National, came up with a sore throat but said in New York "it's nothing that would keep me from pitching."

ONLY THREE STARTERS

Casey Stengel, who will be directing the Americans for the sixth time, and Walter Alston, in his second venture, insisted Sunday night they had not yet decided on their pitchers. Six of the 12 all-star pitchers were used Saturday and six Saturday. That leaves only Ford, Roberts and Warren Spahn of Milwaukee with sufficient rest.

Mantle's surprise return to the Yankee lineup for Sunday's game in Washington made his appearance certainty, if not as a starter then as a pinch hitter.

"I'll play," Mantle said, but Stengel, who has the final say, played it coy.

The American League seems to have an edge on the mound. Pierce, with 13 victories, leads all pitchers. Righthanders Jim Wilson of Chicago, Johnny Kucks of New York and Tom Brewer of Boston have 11 each. Ford and Early Wynn of Cleveland have 10 each. Only Brooks Lawrence (12-6), of Cincinnati and Friend of the NL pitchers, have won more than nine games.

NATS HAVE POWER

Even with Mantle in the lineup, the Nationals are far out in front in power, leading the Americans in home runs, 235 to 175.

The American League, winner of 13 of the 23 previous clashes, has one more thing going for it. It has lost only two of the 11 games played in the American parks.

Under the rules, the eight starters chosen by a country-wide fan poll must remain in the lineup at least three innings unless forced to retire because of injury. No pitcher may work more than three innings unless the game goes into extra innings.

Five of the National League starters are from Cincinnati. They are second baseman Johnny Temple, shortstop Roy McMillan, outfielders Frank Robinson and Gus Bell and catcher Ed Bailey. The three remaining National Leaguers are Stan Musial and Ken Boyer of St. Louis and Dale Long of Pittsburgh.

The American League starting lineup will see Mantle, Ted Williams of Boston and Al Kaline of Detroit in the outfield, Mickey Vernon of Boston at first, Nellie Fox of Chicago at second, Harvey Kuenn of Detroit at shortstop, George Kell of Baltimore at third and Yogi Berra of New York behind the plate.

A sellout crowd of some 28,500 is expected to attend.

All receipts will go into the major league pool that helps finance the players' pension fund.

Sports Reporters Give $111,592 To Crippled Kids

TORONTO (CP)—Ontario sports reporters raised $111,592 for crippled children in the last five years it was disclosed Saturday.

A report to the convention of the Ontario Sports Writers and Sportscasters Association showed that its fifth annual sports celebrities dinner last Feb. 3 netted $30,625 for the Ontario Society for Crippled Children. Net from the previous four $34-a-plate luncheons was $80,967.

The report said also that funds provided by the association have paid for a main lodge at Lakewood Camp for Crippled Children near Port Colborne, a sleeping cabin at Northwood Camp near Kirkland Lake and a dressing-room at the Lakeshore swimming pool in the Toronto suburb of Long Branch. Funds from this year's dinner provided a start on a $60,000 main lodge at Merry-Camp in the Ottawa district.

The meeting laid preliminary plans for its sixth annual dinner, scheduled for Toronto Thursday, Feb. 21, 1957.

Latta Defeats City Juveniles By 5-1 Score

By GARRY ALEXANDER

Tipsely hitting by Latta gave them a 5-1 victory over the Belleville Juveniles crew here Saturday night in a South Hastings baseball fixture.

The winners took a 2-0 lead in the top of the third, but juveniles got one back in their half but another pair in the fourth wrapped it up. Latta added one in the fifth.

Harry Reid worked the first seven frames for Latta to gain the win. He gave up three hits and was stranded while fanning three and walking four. Stan Reid pitched the eighth without allowing a hit, whiffing one and walking one.

Lee St. Denis started and was charged with the defeat in five innings. He gave five runs on five hits, striking out three and issuing an equal number. Jack Gilby finished the next 1 2-3 innings, allowing two hits, fanning two and walking two. Art Wright threw to the last four batters, nipping three on strikes.

A walk to Mickie Latta set up the winner's initial runs as Doug Rollins smashed a drive that took deep centre field in the third. St. Denis tallied Belleville's lone run when he singled and Gilby sacrificed to second. He walked, went to third on Gary Little's single and scored on a wild pitch.

In the fourth, a walk to W. Gow, singles by Jack Stewart and Sullivan plus Little's throwing error netted a pair. G. Gow singled and W. Gow doubled with both for the final tally.

The juveniles hit into a pair of twin killings, had one man put out on third and two more at the plate to end any possible rallies.

Doug Rollins paced the Latta nine with his homer and a triple while W. Gow doubled and singled. J. Stewart, G. Gow and Sullivan also hit safely.

Gary Little poked two singles for Belleville while John Barber tripled in the seventh to account for Belleville's hits.

Latta: G. Gow, Parks, Hazzard, W. Gow, Stewart, Sullivan, Ray, Glass, Meeks, Rollins, H. Reid, S. Reid.

Belleville: Walmsley, Little, St. Louis, Foster, Skelly, Craig, Barber, St. Denis, Gilby, Green. O'Neil Art Wright.

Play Better Golf

By Tommy Armour

Something that wrecks many iron shots is a grip that allows the club to twist or come loose some other way. This risk seems to be especially great because of the instinctive fear that there's going to be a shock when the iron club hits the ground. Your grip — again I remind you — should be primarily in the fingers. If your club gets too much into the palm of your hands, you'll clutch it so you'll not be able to whip it thru the ball, and your hold on the club probably will be jarred or twisted loose when the toe of the club hits the ball or the sole of the club strikes turf.

Four Colleges Heavily Fined By Conference

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The Pacific Coast Conference has boosted to $252,000 its fines against four members for infractions of the athletic code.

It climaxed 1956 levies Sunday by tagging the University of Southern California for approximately $62,000 and the University of California at Los Angeles $25,000.

Previously UCLA was stunned with a $93,000 fine and Washington $53,000.

In all cases except California the penalties also involved probation for athletes and suspension of schools from participation in the annual Rose Bowl football game. The bulk of the fines was loss of Rose Bowl receipts at an estimated $36,000 a year for each school.

USC was suspended from the Rose Bowl for two years by the conference representatives, who decide such things. USC also was fined $10,000 for withholding information in athletic code violations from the conference commissioner Victor O. Schmidt.

Two USC track men and 44 football players were penalized one year's eligibility for accepting payments in violation of the code.

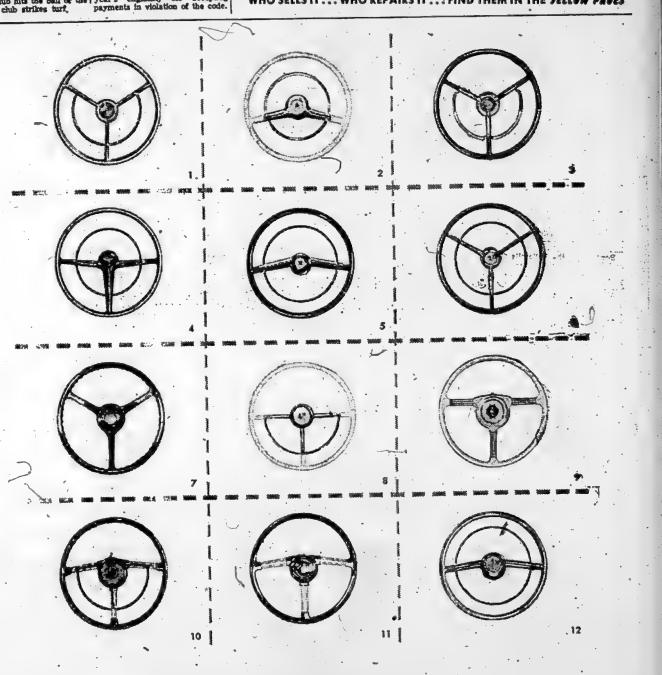
Long Trying To Be 'Babe' Says Bragan

NEW YORK (AP)—Pittsburgh manager Bobby Bragan Sunday put the rap on his star hitter, Dale Long, accusing the first baseman of "trying to be Babe Ruth" and being responsible for the Pirates' recent tailspin.

"If Dale Long would stop trying to be Babe Ruth and start being Dale Long again, we'd be all right," the Pittsburgh skipper said, trying to explain the Bucs' fall from first place in the National League to fifth.

"Dale is a .290 hitter normally, and that's where I want him to be—normal. Right now, he's at .300, but it's a shidding .300. He's made only two hits in his last 53 at-bats and none in his last 17."

TAKES YACHT TROPHY



ROCHESTER, N. Y. (AP)—Laurie Muir of the Royal Canadian Yacht Club of Toronto Saturday won the O'Keefe Cup Dragon class sailing regatta as Canadian entries swept the first six places in the five-race series.

Bryden Sutcliffe, also of the Royal Canadian Yacht Club, finished second in the series, sailed over the Rochester Yacht Club's course on Lake Ontario.

"I almost saw you pitch last time but I didn't get here till the second inning. By that time, of course, you were gone!"

MEET MR. JUDD!

The brightest mound star to flash across the softball horizon for some years in this district will show his wares here next Saturday night.

Ray Judd, who has been cutting a wide swath in softball hurling circles the past two years, will be here with the Lakefield team of the Peterborough Softball League in an exhibition tilt with the Point Anne Canoeinnes.

Judd, a Mormon missionary, whose tosses have been splitting platters with bullet-like speed, is rated one of the best fastball tossers in Ontario in this neck of the woods in some years.

Judd has struck out 16 games without getting the strikeout record being in the two-figure column. Few have seen four balls write by them for Judd's control is said to be exceptionally good for a football hurler.

And he has an assortment of deliveries. Many a potential home-run hitter has seen that overzive pellet streaking at him at breakneck speed straight across the centre of the plate only to drop sharply when one or two feet from the plate.

And he has a pitching record that is a hurler's dream. We do not know the exact figures, but he hurled ten league games or so many victories with an average of 15.7 strikeouts. In his last appearance he whiffed 21.

Judd is practically a one-man show in himself. Reports state that tremendous crowds turn out at either scheduled or exhibition games when he is slated for mound duty. The near-monotony of seeing batters go down in one-two-three order apparently does not affect the fans. They love to see that ball smoke across the plate.

Meanwhile, down at Ox Point, the Canoeinnes are all pepped up over the affair. They feel that opportunities cannot win ball games and while they have a wholesome respect for Judd's ability, the boys have no fear of his prowess. In fact the slogan at the moment is "Feed Judd." They may not do that but the prevailing spirit indicates they're going to make a right tasty try.

Taking it from any angle it should be quite a softball hassle. Pat Marsele, the spoken Indian, who has been enjoying one of the best seasons of a catcher career, is in peak form right now. If Pat comes up with one of his homer hurling chorus, the fans could well see a "Battle of the Judds."

We are not aware of the fielding records of the Lakefield squad, but if Marse Judd has as good a defensive team behind him as has Marsele then his chances for victory are good. It is logical to assume that with Judd's whiff record, his infield and outfield have not been overburdened with work.

So all in all it looks like softball fandom hereabouts is in for a rare treat come Saturday next at the CNR Recreation Park. On Point and Lakefield mingle in a battle of hurlers. The festivities are slated to start at seven o'clock. And the price of admission is only two bits with the ticket entitling you to a chance at a door prize.

HARNESS RACING

Harness racing returns to the city on Wednesday night after a week's layoff. And it may be the last show.

Despite the fact that this part of Ontario is reputed to be a "harness racing centre," the crowds attending the opening meets sponsored by the Kinsmen Club have been disappointing.

"I cannot understand the apathy of the public in a community that was raised on this sport," mused Kinsmen Don Thomas, standing light of the club's racing activities. "We have given it the best racing procurable yet the folks have failed to turn out in the expected numbers."

According to veteran racing men, the meets staged thus far by the Kinsmen have been the best, most exciting and finest organized racing affairs in this part of Ontario. The best racing horsefresh in the district has congregated here and even the rankest layman could not help but thrill to the closeness and excitement of clustered finishes.

Again on Wednesday night an outstanding meet has been arranged with the best of the horses which have raced here before present, augmented with new ones. Kinsmen Thomas said it is the best meet of the season and even more exciting heats should be upcoming.

"We are classifying the horses for this meet," he said. "The best horses in one class will be placed in a lower one, and the slower trotters will be raced in a higher class. This should equalize the abilities of the horses engaged. There will be four races on the two-dash plan."

"The Kinsmen Club has done its best to bring the top in the districts harness horse here, and the meets from a racing point of view have been a decided success. But the public has not been turning out, and the Kinsmen may have to drop the project if the attendance does not warrant its continuance," he said.

Entries for Wednesday's meet will be published tomorrow.

PERFECT DAY

Don MacKinnon, who usually finishes second when going on a fishing junket with Mrs. MacKinnon, had a sole leaning the other day and came up with a batting average of 1.000.

With Mrs. MacKinnon in the wild and wooly west, Don who incidentally is the president of the Belleville Fish and Game Association, hiked his gear to a trout-infested creek somewhere "north of Maynooth" and came home with a jammed creel.

Fifteen beauties fell to his lure (his own tied flies) and Don called it a day. The brookers were all of good size and we can personally guarantee six of them made a beautiful picture sputtering brown in a sizzling skillet.

Dormant Hit Power Explodes In 11-1 Defeat of Pirates; Tigers Sweep 3 From Chisox

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

If the last-place New York Giants in the National Baseball League could get their hitters really rolling there's no telling where they might end up.

The Giants gave New York fans an infrequent glimpse of their batting power Sunday when they smashed seven home runs, one short of the major league record, in walloping Pittsburgh 11-1 in the first game of the doubleheader.

The inevitable happened in the second game. The Pirates came back to win 5-3 with Dick Groat's two-run double breaking a 3-3 tie in the eighth inning. This victory moved Pittsburgh to within one point of fourth-place St. Louis.

The Cardinals outhit Cincinnati 12-4 but nevertheless lost 3-2. Monte Irvin's ninth-inning grandslam homer gave Chicago Cubs a 10-6 decision over second-place Milwaukee. Brooklyn split two with Philadelphia, winning 9-2, then losing 3-2.

HOMERED TWICE

Willie Mays, Daryl Spencer and Wes Westrum each homered twice for the Giants. It was the first time they came within one home run of the record set by the Yankees against the As in 1939 and tied by the Braves against the Pirates in 1953.

The second game was a pretty loose pitching affair between the Bucs' Ron Kline and Al Worthington until the Pirates cut loose for three runs in the eighth. With the bases loaded reliefer Marv Grissom entered the game and was tagged by Dick Groat for an RBI double. A wild pitch got the final run home.

Hank Thompson's second homer of the day broke a 1-1 tie in the fourth inning. But Frank Thomas knotted it again in the fifth with his 14th homer.

LOADED THE BASES

Cincinnati made it when three walks loaded the bases in the seventh. Wally Post came through with a two-run single that tied it and all-star Gus Bell then drove in the clincher with an infield out. All-star Joe Nuxhall won his sixth with relief help.

The Cubs scored five in the ninth to beat the Braves, with Irvin's fourth grand-slammer handing Gene Conley the decision in relief. Gene Baker and Hobie Landrith also homered for the Cubs while Ed Mathews and Joe Adcock, who hit two, homered for Milwaukee.

Don Newcombe of Brooklyn retired 20 in a row and had a two-hit shutout until the ninth when Stan Lopata doubled and Del Ennis hit his 13th home run. The Phils took the afterpiece when Willie Jones, hitting in his 17th straight game, drove in Joe Adcock with the winning run in the sixth after Sal Maglie walked the bases full.

MARLENE WINS

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP)—Marlene Stewart, the Canadian women's champion and former British titlist, Saturday won her second straight Country Club of Rochester women's invitational golf championship.

Miss Stewart, from Fonthill, Ont., turned in a final round of 36-41—77 over the par 37-37—74 course, for a 54-hole total of 232.

The law of averages, Detroit Tigers and Al Kaline have caught up with Chicago White Sox and the American League pennant race is back to "normal" today—the New York Yankees lead it by 6½ games.

Chicago had closed to within 1½ games of New York just a week and a half ago, winning 12 of 14 on a home stand. But since then, the White Sox have lost eight of 16. And after what Detroit did to 'em this past weekend they're only 2-4 for their current home fling.

After just five victories in 22 games and with an 0-6 record against Chicago, the Tigers got it into to beat the Sox 12-3 Sunday—then peppered all-star pitchers Jim Wilson and Billy Pierce in a 36-hit, 9-inning slugfest 17-5 and 8-6 Sunday.

HEAVY HITTING

Kaline, the AL bat champ of 1955 who has been around .320 mark with a 2 - for - 13 record against Chicago, was 9-for-13 in the three games, added a home run, triple and four singles Sunday to drive in seven runs.

Yankees padded their lead with an 8-2 job on Washington that swept the three-game set. Mickey Mantle returned to the lineup and slugged once in three trips.

Cleveland edged to within two percentage points of Chicago, thumping Kansas City 17-3. And Boston, with Ted Williams socking his 19th home run and gaining his 1,500th run batted in, took two from Baltimore, 5-0 and 8-4.

Kaline, the young all-star outfielder who was hitting .371 at this stage a year ago, moved up to a .352 mark with his surge against the White Sox. His 12th homer came in a two-run second inning as the Tigers scored 14 runs off Wilson (11-5) in three frames of the opener. Paul Foytack won it. In the nightcap, Pierce (13-3) stayed around until a two-run sixth inning when singles by Harvey Kuenn and Kaline knocked him out. Frank Lary won his sixth with relief help.

HOMERED FOR YANKS

Bill Skowron, Gil McDougald and Hank Bauer, who hit two, had homers for the Yankees, who have won 12 of their last 14. All-star righthander Johnny Kucks won it in relief for an 11-4 record. Maudie wearing a brace on his injured right knee, stayed around for only four innings. Chuck Stobbs lost it.

Jim Busby walloped a three-run homer in the sixth for the Indians and they then packed it away with 11 runs in the seventh. Pitcher Bob Lemon hit a two-run pinch homer in the eighth, then saved Early Wynn's 10th victory.

Williams, who drove in five runs for the day, became the active player ever to bat home 1,500 runs with a pop fly single that started Boston on the job of overhauling a 4-0 Baltimore lead in the second game. All-star George Kell hit two homers for the Oriole runs. Williams—batting .358 — got his homer, a double, a single and a bases-loaded walk in the opener as Frank Sullivan won his eighth and first shutout of the season.

Doug Sanders First Amateur To Win Canadian Open Golf Championship

Defeats Pro Dow Finsterwald In Playoff-Round Thriller; Issue Settled at 16th Hole

By CHARLES BARRY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

POINTE CLAIRE, Que. (CP)—A soft - spoken, 22-year-old amateur golfer, competing in his first of open tournaments, is the new Canadian Open golf champion. He is the first amateur to win the feature the event.

He needed a playoff to pull it off, but Doug Sanders, a Miami Beach, Fla., insurance salesman, Sunday defeated pro average Dow Finsterwald of Bedford Heights, Ohio, in a one-hole playoff that took home the Seagram Gold Cup in the 47th annual Open.

Finsterwald, however, took top prize money of $2,400 in the $13,000 tournament. Sanders took only the Cup.

The playoff pair finished 72 holes with twin 273 scores, 15 under par. It was perhaps significant that the issue was settled at Bescorfield's 16th hole, the scene of Sanders' best shot of the tournament. The 16th was chosen as the start of the sudden - death playoff.

CHIPS IN FOOTER

Sanders chipped in a 30-footer for a birdie three in the last round. In the showdown he took a par four at the same hole to Finsterwald's five.

A flock of top American pros bowed to the boyish-looking unranked blasters. Among them were Marty Furgol of Lemont, Ill. who finished one stroke back with 274. Dick Mayer of St. Petersburg, Fla., started the tournament's last round with a sound lead and the best chance of all.

He became worse as Sanders, playing in the same threesome along with Doug Ford of Mahopac, N.Y., warmed up to his job.

Mayer was 15 under par starting the back nine Sunday when he lost control of his driver and putter and took a three-over-par 39. He finished with a 74, and 278 for the four rounds.

Furgol won $1,800, Mayer $1,600 and the veteran Ford carried home fourth - place prize of $1,200. At 277, Ford was a single stroke behind Mayer.

35 BREAK PAR

Next in line was Freddie Hawkins, the gangling Texas ironman from Paso, who earned $1,000 with his 278; Mike Fetchick of Mahopac, N.Y., and Gene Littler of Diego.

Art Wall, Jr., who posted 279s and won $750 each.

At 280 were Bo Wininger of Odessa, Texas, and a 6 defending champion Arnold Palmer of Latrobe, Pa. They won $350 each.

In all, 35 players broke par of 288 for the 72-hole distance. Sanders was the only amateur in this select group.

Sanders' 30 - foot chip on the 16th in the first playoff round helped he had stopped his swing because of a chattering TV camera - man. Sanders then sank the chip for a birdie. He birdied the par - five 18th as well, then awaited Finsterwald's arrival.

FIRST SINCE 1954

Sanders said: "I wasn't going to watch him putt on that last hole, but I peeked up just in time to see the ball run around the cup." Finsterwald, with a chance for a 16-under-par if he birdied the 18th, missed a five-footer and took a par five.

It was the first tournament recognized by the Professional Golfers Association won by an amateur since January, 1954, when Gene Littler won the San Diego Open one week before he turned professional.

Leading Canadians were Gordon Brydson of Toronto, Ernie Roros of Montreal's Kanawaki Club, and Johnny Herrick of Hull, Que. They all started 286, two under par, and won prizes of $140. In a playoff for special Canadian money, Brydson won a two-hole playoff and took the top $300, Boros won $200 and Herrick $100.

Low Canadian amateur was Jerry Magee of Toronto, who finished with 291, three over par.

Bedard, Fontana Meet in Tennis Finals

QUEBEC (CP)—Two Davis Cup players, Bob Bedard of Sherbrooke, Que., and Don Fontana of Toronto, meet today in the finals of the eastern Canada tennis championships.

Bedard, strongly favored in today's match, reached the finals Sunday by pounding out an easy 6-0, 6-4, 9-7 victory over Lawrence Barclay of Vancouver. Fontana, third-seeded in the tournament, had to go all out to edge veteran Henri Rochon of Montreal, the second-seeded player, 6-3, 1-6, 8-6, 1-6, 6-1.

The outcome was never in doubt in the match between Bedard and Barclay. The top - seeded Sherbrooke player took command from the beginning with his booming service and fine net play.

In Sunday's final Tuesday top-seeded Hanna Stacek took the measure of Shirley Fry, 6-2, 6-4 win over second-ranked Shirley Hartt. In the doubles Mrs. Hartt teamed with Eleanor Dodge to defeat Mrs. Stacek and Theresa Reis, 6-4, 6-3 to capture the crown. All finalists are Montrealers.

HOW TO BUY A GOOD USED CAR

When you consider the original value of any car when new, any reasonable price is a terrific saving and why use less than the same year and model priced higher than others?

The used car business today is so highly competitive that all dealers work on an exceedingly small margin of profit. Considering value, all cars are practically the same price. When the price of a car from one dealer is considerably below that asked by other for the same make, year and model — beware. Something is wrong! As always, you get exactly what you pay for!

We urge you to pay us a visit . . . inspect our cars . . . then shop around. We sincerely believe that you won't find better values anywhere in the district.

London Thumps Oshawa 12-9, Sox Lose Two

The league-leading London Majors maintained the top position in the Senior Intercounty Baseball League by defeating Oshawa Majors 12-9 in the first game of a doubleheader at London Saturday.

Majors were leading 11-8 in the nightcap when the game was called in the eighth inning because of a midnight curfew.

At Brantford the second-place Red Sox defeated St. Thomas Elgins 5-3 and 7-5 in both games of a Saturday doubleheader.

Pitcher Bob Simpson was credited with the win in the seven-inning opener at Brantford. He went six innings but was relieved by Dutch Perkins in the seventh when Oshawa made a last-inning rally. Cam Church went the distance for Elgins and was tagged for six hits.

In the nightcap, Don Mackay started for London and had given up eight runs and nine hits when the game was called. The ninth inning was played when Oshawa next visits London.

Brantford pitcher Al Covey hurled a three-hit ball in the first opener against St. Thomas. Danny Woden started the way for Red Sox in the second game. Although he was tagged for 12 hits, he struck out 12 opposing batters. Tom McGrattan hit a home run in each game for Red Sox.

Former Hawk Runs for Office

TIMMINS (CP)—Allan Stanley, a defenceman with Chicago Black Hawks of the National Hockey League, said Saturday he will be a candidate for the Progressive Conservative federal nomination in Timmins riding.

The nominating convention is to be held Sept. 15, while Stanley is slated to be in the Hawks' training camp at Welland. Karl Eyre of Timmins, a Liberal, represents the riding in Ottawa.

Stanley, 30-year-old native of Timmins, is following in the footsteps of the late Lionel Conacher, W. K. (Bobby) McDonald and Howie Meeker. They were hockey men who were elected to the House of Commons.

McDonald still represents Parry Sound-Muskoka for the Liberals. He was first elected in 1945.

Stanley may retire from the game if his political ambitions are realized. He said he has given consideration to thought of management and desires to serve his community.

Red-Hot Leafs Two Games Behind Royals

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The red - hot Toronto Maple Leafs take on the cellar-dwelling Bisons at Buffalo tonight in the International League's only scheduled game, after winning four out of five games from the first-place Montreal Royals.

A crowd of 18,385 sat in at Toronto Sunday as the second-place Leafs belted Montreal twice, 3-2 and 4-3, and moved to within two games of the league leaders. Tornto had won a pair Friday, and lost a single game to Montreal Saturday. Leafs have 16 victories in the last 20 games.

Loren Babe's two-run homer in the sixth inning of Sunday's opener followed Carl Sawatski's four-bagger in the fifth to give Eddie Blake his eighth victory. Billy Harris was charged with the loss, his sixth.

Lou Morton homered to open the second game, and the Leafs sewed up the seven-inning affair with four more runs in the second, making do on two walks, a double, two singles and two Royal errors.

JESS NEELD REFUELLING

Miami completed a sweep of the four-game series with the Jets at Columbus by edging 4-4 and 12-11. It was the seventh loss in eight games for Columbus during their current home stand. The fourth-place Marlins are five games out of first place.

Rochester, meanwhile, failed again to capitalize on the Montreal misfortunes. The third-place Red Wings were handed their third loss in a row by the visiting Buffalo Bisons, 9-1, and their seventh straight defeat at home. The fifth straight victory for Buffalo put them only one game behind Nicholas, who buried two-bit ball for his 10th victory.

At Richmond, the Havana Cubans and Virginians split. Havana won the first game 5-4 behind Rudy Minarcin's six - hit pitching, but Al Cicotte flipped a four hitter for Richmond in the nightcap for a 3-1 victory.

'Jackie' Shoots For Olympics Twelve Records Go at Meet

BY RON ANDREWS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP) — Jackie MacDonald, the blonde bomb of Canadian women's field events, is still fleeting her shoulders in record fashion. And every time she extends her energy she adds more weight to her chances of joining the Canadian Olympic track and field team.

Jackie was up to her old tricks again Saturday at the annual Ontario track and field championships. She set a Canadian record in the discus and added two other Ontario championships to boot.

The busy, - in - look - at Toronto school teacher heaved the discus 140 feet, 9¼ inches, bettering her own unofficial mark which she set two weeks ago by nine feet, 3¼ inches. The previous Ontario record, also held by Jackie, was 122 feet, seven inches, set last year.

Miss MacDonald put the shot 44 feet, 3¾ inches, breaking the old mark of 43 feet, 7½ inches set by her two years ago. She also added two feet, nine inches to the javelin record by heaving it 107 feet, 11 inches. The former mark was held by Marjorie Lawrences of Toronto.

SHARED TOP HONORS

Another hot Olympic prospect, Isobel Mitchell of Toronto, shared top honors in women's competition with Jackie. The 16-year-old lass broke the record for the 220-yard run with a time of 25.8 seconds. The old mark, held by Helen Moore of Hamilton, was 26.4 seconds, set in 1951. Miss Mitchell also tied the 80 metre hurdle mark in 12 seconds. Her coach, Gwen Hobbins of Toronto is co-holder of the record.

In all, there were 12 records smashed at the meet and another three tied. Seven of the new marks were posted by the male athletes while two of the records equalled were turned in by women.

Reg Darley, a native of Hull, Que., and a resident of Toronto for only nine months since coming to Canada, realized the upset of the meet when he defeated a host of favorites in the men's mile run.

Darley, making good use of the type of final kick which Roger Bannister made famous, spurted past Hamilton's Selwyn Jones midway through the final lap to win going away. His time of four minutes, 13.6 seconds bettered the old mark, held by Allan Clarke of Toronto, by three seconds.

A pair of Toronto runners attending American universities came through as expected. Joe Foreman, attending Notre Dame, made a fine, showing in the 220-yard run, his 22 seconds clipping one-tenth of a second from the record. Jack Parry of Windsor held the old mark.

Murray Cockburn, a student at the University of Southern California, ran the half-mile in one minute, 54.6 seconds. The old mark of one minute, 56 seconds was set by Harry Kennedy of Toronto last year.

The hop, step and jump was won by Ernie Meissner, Kitchener-Waterloo, with 43 ft. 7 ins.

ARGOS GET CENTRE

Are Cahills Relatively Rich Is Question Now Before House

By SAUL PETT

BETHANY, Conn. (AP)—Ray Cahill tries to keep his apprehension. When he returns home at night she tries to say hello to his wife before he says anything else.

He tries, but often fails. Usually, before any greeting, he finds himself asking: "Anything happen?"

The question pops out involuntarily, for the last time Ray and Jean Cahill have had more crises in their young lives than you get in an all-night, dealers-wild poker game.

$90,000 quizzicher

Now, as before, the larger question before the household is: Are the Cahills relatively rich or stone broke? Do they soon go back on relief, or will the relief time to hold on to their fully-paid-for home, station wagon and $25,000 bank account?

In 1953, Cahill, then a new brakeman for the New Haven Railroad, was flagging traffic at train crossing when a truck suddenly pinned him against a coupling. He was crippled for life. While the Cahills went on relief their lawyer sued the railroad on the ground the Cahills weren't properly prepared for the hazards of the job. They also filed suit against the truck driver.

It began a legal marathon.

Late in 1954 the Cahills won an award of more than $90,000 from a Federal Court jury in New Haven. The railroad appealed and won a reversal in Circuit Court by the U.S. Supreme Court set aside the reversal. The railroad asked the high court for a rehearing but was denied.

At this point, last Feb. 9, the railroad paid the $90,000 award plus interest. But the railroad returned it again to the District Court and this time—the third time that a court acted in the suit—the case was ordered returned to the Appellate Court for consideration of claimed errors by the trial judge.

EXPENSES HEAVY

Meanwhile, the Cahills say they have disposed of about $71,000, including $36,000 to their lawyer. If the Cahills finally win the relief rethrow, will the railroad try and could it get any or all of its money back?

Nobody, nor can answer with any certainty. The legal questions are complex, and not likely to be settled for months—

The human questions run painfully deep in the lives of Raymond Cahill, 36, who is husky and proud—a former high school football star, who now can't even help carry the groceries in his brunette wife, Jean; their three children — Jeanne, three years old, Patty, 3 months, and Raymond, Jr., five months.

Injuries to his spinal column left Cahill with little use of his legs. Putting all his weight on a cane, he can walk about briefly before pain and fatigue stop him.

HOUSE NEARLY FINISHED

The Cahills now live temporarily in his father's four-room house in the country near Bethany. Their own house, almost complete, is being built a couple of miles away.

The railroad says it won't seek to "add to the Cahill's hardship" if it wins in a second trial. Asked about the house, a spokesman said, "we have no intention of bearing down." Also, a bill has been introduced in Congress to allow the Cahills to keep their money and new possessions and reimburse the railroad if it wins. But nobody knows when or if the bill will pass.

Thus, the Cahills have reason to hope but have no way now of being certain where they stand—what they own and what they may have to give back. Uncertainty is contagious and Jeanne frequently asks her parents, "Are they going to take our new car away?"

"We tell her nobody will," says Cahill, "and we wish we would believe it."

Having lived on an emotional roller coaster for three years, the Cahills try not to discuss the suit among themselves. But the moment the radio comes on with a news program, they automatically fall silent—tensely silent.

WHERE MONEY WENT

According to Ray, they now have about $25,000 left in the bank and this is what happened to the rest:

$36,000 to lawyer Randolph J. Seifert of New York ("and we don't begrudge a penny of it; he has been a friend and will as two-year");

$13,500 for three-bedroom, Cape Cod house;

$5,000 paid back to city and state relief agencies;

$1,000 to a Christian Catholic charity ("our church helped us when we needed help most");

$2,500 for a station wagon ("out in the country, we'd be lost without a car");

$3,000 for furniture and other household items ("that sounds like a lot but we had to start from scratch");

$1,000 to pay back money borrowed from others in his family;

$3,000 for medical bills, other debts and living expenses since the award.

Ray has completed one year at State Teachers College in New Haven. In three more years he hopes to have his bachelor's degree, another year for a master—and then he hopes to teach high school mathematics.

"It'll be a while before I start earning any money again so we'll be living off the money left in the bank. That is, I hope we can. Somehow I have the feeling everything will be all right. But, of course, you can't help doubting a bit of the time. All I know is, we can't go back to living the way we were."

When the accident occurred, Ray had been a brakeman only three months, earning $75 a week when he worked a full week. He did occasional jobs on the side. We were living in a third-floor walkup in New Haven.

"Then suddenly," Ray recalls, "I was crippled. Jean had to help me get on my shoes, do everything."

Feb. 3 they got the big cheque from the railroad and the whole world changed. On May 16, the cheque called the world changed again. The Supreme Court had overturned itself. The award was once more in doubt.

There are some slams that stick out so far you would have to be blindfolded not to see them after the first bid or two. Such was the case with the deal you see here:

NORTH
♠A K J
♥A K J 6 4
♦A Q 3

WEST	EAST
♠5 7	♠6 5 3
♥Q 9 2	♥10 8 7 3
♦K 10 8	♦7 6 5 4
♣Q 7 6 5 2	♣9 8 4

SOUTH
♠Q 10 6 4 2
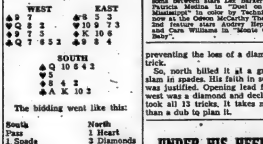
♦8 4 2
♣K J 10 3

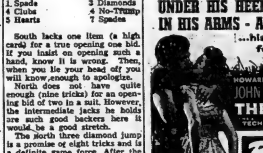
The bidding went like this:

South	North
1 Pass	1 Heart
1 Spade	3 Diamonds
3 Clubs	4 No-Trump
5 Hearts	7 Spades

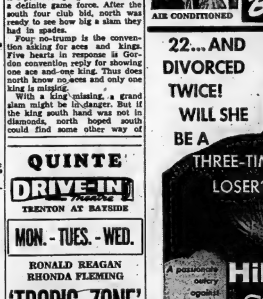
South lacks one item (a high card) for a true opening one bid. If you loaded on opening such a hand, know it is wrong. Then, when you lie your head off you will know enough to complete.



North does not have quite enough (nine tricks) for an opening bid of two in a suit. However, the intermediate jacks he holds are such good backers here it would be a good stretch.



North's three diamond jump is a promise of eight tricks and is a definite game force. After the south four club bid, north was ready to see how big a slam they had in store.



Four no-trump is the convention asking for aces and kings. Five hearts in response is Gordon convention reply for showing one ace and one king. That does north know no aces and only one king is missing.

With a king missing, a grand slam might be in danger. But if the king south hand was not in diamonds, north hoped south could find some other way of preventing the loss of a diamond trick.

So, north billed it at a grand slam in spades. His faith in south was justified. Opening lead from west was a diamond and declarer took all 13 tricks. It takes more than a dub to plan it.

Festival's Second Annual Season of Music Is Success

By BILL ROE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

STRATFORD (CP) — A lusty, cynical commentary on woman's chastity, Benjamin Britten's opera, The Rape of Lucretia gave an exciting opening Saturday night to the Shakespearean Festival's second annual season of music.

Sung in English by an outstanding cast, with a libretto that makes no concession to the squeamish in evoking the licentious flavor of degenerate pre-Christian Rome, the opera swept a capacity audience to its feet in a position of praise at its conclusion.

The Metropolitan Opera's Regina Resnik was Lucretia, whose virtue was the talk of a Rome whose other leading citizens had wives with a taste for sex when hubby was at the wars.

Bass-baritone John Rubes was her husband, Collatinus, while Australian baritone Harry Monk-field, now of Toronto, was the rapist Etruscan Prince Tarquin.

MALE, FEMALE CHORUS

Soprano Jeanie Tourel and tenor John Vickers were the male and female chorus, who explain, comment upon and in places even participate in its action.

The opera, written just 10 years ago, was a daring and imaginative choice to open the season's broad program of dramatic, musical and contemporary serious music and of Shakespeare's 20th century jazz.

Canadian virtuoso pianist Glenn Gould of Toronto appears tonight as both artist and composer, playing with a quartet of string musicians by Arnold Schoenberg, Ernest Krenek and Alban Berg, and directing the group in a quartet composed by himself.

The festival also begins Wednesday with a concert by Wilbur de Paris and his New Orleans orchestra, pianist Willie (The Lion) Smith and Blues singer Jimmy Rushing.

STRIKING PRODUCTION

In Lucretia, Stratford's production is striking yet simple. Only settings adorn the stark, gray stage and atmosphere is conveyed by the costumes, the libretto and Britten's distinctive music, economically scored for 12 instruments. Thomas Mayer, director of the Halifax Symphony Orchestra, both conducts and plays the piano as continuous accompaniment for the recitative passages.

Some attention must yet be given to diction so that all the lines sing out clearly, especially as some of the choicer ones are set in the difficult upper register. For in Lucretia, Stratford is presenting with distinction and aplomb a work which if ventured by a Toronto vaudeville house likely would provoke an outcry.

CRITICAL COMMENT

What the critics said:

Robert O'Brien, Kingston Whig-Standard:

"The festival was indeed fortunate to be able to help upon the rich beauty of the voice of Regina Resnik, who played Lucretia, to complement the almost uniform magnificence of the voices of the men.

"There was little relief from the austerity and tragic quality of this work, but what little there was was let attractively by Glenn Gould's sprightly girlishness of Adelaide Bishop, Lucretia's maid. Miss Bishop's voice, which is also exquisitely balanced, charmed and delighted as audience and cast, perhaps, not entirely at its ease.

"Stratford has given us superb opera in English, sung with typical English modality, understood mostly and crystal clear. There is a fine musical experience in store for those who can take advantage of the opportunity."

Your Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars:

For Tuesday, July 10, 1946

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—A responsive day for new business, important undertakings, improving projects already started, holding conferences and keeping domestic relations harmonious. Use extra care in dangerous tasks.

April 21 to May 21 (Taurus)—Your Venus is among the planets well aspected now, start the day with highest motives, self-confidence. Much can be accomplished now enterprising.

MAY 22 to June 21 (Gemini)—You can step bravely, high reward for earnest efforts in all worthwhile endeavors. But don't fret if you are not as quick mentally as usual. Think well before acting.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—A clear, prosperous road ahead if your show your innate keenness and aptitude. Stone interests, work, business matters highly favored for gain, new advancement.

July 24 to August 23 (Leo) — Whatever your field of endeavor (if honest) you can accomplish now. Search for new advantages, opportunities.

August 24 to September 23 (Virgo) — Better financial security can be obtained, perhaps through hard work, by being faithful to your principals and making the best use of your talents. Worry, fear of failure never helps. Keep studying, improving; rest, too.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra) — There are many opportunities to be found now. Seek them out and capitalize on them to the best of your ability. Familiar duties and new activities equally sponsored.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio) — Strong, good aspects except where Saturn is concerned. This restrictive influence necessitates care in hazardous work, using machinery, tools, etc. Day otherwise is encouraging, invites your ingenuity, skill.

November 23 to December 21 (Sagittarius) — Top Jupiter and other aspects. There's no excuse for not being progressive and cheerful this good day. Combine your cleverness, ambition and most purposeful intents to obtain good results.

December 22 to January 20 (Capricorn) — Though Saturn's position suggests extra care in dangerous activities, the day on the whole should be energizing, helpful, opportune. Your path should not be too difficult. Be hopeful, ambitious.

January 21 to February 19 (Aquarius) — Be your most industrious and see how generous will be your returns. Get a quick and efficient start, then speed tempo reasonably as the day advances and the aspects grow better. Keep abreast of events.

February 20 to March 20 (Pisces) — Congeniality and pleasant events are indicated in your stars; also opportunities for advancement. Medicine, science, electronics especially favored. Be purposefully determined and ambitious. You can gain.

You born today have many talents and much capability. Never fear to try that which is honorable and which can advance your status in life. Be eager to learn; don't think you know all the answers. All can benefit by the experiences of others. You are endowed with common sense and good humor; could make excellent salespeople, journalists, actors or historians. You have a wonderful memory and a gift for telling interesting tales.

Birthdate: Jas. A. Whistler, artist; Sir William Blackstone, legal expert.

PROTEST SHOOTINGS

VIENNA (AP) — The Austrian government Saturday lodged shooting protests with Czechoslovakia and Hungary after frontier guards in two shooting incidents and arresting innocent people. Chancellor Julius Raab and Foreign Minister Leopold Figl called in Czechoslovak Minister Otakar Vasek Saturday and handed him a protest note on the July 4 wounding of a Vienna man who strayed across the border while fleeing from his wife and their two small sons.

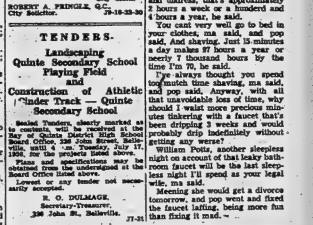
Pop was doing arithmetic on the back of a used envelope, and he said to me, I've been doing some figuring on the way I spend my time, and it's enough to make your hair stand on end. Now just for example I spend at least 5 minutes every morning between the time I get up, just yawning and stretching.

So does everybody else for land sakes, I said, and pop said, Of course they do, but how many realize that it adds up every morning means about 32 hours a year or more than 2,000 hours in a lifetime of 70 years. Just yawning and stretching, yee gods, he said.

It's not enough to be healthy thing to keep out of bed half asleep the moment you open your eyes, he said, and also pop said, One dressing and undressing. Allowing myself 20 minutes a day to dress and undress, that's approximately 2 hours a month, or a hundred and 4 hours a year, he said.



You cant very well go to bed in your clothes, he said, and pop said, And shaving. Just 15 minutes a day makes 97 hours a year or nearly 7 thousand hours by the time I'm 70, he said.

I've always thought you spend too much time shaving, ma said, and pop said, Anyway, with all that unavoidable loss of time, why should I wait more precious minutes tinkering with a faucet that's been dripping 2 weeks and would probably drip indefinitely without getting any worse?

William Potts, another sleepless student on account of that leaky bathroom faucet will be the last sleepless night I'll spend on account of wife, ma said.

Meaning she would get a divorce tomorrow and pop went and fixed the faucet lafting, being more fun than fixing it mad.

Violent Storm Hits London

LONDON (Reuters) —Violent thunderstorms brought chaos to London during the early morning rush hour today when subways were flooded by the heaviest rainfall in 15 years.

A London observatory recorded two inches of rainfall in a three hour period, just as suburbanites were starting to make their way to the city.

Several passengers fainted in one crowded subway train held 35 minutes between stations by floods. Train services were also halted.

Foreman Found After 72 Hours In Dense Bush

KIRKLAND LAKE (CP) — Gilbert Roy, 43-year-old lumber camp foreman lost for more than 72 hours in the bush, was found Saturday by a plane from the Ontario department of lands and forests.

He was in good shape and his three-day ordeal had left no severe after effects than a good hunger. He lost his way Wednesday when he tried to take a short cut through the woods 40 miles northwest of here in Sheba Township.

On Saturday morning Mr. Roy found a trapper's shack at the short of Gerry Lake in Terry Township. Then he heard a plane he had heard previously.

"I ran out to the lake and waded in to my knees and waved my shirt. The plane circled and came over again lower. Then it tipped its wings and I knew it had seen me."

Minutes later Dean Allen, lands and forests' pilot, landed his plane on the lake and picked up the man.

Planes Travel 1,600 Miles Hour At Air Show

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto businessman Edgar T. Alberts returned Saturday from a Russian air show and said he saw two Soviet planes that travelled at about 1,600 miles an hour.

Mr. Alberts, owner of an insurance company that bears his name, said he was told by Russian officials that the aircraft, a delta-wing fighter and a delta-wing bomber, were capable "of 2,000 miles an hour."

He was in Moscow for the recent annual Russian air show as a guest of the Soviet Union's central Aero Club and as a representative of the Canadian International Air Show.

Mr. Alberts asked Russian officials about the possibility of sending planes to the Canadian show here in September and "they were extremely interested." They will let him know their decision this week.

Stirling

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Bryer, Dick, Freddie, Gloria and Kenneth, of Trenton, have taken up residence on the Frankford Road in the River Valley community.

David Duncan, Provost of Stirling, Scotland, has sent greetings by cable to Reeve Russell West, of Stirling, Canada, which included good wishes from the Royal and Ancient Burgh of Scotland to its namesake in this great Commonwealth of Nations.

Mrs. Harold Bird and Allan are visiting at the home of her sister, Mrs. Harold Lowery, and Mr. Lowery at Calgary, Alberta, and they plan to be on hand for the Calgary Stampede.

Mrs. Herb Tavid spent the weekend in Toronto with her daughter, Phyllis. Miss David sailed on Tuesday on a tour of England and Europe.

Former Brantford Mayor Dies

BRANTFORD (CP) — Former Mayor John H. Matthews, 88, for 40 years a stereotyper with the Brantford Expositor, died Saturday.

Mr. Matthews, long a leader in Brantford's labor movement, had been at work as usual Friday. The funeral is to be Tuesday afternoon.

He came to Brantford in 1916 from the Channel Islands, where he was born. He was an organizer of the CCF party here and was a CCF candidate in one federal election.

First elected an alderman in 1938, he served several years before becoming mayor for 1946 and 1947. He was a past president of the Trades and Labor Council and a member of the International Stereo Typers and Electroplaters Union.

News Reports Are Criticized By Prosecutor

VANCOUVER (CP) — Newspaper reports of the arrest of jockey Galvin Eustace, 29, on a charge of attempted extortion from Vancouver sportsman Jack Diamond were criticized in police court here Saturday by city prosecutor Stewart McMorran.

He said he was "compelled to take the course of requesting an adjournment in this case because the stories appearing in both The Herald and The Sun have the effect of trying and convicting the accused before his appearance in court."

He said he would "under no circumstances" accept a plea Saturday from Eustace, who was remanded to Thursday on the extortion charge.

Mr. McMorran said he was asking for the adjournment on behalf of the accused "so that he may consider his petition and take legal advice if he wishes in regard to the effect of the stories on his forthcoming trial."

Saved His Money

LONDON (CP) — Pete Wilson, 11-year-old Toronto schoolboy, flew in alone Saturday from Canada for a self-financed holiday.

Pete is going to stay with grandparents at Bognor Regis.

"I saved up the money to come here by delivering papers, washing dishes and emptying garbage cans," the self-reliant young Canadian told his grandfather Reg Usher, at London airport.

LINER ARRIVES

Birds Menace Flying in Queensland

SYDNEY, Australia (CP) — In the last few weeks birds have caused six air accidents in outback Queensland.

A kite hawk smashed through the windscreen of a DC3 airliner at Cloncurry, causing an emergency landing.

A galah stopped an engine of a French airliner near Longreach by flying into its intake.

A curlew, sucked into a jet motor, caused a Canberra bomber to crash-land during a night takeoff from Garbutt air base, Townsville.

A hawk crashing into the nose of another Canberra caused a forced landing at Charleville.

A hawk brought down an air force photographic - survey Mosquito, also at Charleville.

The director of the civil aviation department in Queensland, E. Huntley Fry, said: "These birds are a menace, and we admit we just haven't got the answer."

'Grand Strategy' Throws New Light On Second War

LONDON (Reuters)—Wrangling between Sir Winston Churchill and President Roosevelt over the conduct of the war in the Mediterranean left Britain's prime minister feeling furious and ill-treated an official British war history revealed Sunday.

But the book said that with all the differences existing then between Britain and the United States, a fundamental and indestructible sense of unity remained the foundation of their alliance.

The book, Grand Strategy, August, 1943—September, 1944, published for the first time minutes and telegrams written by Churchill to Roosevelt.

It threw new light on Churchill's opposition to landings in the South of France to help out the Allies' fighting in Normandy. It also revealed that British considered stopping Arctic convoys to Russia when Stalin refused to co-operate with the West during the Warsaw uprising.

Trade Increases Between Reds, Non-Red Nations

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) Trade between Communist and non-Communist countries is on the increase, the UN reported Sunday in its annual world economic survey.

This includes trade with Red China even though a UN embargo is still on the books banning shipment of strategic materials to the Chinese mainland.

The United States and Canada—dealt with as a unit — remained one of the few major non-Communist areas which failed to show any substantial trade with the Communists. Even here some gains were reported.

The big increases were in Western Europe, Asia and the Middle East.

"During the first half of 1955," the report said, "the trade of the centrally planned economies with the rest of the world increased by 15 per cent compared with the same period of 1954."

In UN terminology "centrally planned economies" means those of the Communist countries.

Propeller Blade Kills Woman Plane Passenger

Jagged Piece of Metal Knifes Through Fuselage

WINDSOR (CP) — A five-way investigation opened today into the accident that dislodged the propeller of a Trans-Canada Air Lines Viscount airliner Monday, killing a woman passenger and injuring five others.

A section of the propeller blade shot through the cabin of the TCA plane at 8,000 feet as it was heading from Chicago to Toronto with 31 passengers aboard. The pilot made an emergency landing at Windsor airport with only two of the engines operating.

The mishap occurred over Flat Rock, Mich.

Today's investigation was opened by TCA; Rolls-Royce, English makers of the aircraft's Turbo-prop engines; Vickers-Armstrong, Ltd., who build the Viscounts; the department of transport, which controls civil aviation in Canada, and the civil aviation authority.

Killed was Mrs. Mary Carolyn Lippert of Hanover, Ont. The upper part of her body was mangled. Her two infant sons, sitting beside her in the front section of the airliner, escaped serious injury.

Mrs. Lippert was the wife of Dr. Robert Lippert of the Mayo Clinic at Rochester, Minn. He is a native of Kitchener.

One of the injured was in critical condition, Christopher Dunbell, 29, of Dubuque, Iowa, suffered a badly-mangled left leg and severe burns. His wife and three-year-old son received less severe leg injuries.

CARRIED 26

The Viscount, Flight No. 304, was carrying 31 passengers, two stewardesses and a two-man crew from Chicago to Toronto when it ran into engine trouble.

A piece of the propeller blade from the outside starboard engine broke off, sliced through the cabin, Mrs. Lippert and smashed through the starboard side of the aircraft. The blade sheared about a foot off the top of seats on both sides of the aisle.

Eden and Lloyd Plan to Visit Moscow Next May

LONDON (Reuters) — Prime Minister Eden announced today that he and Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd will pay a 10-day visit to Moscow next May.

Their trip repays the visit here last April of Soviet Prime Minister Nikolai Bulganin and Communist party secretary Nikita Khrushchev.

Mother Held in Drownings of Three Children

VILLE MARIE, Que. (CP) — A 33-year-old mother is being held by police as a material witness in the death by drowning of her three young children Monday in Lake Temiskaming.

Mrs. Paul Bergeron of nearby Laverlochere was taken into custody after three children into a home by this community on the Ontario border some 200 miles northwest of Ottawa, with her clothes dishevelled.

The bodies of the children—Paulette, 5, Andre, 2, and Joanne, 8—were found a short time later in the lake near here. Police said the water is only three feet deep at the spot. A truck owned by the Bergerons was abandoned on the shore.

DROVE IN TRUCK

Police said Mrs. Bergeron had loaded the children into the truck and driven the 13 miles here from her home.

Residents of the area said Mr. and Mrs. Bergeron have both been sick recently. Mr. Bergeron, 31, was said to be suffering from tuberculosis.

Mrs. Bergeron was detained by provincial police at Lorrainville Airway, Ontario highways officials said today.

Monday a small plane landed on Highway 401 near Oshawa when it ran short of fuel. It took off after being refueled. Police blockaded the highway for a time.

Highway officials said a circuller, telling police to see that such aircraft were dismantled and towed away, was in the mail at 3 p.m.

The bodies of the children were taken to the morgue in nearby Lorrainville. Dr. J. P. Valcourt, provincial pathologist, also left Montreal for here to make post-mortem autopsies on the victims.

Today's Chuckle

The country boy, doing a haying job, was told he wouldn't get his money until he submitted a statement. After much meditation he produced the following:

"Three goos and three cows backs at four bits per week—$3."

THE WEATHER

The convoy was part of a big French drive into the region between Blida and Palestro Monday, scene of frequent attacks on French patrols. The ambush took place near Alestro, 35 miles southwest of this capital city.

Bank Teller Pleads Guilty To $10,000 Theft

Mrs. Kathleen Glancey, former teller at the Bank of Montreal, here today pleaded guilty to four charges involving theft of over $10,000 from the bank.

The 34-year-old mother of three young boys, appeared in magistrate's court this morning, arraigned on three charges of forgery and one of theft by conversion.

Mrs. Glancey was arrested yesterday afternoon by city police inspector Claire Hayes, who conducted the police inquiry. The arrest followed investigations by senior officials of the bank when an apparent irregularity—in a voucher was discovered.

Today Magistrate T. Y. Wills remanded the case until Friday morning when Mrs. Glancey will likely be brought down for sentence and the court will hear defence counsel John O'Flynn speak on her behalf.

The forgery charges involve sums of $2,483, on nineteen cheques forged between May 1954 and May 1955; one cheque for $3,100 in July 1955 and five cheques in March, April, February and March 1954.

The theft charge involves conversion of $3,171 on 32 different bank deposits between January 1954 and April of this year.

Mrs. Glancey, who lives at 156 Albert Street, is the wife of a purchasing agent at Northern Electric Company here.

She appeared in court this morning, escorted by Mrs. Robert Scott, wardress of the county jail.

INSPECTOR HEARD

Only evidence heard was that given by Inspector Claire Hayes. Throughout the proceedings Mrs. Glancey sat with head bowed and sobbing quietly into a handkerchief.

Inspector Hayes presented the court with most of the cheques involved and also deposit slips. "The forged cheque" for $2,100 was not available, he said. "Other deposits were found to be short in their amounts," he added.

SOME SLIPS NOT FOUND

Five other deposit slips were concerned, the latter were not found. "However, Mrs. Glancey had admitted to them," he said.

He told the court Mrs. Glancey was born in Montreal and was married in 1943. While in Montreal she worked for seven years with the Canadian Bank of Commerce. She came to Belleville in 1948 with her husband and family. She now has three sons, ranging in age from 10, to 9 and 7 years.

She started work at the Bank of Montreal late in 1953 and was employed there until May of this year.

"In the five years between her coming to Belleville and starting work at the bank she had suffered several illnesses which had necessitated hospitalization five times, the inspector said.

Mr. O'Flynn, speaking briefly for Mrs. Glancey, told the court that Mr. Glancey earned about $5,000 a year. Mrs. Glancey had undergone about three major operations since she came to Belleville.

Mr. O'Flynn will speak for his client more fully Friday morning.

Howe Says Wheat Sales Set Pace For Big Exports

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada is on her way to record exports and wheat is playing a major role in her remarkable upswing, Trade Minister Howe told the Commons Monday night.

He said demand for wheat began to pick up about last October and November and "there followed a period of sustained buying unique in my experience as minister of this department."

"Within the last few months we have seen the heaviest wheat movement of all our ports in steady and large volume. Exports of wheat and flour will probably reach and perhaps exceed 360,000,000 bushels during the crop year 1955-56, an increase of 50,000,000 bushels over the previous year when exports were at about average or normal levels."

As far as other main exports were concerned, Mr. Howe said Canada is expecting "about as much as is available for export." The most important limiting factor was supply, not demand.

Mau Mau Drive Against Whites Near Collapse

NAIOBI, Kenya (Reuters)—The Mau Mau terror campaign to drive the white man out of this British colony is "fairly collapsing," according to latest statistics announced here.

A British Army spokesman said there were less than 900 of the African terrorists still at large in Kenya. He said security forces were concentrating on the remaining hard core of militant Mau Mau, still lurking in the forests and lied by fear or allegiance to the few remaining terrorist leaders.

Authorities declared a state of emergency in October, 1952, against the Mau Mau menace, which was largely concentrated in the Kikuyu tribe—largest in Kenya. Up to January this year, security forces had killed 10,173 terrorists, captured 2,247 and 2,214 had surrendered. Thirty-two white settlers and 37 members of the security forces have been killed by Mau Mau.

Drew Critical Of Government's Trade Policies

OTTAWA (CP)—Russia has established a "terrible sovereignty" over the colonial nations, he the world, Opposition leader Drew said Monday.

He told the Commons that by one of the strangest ironies of history this sovereignty emerges at the very time when, by the voluntary acts of other great powers, colonial systems elsewhere have been disappearing.

"The reality of Russian domination of nearly one-third of the world's people and the reality of the attempts of Russia to affect our life in so many ways . . . impresses upon us the need for examining our position and considering how best we can strengthen ourselves not only for the immediate present but for the long years which lie ahead."

Referring to the world situation as he opened an hour-long criticism of the government's trade and economic policies, Mr. Drew said he hoped the Commonwealth would emerge as the central core of international understanding.

Referring to Prime Minister St. Laurent's attendance at the London meeting of Commonwealth prime ministers, Mr. Drew said his party regrets that the Canadian government did not issue an invitation for the holding of a Commonwealth trade and economic conference in Ottawa.

He hoped it would be possible to issue such an invitation in the near future.

Police arrested Gates Kersburg of Buffalo and charged him with robbery after the holdup of the Manufacturers and Traders Trust Company in the Adam, McGraw and Anderson department store.

Will Not Make Representations To Polish Govt.

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Pearson said Monday it would be useless and perhaps unwise for the Canadian government to make any formal representations to Poland's Communist government about the Poznan uprising.

He was replying in the Commons to urgings from CCF leader Coldwell Monday and John Diefenbaker (PC—Prince Albert) last week that Canada ask the Polish government to deal mercifully with those arrested at Poznan.

Mr. Pearson said any official request by Canada might be considered by the Polish government as an unwarranted interference in the country's domestic affairs and might be to the detriment of the Poznan people.

CPR Officials Will Reply to Charges Made

OTTAWA (CP)—The Commons agricultural committee will hold at least one more session after a session to hear CPR officials reply to charges that the railway over a six-week period failed to provide sufficient boxcars for movement of western grain.

The committee voted 14 to 13 Monday after words of a motion by Hazen Argue (CCF — Assiniboia) that CPR President N. R. Crump or his officials be called as witnesses on the boxcar issue.

Either Mr. Crump, now in Europe on a trip, or another railway official designated by him will be called. The meeting is expected to be held late this week or early next week.

Mr. Argue proposed his motion following a statement last Friday by Transport Controller Roy W. Milner that between March 15 and April 30 the railway had let him down badly when he requested an increased flow of boxcars. He said he had to appeal to Mr. Crump for action.

Taxes on Beer May Be Raised

TORONTO (CP) — Provincial taxes on beer are under review, W. H. Collings, chief commissioner of the Liquor Control Board of Ontario said Monday night.

He denied reports that the government and brewing companies have reached a deadlock on the beer tax discussion.

An increase in taxes at the brewery level apparently is on the way, it was reported. Brewing companies maintain they can't absorb a tax increase without a price increase.

Beer prices are set by the Ontario government and the control board is seeking a way to gain more revenue and yet not force an increase in prices on beer drinkers.

The Ontario government collected $7,600,000 in taxes from breweries last year. A tax of 8.7 cents a gallon on Ontario-produced beer and 9.5 cents on "imported" beer, is made.

Grease Explodes, Home Is Burned

HAMILTON (C)—The home of James Oulton, Saltfleet Township, burned to the ground Monday night when grease exploded in the kitchen.

Mr. Oulton said his daughter was preparing a supper when grease from a fryer splashed on to the hot stove element and exploded.

Loss was estimated at between $15,000 and $20,000.

Delegates Uphold Board's Action In Dismissal

TORONTO (CP) — Delegates to the American Newspaper Guild convention Monday night upheld the action of their international executive board in the dismissal last October of Eva Jollos, a Guild employee with more than 10 year's service.

Delaying their entertainment program for more than four hours for an unscheduled night session to discuss the dismissal, which stirred considerable controversy within the Guild, delegates approved the board by a vote of 36 to 146.

Miss Jollos had been dismissed by William J. Farson, the Guild's executive secretary, on charges of inefficiency. A special committee earlier this year reviewed the case and found that a relatively supported executive vice-president was justified in the immediate surprise for eight years, in last year's circulation campaign.

Mr. Farson succeeded Mr. Novak as executive vice-president.

Paper Declares Mayor and Police Harassing It

READING, Pa. (AP) — The Reading Times says Mayor Daniel McClosky and the Reading police force have begun a "large-scale harassment" of The Times and the Reading Eagle.

The newspaper says its representatives were locked out of the city hall press room, one reporter was arrested and newspaper delivery trucks were issued 39 traffic tickets within a half hour.

The Times, a morning paper in this city of 110,000, and The Eagle, an afternoon paper, both reported their representatives were unable to obtain any reason from the mayor for the alleged action.

Police Chief Bernard Richards has declined any comment on the newspaper's statement.

TROIS'RIVIERES, Que. (CP)—A 23-year-old convict who escaped from penitentiary with two other prisoners June 29 was sentenced Monday to seven additional years after he admitted committing a $20,000 bank holdup less than 24 hours before he was recaptured last Friday.

Two Penguins Go Down Drain Of Pool at Zoo

Here's a lesson for pool cleaners: remove the penguins first.

The pool cleaners at the Philadelphia zoo didn't—and a young pair of the waddlers went down the specimen drain. One was recovered by a fisherman from the Schuylkill River, where the drain eventually empties. The other is still afloat somewhere.

We confess a sneaking respect for one commodity salesman who fooled the Commies—albeit by morally dubious means. Seems he managed to sell hollow aluminum artificial leg with cavity, coffee and spices in West Berlin, then whisk over the border into East Berlin in his motorized wheelchair. He made a neat profit — until the border goodness ultimately caught up with him.

More and more businesses—from artificial limbs to shipbuilding — similarly find aluminum a valuable aid to sales and profits. Further major expansion of Alcan's smelters in both Quebec and B.C. is aimed to satisfy the continued increasing demand for the light metal.

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — As if he didn't have troubles enough, toothless Irvin Harris, 39, almost got arrested as a robber.

But when the proprietor's daughter, Dorothy Priest, saw the bandkerchief around Harris' face, she dashed back and told her father they were about to be robbed. The father, John Priest, phoned police.

Finally, Harris was able to make himself understood through his sore gums and his handkerchief, and the cops let him go.

Named Winner Of Road-E-O

OTTAWA (CP) — Eighteen-year-old Tony Seale of West Vancouver, B.C., Monday night was named winner of Canada's first annual teen-age Road-e-o.

He topped 27 other national finalists in four days of interviews written tests and driving tests both on Ottawa city streets and in a drill hall, aimed at judging contestants' safe driving skill and knowledge.

Harry Miller, 17, of Moncton, N.B., and Ronald McGraw, 18, of Yorkton, Sask., tied for second place.

Hilary Richards, 18, of Lachine, Que., placed third in the event sponsored by the Junior Chamber of Commerce of Canada and the Canada Insurance Federation.

A $1,000 scholarship, paid to the winner's school, will go to the winner, with $500 scholarships for each of the second place contestants and one for the third prize.

Seale finalists included Henry Korman, Noranda, Que.; James H. Gerow, Brockville; Raymond Lymer, Oshawa.

Aegean Islands Quake Largest of Century

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — The deadly shaking earthquake which hit the Aegean Islands off Greece was "perhaps the largest" European shock of the 20th century, a seismologist said Monday.

Dr. Charles Richter of the California Institute of Technology estimated the quake's magnitude at 8 on a scale which rates the largest shocks ever record at 8.8.

Dr. Richter said other European earthquakes of about the same magnitude occurred in 1926 and 1903. Both centred off the shores of Greece.

Israel Charges Two Men Killed In Desert Ambush

JERUSALEM (AP)—United Nations observers today investigated Israeli charges that two Israelian employees of an Israel mining company were slain in a desert ambush near the Jordan border.

Jordan in turn reported that a civilian, irrevocably an Israeli, was killed in an exchange of gunfire between Israeli and Jordanian forces in the Jerusalem area. Jordan said three companions of the dead man were captured.

A group of civilian visitors to the Ramatha Rachel settlement south of Jerusalem was machine-gunned but nobody was hit.

The Israeli-owned mineral ammonite commission met in Jerusalem today to discuss the wounding of an Israeli civilian guard when a land mine set off a mine near the Jordan frontier at Arad.

USSR Ended War With 27 Million Less Persons

NEW YORK (CAP) — The Soviet Union ended the Second World War with approximately 27,000,000 fewer inhabitants than it had at the start of the war.

During the school year just past the first five grades of the Soviet school system had 8,000,000 fewer pupils than there were in 1940—representing some 8,000,000 Soviet children unborn as a result of war conditions.

These facts emerge from analysis of the first official Soviet population figures released in 17 years. They were published in a manual of Soviet statistics.

This manual demonstrates that Joseph Stalin lied when he declared after the war that Soviet war losses amounted to 7,000,000 persons. The real figure was several times that—not only soldiers but even to a greater extent of civilians.

ECONOMISTS MISLED

Here are some of the figures given in the Soviet statistical publication:

The population April 1, 1956 was 200,000,000. The U.S. census bureau estimated the American population on the same date at 167,000,000.

The present Soviet population is some 30,000,000 less than most Western students of Soviet population and economics have been estimating for the Soviet Union in recent years.

The Soviet birth rate during the last five years has averaged between 24.9 and 26.8 per thousand persons. Between 1950 and 1954 the U.S. birth rate averaged between 23.6 and 25.0.

The Soviet death rate has ranged recently between 8.4 and 9.3 per thousand and is currently put slightly below the American death rate estimated for 1955 at 9.3 per thousand. The Soviet death rate is explained in part by the fact that the Soviet Union has war among older people, leaving relatively few of them to die after the war. Development of the Soviet public health system has also been a factor.

Australia Says Disarmament Would Aid Reds

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) Australia warned today against any big-power disarmament agreement that would leave the Communists with the largest military force in Asia.

Australian delegate R. Ronald Walker delivered the warning to the 13-country United Nations disarmament commission. The commission is discussing the unsuccessful talks of its sub-committee held in London March 19-May 4 by British, Canada, France, the Soviet Union and the United States.

Walker remarked that disarmament proposals advanced by both the major Western powers and the Soviet Union emphasized the European and North Atlantic area.

He said any formula fixing the size of various countries' forces must "take account of the respective abilities of the great powers in relation to collective security problems in Asia as well as in other areas."

"It is common knowledge that present Communist military manpower in Asia (particularly if Soviet Asia is included) enormously outweighs the military strength maintained by the non-Communist countries in Asia and the Pacific area."

Seasoned by a series of quakes in recent years, the Greek government sped aid to the stricken areas.

King Paul and Queen Frederika interrupted a holiday on the island of Corfu to hasten to Thira by destroyer.

TO DISCUSS AID

U.S. Ambassador Cavendish Cannon met with Karamanlis to discuss possible American assistance for the quake victims. Ignoring the jibter Greek - British dispute over Cyprus, the British charge d'affaires offered help from the British Mediterranean fleet.

However, the Greek government, bitter over the Cyprus issue, refused the British offer and relief ships which had already left the island of Malta were ordered to return.

Crews of the Greek destroyers Dauna and Adrias were the first to reach Thira. They helped bring the dazed, ore first aid to the injured and buried the dead. A temporary hospital was set up, powered by the only electric generator on the island.

Government reports said most of the houses on the island had been wrecked and the rest were uninhabitable. One Greek reporter said that 2,000 homes were destroyed.

CANADA'S EATING HABITS CHANGE

Bankers are only human and it should, therefore, occasion no great surprise to learn that the higher echelon of one of Canada's chartered banks is showing more than a passing interest in the latest styles. What may raise eyebrows, however, is to discover that this interest is business, rather than pleasure, as far as the bankers are concerned.

Styles decree the slim silhouette. This is one of the reasons why Canadians today are worried about getting fat. This concern with the human figure has resulted in Canadians eating "noticeably less butter, fewer potatoes and cereals, particularly flour," according to the June issue of the Canadian Bank of Commerce "Commercial Letter." It is easy to see how the condition of the human figure can influence those figures in the bank's ledgers and therefore call for a study by the economic research department of the bank.

The statistics which this study produced are interesting. The pre-war per capita consumption of flour in Canada was 181 pounds. It dropped to an average of just over 150 pounds for the 1950-54 period. The consumption of potatoes declined from 200 pounds to less than 154 pounds.

The combined figures for butter and margarine consumption are lower now than before the war, but cheese consumption has soared. In 1955 it was three times that in the twenties and double that of the first postwar years. If all the cheese eaten were made in Canada, dairy farmers in the Quinte district and in other cheese-making regions would be in clover. Unfortunately in two of the past five years Canada has been a net importer of cheese. It looks as if it would be worth the dairy industry's while to attempt to convince Canadians that there is no cheese as good as cheddar and no cheddar better than the Canadian product.

There has been an astonishing increase in the demand for fresh fruits and vegetables. The per capita consumption of fresh citrus fruits, reports the bank, in 1954 was 50 per cent over that for the immediate pre-war years, 1935-1939.

A chicken in every pot, that dream of the Coolidge era in the United States, appears to be an actuality in Canada today. During the 1950's Canadians ate an average of 10 pounds of poultry every year; in 1955 consumption was just under 30 pounds.

Meat consumption, also up, at 151.5 pounds per capita last year, compared with 116 to 119 pounds during the twenties and the depression years of the thirties.

Sugar consumption is five pounds a head above that of the pre-war years. Perhaps one reason is the "coffee break." For coffee is booming, with imports in 1955 being 104 million pounds, worth $57,000,000, compared with 60 million pounds worth $3,600,000 for the pre-war average.

Per capita food expenditures in terms of 1949 purchasing power increased from $150 in 1935-39 to $227 in 1954, which would indicate a volume increase of nearly 42 per cent. Canadians, however, are not really eating that much more than they did a quarter of a century ago. Unfortunately these figures are misleading. They show the increase in the number of meals eaten outside the home, in restaurants, clubs, schools, factories and other places of business. "What there is a significant service component in the cost," as the bank shrewdly observes, and the fact that Canada's farm population is now less than 20 per cent of the total, as compared with 32 per cent in 1930. Also, the farmers ate in 1930, but much of their food consumption was not reflected in the figures showing the amount of food that Canadians buy, since this food was produced on the farm and consumed there.

GENTLEMANLY TRUCK DRIVERS

All truck drivers are not gentlemen, but one is sometimes tempted to conclude that all gentlemen must be truck drivers or pedestrians.

This observation is evoked by an incident at the corner of McAnnany and Pinnacle Streets the other noon hour. There was the usual long lineup of traffic on Pinnacle Street. There was waiting line of cars on McAnnany. There was no policeman in sight, and no reasonable assurance that the McAnnany crowd was going to get home before the luncheon dishes had been swept from the table into the sink.

And then, suddenly, a vehicle hailed on Pinnacle street and a big arm, thrust through the window, motioned to the waiting McAnnany crowd to proceed. Of course the owner of the arm was a truck driver. The owner of that waving arm always seems to be a truck driver—or a Canadian Pacific driver. Drivers of passenger automobiles never seem ready to waste a moment to assist a fellow car-driver. Never? Well—hardly ever.

EDUCATION HAS PRIORITY

Education cannot be postponed to some future and more convenient time. Learning, on all levels, must be made available to the nation's youth from five years of age onward, and the necessary expenditure has priority over all other government costs except for the maintenance of law and order. FOR OBSERVATION

"For observation!" so they said,
Fourth case a day or two in bed
And get the proper rest you should.
Which in itself should do you good."

Caught by that phrase, "the proper rest,"
I took this observation test.
Thinking, of course, that while I slept
Their watchful vigils would be kept.

They counted first my stock of duds,
From shoes to collars, shirts and studs.
That done, observers in a flock
Upon my door began to knock.

They came with tubes and jars and jugs,
Designed as traps for deadly bugs.
When they'd explored my outer skin,
With rays they started looking in.

From six to seven, from seven to eight,
With me observers had a date;
And when the day crew homeward fled
The night shift swarmed about my bed.

"A proper rest will do you good"
I think I rightly understood.
But when does anybody rest
Who's on observation test?

Letter To The Editor

United Auto Workers Comment on Editorial

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer,

Your recent editorial, entitled "Reuther's Crystal Ball" (reprinted in The Halifax Mail Star), was rather oddly put.

Your first remark implied that Reuther's so-called crystal ball "hitting on all sixteen cylinders" when it told him—you said—that it was time to seek a guaranteed annual wage.

Later you said that ball developed a crack through which these laid off before May 2 would not be eligible for G.A.W. benefits—and "the first retired employee recently unemployed in the U.S. fell in that category."

The big flaw, however—you said—was that the G.A.W. funds built up under the wage-freeze contract were being heavily tested at a time when they are just starting to operate.

There can be no quarrel with any of the facts you cited.

Then you added that not only the automobile companies, but Reuther and his aides, must be praying fervently for an upswing in business. If there is no upswing, it would appear, could run onto the financial rocks if the unexpected slump in demand for new cars continues indefinitely. In that case, by your reasoning, he had never trusted that crystal ball. He had never given the whole idea of a guaranteed annual wage a decided setback." If that is your conclusion, you are completely wrong in your assumption.

There is an astonishing confidence throughout the industry and that was evident both in the G.M. and Ford negotiations that we will bring home to our members, as nothing else we could say would, that we accomplished nothing more in negotiations last year than to hold what we have gained. Certainly the layoffs this year are unprecedented and unexpected—are added proof to our members (though they well need no such proof) that overproduction and unemployment are still managements' most effective weapons against industry and that we either build the G.A.W. or remain at management's mercy—if we have the nerve.

The point of your editorial which appeared odd (and this may be misinterpretation on my part) was that you seemed to have the idea that all Reuther had to do was to keep thinking a little straighter before he goes into negotiations and the provisions you touted as "flaws" will not develop later. It just happens that there is room in collective bargaining, than merely getting your demands straight. There will always be some difficult step of bargaining your demands into reality. That takes more than straight thinking. The management has a habit of not agreeing.

The G.A.W. which the UAW demanded is a far cry from the supplemental benefits it was able to negotiate. But that is not to say that the G.A.W. will not have its proper goal in mind when it set out. And you may as well know that we have our goal; what we have built so far is only the foundation for the G.A.W. the upper structure will come in future negotiations.

There is nothing wrong with Reuther's crystal ball. Just give it a little time.

Sincerely yours,
Jerry Hartford,

Gadgets Women Value Most

(Atlanta Constitution)

If the housewife were forced to give up home appliances or anyone, which would she retain to the last?

Cornell university conducted a poll to find out. The ladies were asked what labor saving device in the house saved the most time.

When the votes were counted, the home laundry and the vacuum cleanly finished in a tie, far ahead of all the rest. The washer should win in a runoff.

Runnerup among the household gadgets saving time were the mixer, the range, the ironer and the pressure cooker.

The husband willing to help his wife with the housework didn't rate honorable mention.

An Old Timer

Doctor Harry Not Natural

(Peterborough Examiner)

We have looked long and hard at the pictures of Harry Truman in his cap and gown as an Honorary Doctor of Civil Law in the University of Oxford. He looks exactly what he is—a man in fancy dress. He knows what self-conscious. Beside him stands the Chancellor of the University, Clement Atlee, even more gorgeous robes, looking perfectly happy. Mr. Truman, for his part, looks very much as though he had just been made an honorary field-marshal, and was wearing, in full-dress, his uniform. He was dressed as something which he was not, and he knew it.

We have often wondered why universities are so keen to bestow their highest academic honors on men who are in no sense academic. The army does not do it. Physicians do not make laymen honorary physicians. The churches do not make men honorary bishops. Why are universities, Indian tribes, and fire departments so anxious to dress laymen up as though they were learned men? Indians or firemen?

The usual answer is that the university wants to honor a man who has won great distinction in his field, man most certainly comes within that class. But it is also plain that the universities are honoring themselves; indeed, that is what they usually say at their honorials of honorary doctorates. But is that the way the system really works?

We have long suspected that universities, in their honorary degrees, do not think that academic honors are as glorious as those won in battle, in politics, in the world of trade. they seek to boost themselves up in their own estimation by conferring eminent men to accept degrees which they have not earned, and which are often at sharp variance with their own academic achievements. This is a little known but successful service accepted by a call to Peterborough. The service was conducted by the Rev. H. W. Foley of Springbrook, the chairman of the Belleville Presbytery, assisted by the Rev. James E. Reed of the Rawdon circuit. The Rev. Robert Hall, the Rev. I. B. Nayler, the Rev. Mr. Mc. Wilson and H. H. Lackey of Ivanhoe, assisted in the service.

Some relief from the gasping heat which held the city and district in its grasp for the past four days came early this afternoon. The temperature reported at the pump house are as follows: Max 96, Min. 76. This is certainly a great relief from the highest temperature reported yesterday of 108. Citizens have been sleeping or trying to sleep on verandahs, lawns and parks—the rooms were unbearable with heat. Many people were parked along the bay bridge road. No prostrations from the heat have been reported.

Snack Food Firms Boom

(Milwaukee Journal)

Kids — their eyes glued to television — are nibbling the snack food business into the chips.

Corn is a $500 million business. Potato chips turn in a bigger dollar volume than pretzels, but the gullets of Americans, at an ever increasing rate, are also gobbling up inconceivable amounts of corn chips, crackers with cheese and peanut butter, corn curls, cheese filled bacon rinds, nut confections, cheese spreads, appetizers and many other snacks. They come under numberless names — such as Fritos, Chee-tos, Thins, corn curls or what have you.

As a result, the makers of these between meal snacks are eating high on the hog. Sales and dividends are rising like tides on a windy day. Surveys show that the financial reports of these snack food companies are even tastier than the potato chips. But, who needs surveys? Have you tried to walk barefooted across a room just vacated by a horde of kids after a cowboy television show?

The snack business would be good if it totaled only the production left in crumbs.

Strength for The Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

YES, WHAT'S GOING ON?

Albert Schweitzer will probably stand for all time as one of the great missionaries of the Christian Church. What he is doing among the people of Africa is a continuation of the work begun by David Livingston. Schweitzer is a Protestant counterpart of Father Damien, the Catholic missionary who poured out his life for the lepers. Sir Wilfred Grenfell, medical missionary on Beach Labrador, was another example of how God uses a consecrated personality to great ends.

Why do they leave all that the world counts worthwhile and devote themselves to the needy in the dark areas and to the sacrifices of medical missionaries? The bodies and souls of men and women are rotting away! What do they gain? Well, nothing, of course —and yet in another way they gain everything. Schweitzer, amid hospital conditions said to be incredibly primitive, labors as best he can for people who scarcely know what they are living for in this life. Yet Schweitzer is not only a great physician and a great theologian, but one of the greatest organists in the world and the most distinguished student of the music of Johann Sebastian Bach.

What are the seminaries full of young people today, and more people wanting to take religious orders than can be accommodated? What is this ferment that has started in the monasteries?

What's going on?

Alas, Youth Perishable

(Baltimore Sun)

A New York specialist in geriatrics is annoyed because television, with comic books put to shame, he says — too great a premium on youth and almost never extoll the virtues of someone over 45. "If an old person is presented, he's presented as a fool," the doctor complains.

Now there is something in what he says. The cult of raw youth can be excessively tiresome and often enough the comic books put Logan Pearsall Smith old when he asked: "Should never extoll the than the voices of young people when you can't hear what they say?"

Still, there is this that must be said: The poets, great and small, have celebrated youth and its delights for centuries and none the far as we know, has objected. "Age I do abhor thee, youth I do adore thee," Shakespeare never said it, and so have all the others from Homer to Housman.

It is true, however that the poets have also recognized what television, movies and the books usually gloss over — that youth, like many things of high value, is also highly perishable. They have prialized it, and they have lamented its passing. Among as Shakespeare also did that "youth's a stuff will not endure."

If the middle - aged and the elderly feel somewhat left out of it so far as the bright heroes and heroines of popular entertainment are concerned they can always reflect on the charming and terribly true account of another Elizabethan poet who wrote:

His youth 'gainst time and age hath ever spurn'd,
But spurn'd in vain; youth waneth by increasing.

And even if they occasionally shrug their shoulders, they may remember, as one philosopher put it: "To be indifferent to the changing seasons . . . a happier state of mind than to be hopelessly in love with Spring."

Personal Health Talks

Alcohol Is A Narcotic

"He will not go to A.A. or permit our pastor to talk with him. He is 44 years old and has made us all so unhappy. My father drinks to extremes and . . ." (Signed, Doris B.——)

I told this unhappy child that there is no medicine that can be given secretly and, in my opinion, no medical treatment is likely to do any good, such medicines as antabuse, for example, unless the addict is voluntarily or by court order under absolute control of the physician.

I said I believe that any addict whose use of alcohol or other narcotic becomes such a problem should be committed to an institution for a term sufficient for a course of medical treatment, with or without all the help religious or spiritual advisers may provide. Anonymous, family and friends can give.

If the drinking continues after such treatment, the addict might deserve a second chance, but not a third. On third conviction and sentence to institutional control for not less than five years should be automatic. Whatever the inmate can earn while incarcerated should go to support his family and pay for his care.

In God's name, why reclaims a correspondent we'll call Alanon, what could be more tragic than such a sentence?

I think the situation described by Doris B. is more tragic than that.

Far from being harsh in dealing with addiction to this narcotic, we Americans are generally too complacent about it. For instance, a newspaper report said the parents of 50 of the 70 boys and girls of the graduating class in a suburban high school were fighting the parents of the other twenty children for the privilege of setting up a bar on the premises where the parents themselves could be bartenders and serve drinks at the social and graduation party. This, they maintained, would be the best way to prevent what another newspaper in the same area calls "the annual outbreak of drinking and other reckless behavior which accompanies high school graduation ceremonies."

Oh, no, these wishy-washy parents think, positively no liquor would be served to graduates under 18—about half of the graduates have 18.

There is no need to identify the city from which the story comes. The same parental attitude prevails in many communities.

It is tragic to think about when you have a moment of reflection on narcotic addiction.

If you have young children of your own, or if you have grandchildren, or nieces or nephews or pupils or young friends and are interested in an addict, I'll be publications far more appalling than the falling of an atomic bomb on Washington or happening, or rather what has happened to France.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

The idea of young people submitting to medical examinations before they are married stirred up a good deal of disagreement a few twenty years ago. The chief argument of those who supported the idea—they called themselves eugenists—was that it would forewarn young couples of any tendencies they might have towards diseases that would develop, such as tuberculosis, that would affect married life.

But young people in love do not let warnings of any kind stand in their way. Love, you might say, is blind. That has probably over all others. The eugenists did not get very far with their campaign.

There is one angle of their program that might have caught on, if they had stressed it. And that is the advantage that would accrue to married couples who have the same ailments. Marriage becomes a bore to a couple, one of whom has a tendency towards gall bladder trouble, while the other loves pot roasts, roast goose, and highly spiced dishes which are anathema to anyone with hepatic disturbances. The worst kind of incompatibility must be that which denies a man with gastric ulcers the pleasure of a good steak with beans, they move through life at the same gait, without being a drag on the other. Nothing could be more agreeable than that a man and woman, both inclined to the same diet, should divert each other by marriage, rather than raise Cain with some poor normal partner.

But the eugenists would look to the prospect of producing children of such specialized pairings. It is probably best, when love gets going, to just mind your eyes and let' go Gallagher.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

PICTURES

More and more, pictures seem to be growing in importance. Pictures in the home, in public places, schools and hotels. Beautiful reproductions of great masterpieces can be bought for a very small price and made to give out their beauty wherever placed.

I have often been inspired by some print or work of art in a hotel. When away from home one has something to ease sparks of loneliness that often are experienced.

Our great art centers abound with their deathless beauty, are free to the public and the rich and famous are visited the greater is our spiritual growth. Recently, while in Canada, I visited a very beautiful art museum. I was amazed to see such a gallery in the land of commerce and outside interests. No one should visit New York city without taking time off for the Metropolitan, or Washington, D. C., without visiting the magnificent National Gallery.

Pictures in our newspapers, magazines, and books have so improved the last few years that many are actually works of art. Their colorful display is amazing. And now we have many photographs that almost sing in their perfect taking. Pictures have become a part of the cameras' skill. Never have people been so able to know the joy of taking pictures with their cameras. Picture taking is highly addictive. Once at an annual art exhibition a vacation is doubly enjoyable if you have a camera with you, and keep studying to make better pictures. We can take Nature home with us. And we can give employment to those deprived of physical help. Pictures are an important place in our newspapers for they often tell far more than the most graphic piece of reporting.

Atlantic Premiers Returning Home After Economic Parley

By STEWART MacLEOD
Canadian Press Staff Writer

FREDERICTON (CP) — The four Atlantic premiers return home today from their first economic conference to iron out details in setting up a new intergovernment committee which will look into the economy of the region.

The premiers came out from a closed door conference Monday with reserved opinions after forming a 12-man committee to delve into economic problems with wide terms of reference. The new committee—with three members from each of the four Atlantic provinces—will likely bring down its first report at the next premiers' conference, tentatively scheduled for this fall in Halifax.

But until that report is brought down the premiers, who went into the conference with divided determination, are withholding any predictions about its ultimate success.

"HELP OURSELVES"

There was a general "Let's help ourselves" attitude at the public sessions of the conference as the premiers called for greater regional determination and energy toward solving the problems of the area. General dissatisfaction was expressed about high freight rates and the present Dominion - provincial fiscal policy. There was also a general can for more government participation in resources development, but in most other points were strictly regional.

This conference was suggested by Premier Flemming of New Brunswick after Prime Minister St. Laurent said the initiative, ideas, energy and determination for development in this region must come from the area itself. Mr. Flemming termed this an "unprecedented challenge" and invited the other three premiers to enter the discussion with Mr. St. Laurent's speech as the terms of reference. In opening speeches Monday there was outspoken determination by the premiers as they pledged energetic cooperation in solving the problems of the region. But after the meeting ended they reserved their opinions on the eventual outcome.

FOUND INTERESTING

Premier Smallwood of Newfoundland said he found the conference "very interesting" and "I hope something will come of it."

Premier Hicks of Nova Scotia said he was generally enthusiastic, and Premier Flemming said he was "satisfied" and "I feel it was a good start."

Premier Matheson of Prince Edward Island said "Something was accomplished, I suppose, but I don't know whether I am too enthusiastic."

Premier Flemming went into the meeting calling for federal reconsideration of freight rates, its financial policies toward provinces and tariff rates.

Premier Smallwood was interested chiefly in more federal participation in resources development. Premier Hicks and Premier Matheson spoke mainly on the transportation costs. Other discussions stemmed from these subjects.

AWAITS REPORT

Mr. Smallwood said he was anxiously awaiting the report of the Gordon royal commission on Canada's economic prospects because, he predicted, it may result in a new Canadian charter. He thought this commission was set up because of "the row kicked up" by Atlantic premiers at federal-provincial conferences.

Mr. Flemming said the cost of power development within New Brunswick in the next 10 years has been estimated at $211,000,000 and the federal government should help in developing those resources. He also said that present tariff policy was preventing this region from taking advantage of trade with the New England states.

Mr. Hicks said earlier in Halifax that he personally would meet with the prime minister to discuss the grave concern felt in this area about the recent freight rate increase.

Mr. Matheson said it was only a question of time before the already serious transportation problem of his province would grow worse. He said the railway would eventually disappear unless services improved "because people are not interested in using the railway unless they get service."

Cause of the fire is not known. No livestock was in the barn. The women at the house noticed what they thought was steam issuing from the roof. A short time later the building was in flames.

Firemen and neighbors kept watch on the ruins lest a grass fire start.

Miss Mary S. Byers Retires Following 35 Years' Service, Honored By Hospital Bodies

By GEORGE H CARVER

Veteran of three and one-half decades in womannood's most-honored profession, Miss Mary Edward Byers, of Belleville General Hospital today enters well-earned retirement.

Graduate of Kingston General Hospital in 1921 Miss Byers has completed 35 years' service as a registered nurse and staff executive. She has been associated with Belleville hospital for 31 years, 26 of them consecutively.

The interim years were spent in New York City. There Miss Byers was staffed at Long Island College and Mount Sinai hospitals. While there she took postgraduate courses in obstetrics and pediatrics.

Yesterday Miss Byers wrote "finis" to a long and honorable career in the world-recognized service to humanity.

She will spend her retirement with her beloved flowers and music in Eganville, the small Ontario town at least gave her Byers. She will reside with her mother, Mrs. T. J. Byers, now 85 years of age, and a sister, Miss Ethel A. Byers, an accountant of the Bank of Montreal.

Institutional regret was tinged with pride at a "farewell" reception tendered Miss Byers in the nurses' residence by representatives of the hospital in general and its integral organizations.

In an element of complete surprise tangible and other tributes were paid to the retiring hospital nursing executive.

The presentations of five handsome gifts climaxed brief but sincere eulogies of service and sincere, heart-warming wishes for a long and happy retirement by representatives of hospital and nursing departments, the staff as a whole, and a number of members of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary.

PRESENT GIFTS

The hospital Board of Governors, through Chairman Jack N. Yanover, presented Miss Byers with a handsome Hallicrafter portable radio and a substantial cheque.

Dr. G. S. Cronk, representing the hospital medical staff, presented her with a beautiful purse. Tucked in a corner was a sum of money.

From the hospital nursing staff, the hospital staff, the nurses' alumnae and the Community Nursing Registry came a beautiful diamond dinner ring presented by Miss Margaret L. Peart, the director of nursing.

With the best wishes of the student nurses' association, Miss Byers was presented a handsome compact presented by association president Miss Marion Robinson.

A number of members of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary presented her with another handsome compact with president Mrs. Kay Smith doing the honors.

"With this token of our esteem and appreciation goes our best wishes for health and prosperity for many happy years of retirement," Board of Governors chairman Yanover said in presenting the board's gift. "To this we add our sincere regret at your leaving after many years of faithful service to this hospital."

Dr. Cronk said his was not a pleasant duty but inevitably the best of friends must part. "We of the medical staff feel that you have been an important part of the institution over the years, and it is hard to realize that you will not be one of us from now on. You take with you our best wishes for a happy future."

From director of nursing Miss Peart came the best wishes of the organizations she represented. "This gift is but a small token of appreciation of the untiring efforts and the work you have done, especially for the student nurses. I cannot say too much about what you have meant individually to Belleville General Hospital. Personally, I have valued highly the friendship and assistance you have given to me."

Hospital Auxiliary president, Mrs. Smith conveyed the best wishes of her organization. "With this gift," she said, "go our warmest hopes for a bright and happy future. May the years bring you many happy hours of sunshine."

Appreciation and best wishes came from the nurses' student body through its president Miss Robinson. She expressed the sincere appreciation of the girls and the many years of service Miss Byers had given student nurses during her tenure of duty.

In brief but gracious reply Miss Byers said she was leaving Belleville and its hospital with many regrets. "My associations here have been the happiest of my whole life. They will afford me many happy memories in the future. I have truly appreciated all the co-operation given me, especially that of the medical board whose understanding and never-failing assistance has been an inspiration to me. To you all I extend my appreciation for these lovely gifts and tributes and best wishes for long lives of sunshine and happiness.

Immaculate in their trim uniforms, members of the student nurses' association served tea to the many hospital organizations members present prior to the presentation ceremonies.

FIRST POSITION IN BELLEVILLE

Following graduation from the Kingston General Hospital, Miss Byers took up private nursing for three months before joining the nursing staff of Belleville General Hospital. She acted as supervisor of obstetric care for a period of three years then proceeded to New York for post-graduate studies.

She returned to Belleville in 1927 to take over the position of obstetrics supervisor, which she held until 1935 when she was appointed liaison officer between hospital and patients.

During her tenure of service as supervisor of obstetric Miss Byers said she had helped bring some 7,000 babies into the world, but medical staff members estimate a much greater number.

For many years in her position as supervisor of obstetrics Miss Byers acted as anaesthetist at baby deliveries.

During her school days in Eganville she decided that schoolteaching would be her life's work. However, with the advent of World War I and its attendant call of nurses, she decided to enter the nursing profession.

And so ends the active career of a distinguished member of womanhood's noblest profession. Miss Byers left last night for her home in Eganville where she will as was said, spend her retirement in an environment that seems so fitting to so gracious a lady—her flowers her music, and her family.

The afternoon was spent in several games and a social time.

Later, Mrs. Adsett served afternoon tea in the spacious dining room with its large picture window through which the ever-changing lights and shadows afforded a most delightful view.

Following the tea, and appreciative thanks to their host and hostess, for their hospitality, the homeward bus trip began bringing to a close a most happy afternoon and evening.

Weddings

CASE—PHILLIPS-LEY

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Morley Phillips, Stirling, was the setting for a very pretty wedding on Saturday, June 23rd, when Dr. Rev. Arthur Packman united in marriage Wilma Faye Phillips-Ley, and George Erwin Maxwell Case, son of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Case of R.R. 2, Stirling.

The bride was radiant in a sky blue crystalette sheath with white accessories and a corsage of American Beauty roses and fern. She was attended by Miss Jeanette Kortan of Belleville, who wore a pink sheath of crystalene with pink feather hat and white accessories and a corsage of pink carnations and coon flowers.

The bridegroom was attended by Mr. Harold Bush of Stirling.

The marriage ceremony took place on the spacious verandah, under an arch of evergreens interlaced with white iris. A large basket of red and white peonies at each side of the arch added to the beauty of the setting. The home was tastefully decorated inside with baskets and vases of lemon lilies, lupins, peonies and yellow roses.

The bride's mother was attired in a navy and pink ensemble with a corsage of white carnations. The mother of the bridegroom wore a navy dress with a corsage of carnations.

The bridegroom's gift to the bride was luggage in blue and white leather and to the best man tie pin and matching cuff-links. The maid of honor received a bracelet and earrings set from the bride.

For the wedding trip to Toronto, London, Niagara Falls and Detroit, the bride donned a matching navy suit and white accessories and their return the happy couple will reside on the farm on the bridegroom on the Rice Road, Stirling.

Guests were present from London, Norwood, Belleville, Massassaga, Foxboro and Stirling.

Sex Hormone May Save Babies' Lives

NEW YORK (AP)—A new female sex hormone promises to save thousands of babies who are born prematurely, a drug firm said Monday.

It can work in either of two important ways. It sometimes stops the premature labor contractions, thus giving the infant more time to develop in the womb. Or it can make the premature birth easier so the babies are not fatally injured before being born.

The hormone is Relaxin, a natural sex hormone playing a vital role in the birth process, Monday Warner - Chilcott Laboratories of New York announced success in making supplies available for the first time, under the name of Relaxin, to help reduce loss of infants during labor.

Sociologist Says Men Prefer 'Less Clever' Women

By CAROLYN WILLETT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

MONTREAL (CP) — Brains may help build a feminine career, but men still prefer "less clever" women, a Canadian sociologist told the International Federation of Business and Professional Women Monday night.

Dr. Aileen Ross, a professor of sociology at McGill University, told a panel discussing the woman's executive it was evident many women went to university "for men, rather than for learning."

And because men preferred less clever women, women had to show they weren't too clever.

With marriage held as a woman's highest goal, women spent the years they should be preparing for careers at the "more arduous task of getting a man," Miss Ross said.

SENATOR IN CHAIR

More than 1,000 women, including 500 delegates from 18 countries and observers, attended the panel discussion, with Senator Muriel McGregor, Vancouver, Liberal, Ottawa, N.B., as moderator.

Congress sessions continue today with committee reports and an afternoon and evening visit to Ottawa.

Along with Dr. Ross Monday night's panel included Elisabeth Feller of Zurich, Switzerland, president of the Swiss Federation and president of the large electrical appliances industry; Lisa Sergio, of Washington, D.C., editor of a Supreme Soviet deputy and a candidate member of the Communist party's powerful Praesidium.

Mrs. Furtseva, who looks much younger than her 46 years, took over the post as secretary of the Moscow city party organization March 21, 1954. It is the largest party group in the Soviet Union and the secretary's post is one of the most important jobs in the land. Among those who held it in the past is Soviet party head Nikita Khrushchev.

Top Woman Red Heads Group Visiting Britain

MOSCOW (AP)—The West this week gets its first close look at Ekaterina Furtseva, the world's No. 1 woman Communist.

Mrs. Furtseva will head a 16-member delegation on a visit to Britain at the invitation of the British Parliament. The group, which includes members of the Supreme Soviet, leaves Moscow by plane Wednesday.

Reaching heights no other woman has attained in the Soviet government structure, Mrs. Furtseva is first secretary of the Moscow city Communist party group, a Supreme Soviet deputy and a candidate member of the Communist party's powerful Praesidium.

Will Study Children's Health Services

OTTAWA (CP) — Dr. Jean F. Webb, child and maternal health consultant for the health department, will study maternal and child health services for handicapped children in Britain, Norway, Sweden, Finland and The Netherlands this summer.

The health department said Monday Dr. Webb will undertake her study after representing Canada at the eighth International Congress of Pediatrics in Copenhagen July 21-27.

B. and P. Women May Distribute Paper Free

MONTREAL (CP)—The official publication of the International Federation of Business and Professional Women may ultimately be distributed free to the organization's some 300,000 members.

Delegates to the IFBPW's triennial congress here Monday approved a recommendation to establish a committee to study means of bringing Widening Horizons to the total membership.

Lisa Sergio of Woodstock, Vermont international publicity chairman, told some 900 delegates from 18 countries attending the five-day congress that the estimated cost of printing and distributing 300,000 eight-page copies six times a year would be about $65,000.

The IFBP W membership was too diversified and widespread to cover the costs by advertising, and the publication, printed in English and French, now is distributed to about 15,000 international and federation officials.

COMPLETE MAKE-UP CHART. TODAY: DARK HAIR; FAIR SKIN

If hair is dark and skin fair, give special care to eye make-up.

Charm is your birthright, girl of the dark brown hair, fair skin and gray, green, blue or brown eyes. If you use it wisely, gentlemen will never prefer blondes when you are about.

Since your eyes are your most dramatic feature you should pay particular attention to your eye make-up. Your colors are the deep, rich reds, the emerald greens and yellows. You can also wear strong blue, yellow greens, lavenders, grays, navy and, if your eyes are brown, certain warm shades of brown. Your flowers are: White orchids, gardenias, deep red roses, camellias, white, yellow and tawny chrysanthemums. Here is your make-up chart:

FOR DAYTIME

Foundation: If your skin is normal, a liquid foundation, either colorless or tinted to give the skin tone you want, or cover up flaws in the skin texture or in the colour of the face.

If your skin is dry, sallow, muddy or aging, cream or paste foundations which contain oils more completely than do the liquids.

If your skin is oily, a dry cake foundation, a vanishing cream type foundation or a liquid foundation, a vanishing cream type foundation or a liquid foundation with an astringent base.

Color: As a rule, choose a foundation of the same tone as your skin but a shade darker. However, if you have a fine alabaster skin, match it exactly with a colorless liquid foundation. If your skin is sallow, choose a pink toned foundation; a peach or honey toned foundation if your skin is too white.

Powder: Natural to fair skin. Rachel if skin has creamy tones.

Lipstick: Coral, rosy pink or true reds. Blue reds will make skin blue. Harmonize shades of lipstick and rouge with colors you wear. Drugs chosen color about neck and face close to skin and try different shades of lipstick in daylight to find the one which goes best with you.

Rouge: Coral, rosy pink, true reds or blue reds. Cream or liquid rouge before powdering. Dry rouge after powdering. Or make rouge from lipstick by blending it with cream.

Blue, green or gray. Determine color by color of the eyes.

Mascara: Brown or black according to color of the eye lashes.

Eyebrow Pencil: Brown or black, according to color of eye brown.

Nail Polish: Same as lipstick or lighter or darker shade of same.

FOR EVENING

Foundation: Same as day.

Powder: Natural or pale green for fair skins. Rachel or peach tones for creamy skins.

Lipstick: Raspberry or medium reds to scarlet for fair skins.

Rouge: Raspberry or medium reds to scarlet. Accent color for artificial lights by dusting cake rouge over powder even if you have used cream or liquid rouge.

Eye Shadow: Brown or bronze for brown eyes. Dark green for hazel, gray or green eyes. Or try two color eye shadows, such as green and brown or the gold or dark green.

Eyebrow Pencil: Dark brown.

SUN TAN COSMETICS

Foundation: Sun tan.
Powder: Golden shade.
Lipstick: Coral or vivid red.
Rouge: Coral or vivid red.
Eye shadow: Sea green.
Mascara: Sea green.
Nail Polish: Orange red or brownish.

ADVICE To The LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

CHECK ON HIS DRINKING HABITS BEFORE MARRYING HIM

Dear Beatrice Fairfax:

I'm 21 and have been engaged to a fellow 25 for the last six months.

We have been planning to be married late this summer, but my father is now raising objections to our marriage because my fiance takes a few drinks once in awhile. My fiance has promised to stop drinking entirely after we're married, but my father still objects.

Do you think I should go ahead and marry him in spite of my father, or must I break my engagement, which would break my heart? Please tell me what you would do if you were in my place. —Laura E.

Dear Laura E.:

What I would do if I were in your place would be to wait long enough before marrying his man to make as sure as possible that his drinking is not now, and is not likely to become, a serious problem. If you were to discover after you were married that your husband was an alcoholic, you would have a desperately unhappy life ahead of you.

Of course if he only takes a drink "once in a while," as you say, it would be no means indicate that he is a problem drinker. But when you also say that it is "a few drinks" that he takes, it does make one wonder just how many that "few" amounts to, and what effect they have on him.

For this reason, I earnestly urge you to learn all about his habits in this respect before making the plans for your wedding too definite.

YOU'D CERTAINLY MAKE A MISTAKE TO BECOME ENGAGED NOW

Dear Beatrice Fairfax

For about three weeks I've been going steady with a fellow who is in the service and who is going overseas in a few weeks. He says he loves me very much, and we had been planning to become engaged in a couple of months. Now he wants me to get engaged right away before he leaves.

The truth is that, while I know I love him when I'm with him, sometimes when I'm alone I'm afraid of making a mistake. I haven't said anything to my mother about this, because I don't think she would approve, even though he is a very nice boy.

Please tell me if you think I should become engaged now or wait for him to come back? I've known him only a short time.—E.B.

Dear E.B.: I can't think of anything more foolish than for a girl to become engaged to a man she has known "only a short time," in three weeks of "going steady" you couldn't even begin to know a young man well enough to have any reliable idea of whether or not he'd be the right one for you to marry. And you certainly have good reason to be afraid that you'd be making a mistake if you agreed to an engagement now.

I suggest you show this chap that you've a good head on your shoulders by telling him that you know neither of you is ready to do anything as definite as to become engaged at this time. Say that you'll gladly write to him while he is away, and you hope he'll write to you, but that you think it would be wise for you to consider yourselves tied down in any way.

If he's really interested in you, he'll want to keep in touch with you on your own terms.

IF YOU EVER WANT A REAL ROMANCE, CUT OUT NONSENSE LIKE THIS

Dear Beatrice Fairfax:

I am 18, and in love with a man, 27. He is in love, or thinks he is, with a girl who knows I love him, and she does all she can to make him hate me, even though she doesn't love him herself.

What can I do to make him realize she isn't telling the truth when she talks to him the way she does about me?—Puzzled.

Dear E.B.: What childish nonsense is this! Did you say you are 18? You sound more like a 13-year-old who's been reading dime novels.

In the first place, nothing could be sillier than for a girl your age to indulge in romantic notions about a man of 27 who hasn't and shouldn't have, if he's a mature as he ought to be - the slightest interest in you. And in the second place, all you're doing is to make a complete fool of yourself when you get involved with this other girl.

Snap out of it and occupy your time and your thoughts with the friendships and interests a girl of your age should have. If you don't you'll never stand a chance of having a normal, worthwhile romance of your own.

One Piece Swimsuit

By ALICE ALDEN

Never has there been such a delightful diversity of swim and beach wear as is being offered us this season. Here is a sure-to-please affair in flattering blue wool no-sag jersey. It has many intriguing details such as the softly draped neckline, the line of large pearl buttons for the front closing and the little boy shorts. The shape-retention and ease of motion of this suit makes it an excellent choice for the serious swimmer.

Oven Dinners by Kae

(Guest column by Kae B.—reader-friend of Mary).

Dear Mary: Here I am again! Some time ago you published my recipe for pork tenderloins in mushroom sauce, and I have two pet oven dishes that I'd like to give you, not only because they are great favorites at our house with family and guests alike, but also because of their respective origins. The chicken dish was given me by my next door neighbor in Edmonton when we first moved to Alberta. She passed away while we were there, but we shall never forget her many kindnesses, and I am sure she would be pleased to have me share her recipe with you so that others may enjoy it too. The meat balls were served to my husband by a man friend of his who is a very fine amateur cook. Allick enjoyed them so much that he requested the recipe to bring home to me. I do hope you and your readers will like them as much as we do.

OVEN-FRIED CHICKEN

(Courtesy Kae B.)

You may use broilers or cut up roasting chicken, or partially precooked boiling fowl. First cut up several pieces of fat bacon and lay them here an there on a large baking pan. Dip each piece of chicken in well-seasoned beaten egg, then roll in crushed cornflakes and lay on the bacon pieces in the pan. To each piece, with butter and bake uncovered at 400 for 1 hour. Do not overcook or chicken will become dry. (Test with fork for "done-ness".)

If you want to serve potatoes with this, oven time and temperature are suitable for baked potatoes or scalloped potatoes. However, I usually serve it with fluffy rice, a green vegetable, tossed salad, hot biscuits and currant jelly.

The other recipe has a sauce that may be seasoned to taste, but it should be extra hot as the meat balls absorb some of the spice.

BAKED MEAT BALLS—
BARBECUE SAUCE

—In a large bowl beat 1 egg and blend in 1 cup milk. Add 1 1-3 lbs ground lean beef, mixing until all liquid is absorbed. Work in 1 cup dried fine breadcrumbs. Form into small balls and brown lightly in greased skillet. Remove balls to large casserole or small roasting pan. In the same skillet slice 2 or more large onions and a clove or two of garlic or, use garlic juice, and chop up and cook until tender. Add 1 large tin of tomatoes, 1 tablespoon vinegar, 1 teaspoon mustard, some tomato catsup, a squirt of Worcestershire Sauce, 3 or 4 drops Tabasco, 1 teaspoon paprika, pinch of sugar, then season with salt, pepper, celery salt, cayenne and chilli to taste and anything else you can think of!

Pour this sauce over the meat balls, cover and cook in slow oven 1 1-2 hours. I have found that this recipe can be cooked in a Dutch oven on top of the stove (using the simmerer) which avoids heating up the kitchen on a warm day. This might be an idea for your reader who was requesting recipes suitable for a hot-plate the other day.

The meat balls are good with potatoes, plain boiled or mashed or fluffy; and, like the chicken dish, are well in accompaniment of green vegetable and salad. When there are not enough left over for another meal I cut up the few remaining and add them with any leftover sauce to spaghetti or noodles. This makes a quick and easy supper dish the next night. . . I have received so much help from you I am grateful to reciprocate.—Kae B.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

PLANNING THESE PARENTS' 45TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My sister and I are planning an "Open House" for our parents' Forty-Fifth Wedding Anniversary. Besides us, there are six other children in the family, all married and with children.

1. Would it be sufficient for us to serve: the Wedding Anniversary Cake, open-face sandwiches, and coffee?

2. May we ask the other daughters and the sons to help furnish refreshments?

3. My sister and I plan to serve the guests. We greets them at the door?—Reader

1. Not sufficient, I think. Since each guest is served only one piece of the Anniversary Cake, and that piece usually a rather small piece, the usual plan is to serve also several kinds of dainty sweet and delicious cookies, and/or little individual cakes. Then, too, besides coffee, you should serve a cold beverage, fruit punch or whatever you wish, for the drinking of the toasts. Usually served too are some "nibblers," such as nuts, popcorn, potato chips, and/or any of today's delectable packaged tidbits. These mentioned things need not be at all expensive, but they are great helpers-out.

Certainly the other daughters and the sons should, if you wish them to, contribute to the furnishing of the refreshments. If they don't come forward with the suggestion (which they should do, and I hope they will do), you and your sister should suggest it. Why not, for example, tell them you and your sister will supply most of the food-and-beverage items if they each will contribute toward the anniversary cake? (Incidentally, it is quite the custom for the children to combine to give the Anniversary Cake. . . You might tell them that.) Or, if you prefer, ask each one to contribute a definite amount toward all the menu-expenses.

2. You might ask your close sisters to greet the guests and, if you wish, to help you with the serving.

Women's Institute

MELROSE WI.

Mrs. Newton Demill was a most genial hostess for Melrose W.I. last Thursday evening when a large number of members and visitors turned out for the first summer evening meeting.

The new president, Mrs. C. Weese, presided and asked for reports from all during her new term of office.

Much correspondence was read and several members expressed thanks for cards received during their convalescence.

A generous donation was made to the Salvation Army and Mrs. Ed. Lazier was chosen as reporter for the "Federated News" at the meetings.

Mrs. F. Bush, secretary-treasurer, gave a most concise report of the 'Officers' Conference' at Guelph, which she attended in May.

A discussion groups proved most helpful and she quoted several "musts" for officers and members, a more thorough "study of the Handbook."

At this stage Miss B. McFarlane, who has accepted a position in Belleville, was presented with costume jewellery by the president on behalf of the members of the high esteem in which she is held in the district.

All joined heartily in community singing and Mrs. J. English, convener of Historical Research and Current Events took charge of the meeting. Mrs. N. Howard gave a splendid paper on the "Moira River" tracing its course and origin of the name and many other interesting features. Mrs. English followed with a timely talk on "Moira River Conservation Authority" speaking chiefly of the "Otters Rapids" project, a dam-head miles north of Madoc, recently purchased to be used as an historical monument being preserved by same. She illustrated with a large map which showed the various changes contemplated during the next few years when it will be open to the public"

This mill was built in 1847 by James Cockburn, who was a U.E. Loyalist, and was operated until 1908 and is now in ruins, but in use. An additional feature of this old mill is that the stream which passes through the property and drove the mill-wheel, is still a fast-moving trout stream and there are the remains of the old dam and mill-pond. The Authority plans to repair the dam and build the dam so that the pond will serve as a demonstration for building farm-ponds in the area and the woodland will be improved as a demonstration plot.

All thoroughly enjoyed the two songs given so cleverly by Ramie Demill, accompanied by Mrs. S. Demill at the piano.

A detailed report of the "District Annual" held at Front Road Church, Picton, was given by Mrs. E. Lazier, district director. Various members who had also attended this gathering added their impressions and highlights to same.

Refreshments were served and everyone seemed in favor of evening meetings during the summer.

RECORD-BREAKING

No country in the world had known the development Canada had in the last 15 years and she was establishing records in both exports and imports. In foreign investments she was likely to become a creditor nation, sending more capital abroad than she brought in.

Mr. Drew's motion, amounting to want-of-confidence in the government, never probably will come to a vote in the Commons tonight.

Social Credit leader Low urged implementation of Social Credit monetary policies to put adequate purchasing power in the hands of the people so they could buy Canada's output of goods, the purchasing power equalled production all the aims set out in Mr. Drew's motion merely "talk and no action."

Mr. Howe said Canada's current trade position had nothing to worry about. It was a reflection of strength, not weakness.

RENE BEAUDOIN

The two opposition parties apparently have made no decision yet whether to raise again the question of the breach of privilege the time remaining in the present session — perhaps one month.

Mr. St. Laurent's decision that Speaker Beaudoin should be asked to remain was made in two cabinet meetings after his return from London. It apparently was a last-minute decision.

MADE MADE UP MIND

Mr. Beaudoin, tendering his resignation a week ago Monday, said that more than once during the pipeline and censure debates he had made up his mind to resign. But he had known he had to take that course when the Montreal newspaper La Patrie published parts of a private letter he wrote to a Montreal newspaper man.

That was a letter to Alcanzo Clog-Mears stating "my accusers distorted the facts for their own political ends."

Mr. St. Laurent, said he had asked himself whether publication of the letter extracts "really had sufficient gravity to justify the resignation of the Speaker who recently received an overwhelming vote of confidence from the House."

"I have no hesitation in saying I do not think so."

DOES NOT SHARE

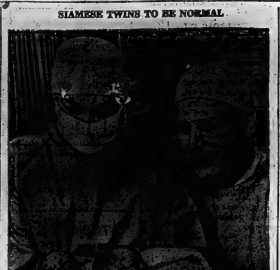
He said he shares Mr. Beaudoin's regret that any part of the letter was published.

"I cannot, however, share the view that because the Speaker had expressed in private the views he did express in that letter, he could no longer continue to be an impartial and competent Speaker."

Opposition leader Drew has said publication of parts of the letter, imputing political motives to the opposition criticism, removed "any suggestion of impartiality" from the Speaker.

The prime minister said all members can understand the desire of the Speaker to be in a position where he could reply freely to all the criticism against him.

"That, I understand, is the position Mr. Speaker wished to achieve when he stated on Monday of last week that he was placing his resignation before the House to take effect at the pleasure of the House."



Speaker Beaudoin came under fire during the angry pipeline battle more than a month ago when Conservative and CCF parties claimed he was allowing the government to break Commons rules in order to ram its pipeline legislation through Parliament by a June 7 deadline. At one point order broke down, with shouting, fist shaking members storming into the aisle in front of Mr. Beaudoin.

PROPELLER BLADE

Taken to hospital, besides Mr. Dumbell, were his wife, Donna, 26, his sons, Donovan Dickens, 47, of Mundelene, Ill., and two-year-old Robert Lippert. Mr. Stevens received a laceration on the back of his neck. Robert was suffering from shock.

Earlier reports that 10 persons were injured were not confirmed. Most of the passengers escaped with a shaking up.

TCA officials sent a five-man team from Toronto to hold an enquiry into the accident. The RCMP started preliminary checks Monday night.

PILOT IS PRAISED

Eliot A. C. Adamson of Etobicoke, a suburb of Toronto, and copilot R. D. Smuck of Cookville, near Toronto, were highly praised by passengers for the expert landing.

Capt. Smuck said neither he nor Adamson knew what had happened to the passengers until they touched down at Windsor. He said the outside starboard engine—No. 4 engine—started acting up near Flat Rock, Mich., while the aircraft was at 13,000 feet.

The plane, which has a capacity of 60 passengers, was taken down to 8,000 feet in an effort to "feather out," or stop, the engine. The propeller flew free during this process.

Both pilots realized No. 3 engine had been struck. It too was feathered. Passengers said the mishap was heralded with a sound similar to an explosion.

As soon as the engine trouble developed, passengers were told to fasten their safety belts and were given pillows. After the prop came through the plane, insulation material flew about the plane.

Screams could be heard from the injured in the front of the aircraft but passengers remained calm.

STEWARDESSES HELPED

The Dumbell child was led to the rear of the aircraft by stewardesses Sheila Thomson and Rita Tobin, both of Toronto. The other injured were also removed from the ripped opening in the fuselage.

A. J. Danley of Clintonville, Wis., sitting on a forward seat over the wing, said he heard a tremendous explosion. "I thought the whole plane had exploded. The stewardess was remarkably cool and she told us to take it easy."

Miss Lea Posner of Chicago said she had no idea what had happened. She said it sounded like a "loud bang."

The mishap was the first serious accident involving a Viscount since they were first put in service in Canada April 1 last year. The aircraft is powered by four Rolls-Royce Dart engines, each generating 1,400 horsepower. It is equipped with four-bladed propellers.

Monday's accident was the first commercial airline mishap to occur in the Windsor district.

It took the single-engine plane five minutes to get to the airport. Five fire trucks and ambulances were standing by as the big aircraft, introduced in Canada a year ago, landed.

Twelve of the passengers were later transported by plane to Toronto. Among them was Martin Burns, a Montreal businessman.

Mr. Burns said he was sitting halfway down the cabin of the plane on the left side of the aisle. He said Mrs. Lippert and her son were in the first seat and had no warning of the accident.

"The stewardesses handled the incident coolly," he said. "They told us to keep our heads down, cross our hands on the back of the seat in front of us and fasten our safety belts. There was no panic, no screaming. We were told we might be coming down at Detroit."

Donnovan Stevens of Mundelein, Ill., who suffered severe lacerations on the back of the neck when hit by chunks of flying debris, said in hospital he did not know anything was wrong.

"Everything seemed to be going all right when suddenly it happened. I wasn't knocked unconscious. I just felt a sudden shaking and that's all there was to it.

"It happened so fast that there was no excitement. The stewardesses worked with the crowd and had everything under control."

A change in plans resulted in Mrs. Lippert being aboard the aircraft. She had intended to leave Rochester last Wednesday for Southampton, Ont., to visit her mother. She postponed the trip and considered waiting for her husband, who was to start a vacation in two weeks. She changed her mind again and decided to fly ahead of Dr. Lippert.

Dr. Lippert, a native of Kitchener, is at the Mayo Clinic on a five-year fellowship. He graduated from the University of Toronto two years ago and interned at Calgary.

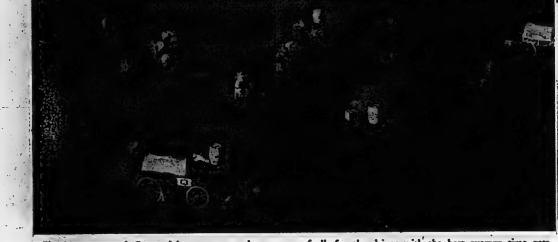
Stampede – Prairie Mardi Gras

Bucking broncos and cowboys keynote the one and only Stampede, when citizens of Calgary don western skirts and jeans to re-live the old flamboyant West for one fun-filled week of square dancing, bulldogging, wild horse racing, wild cow milking, bareback riding.

Even Texans admit the Stampede is the world's biggest rodeo. It takes 350 horses, 80 cows, 80 calves, some 50 Brahma bulls and 60 wild steers to stage the daily four-hour show from Monday to Saturday while Stampede scouts scour the west all year for ornery broncos.

Twenty-five thousand people, many from States, some from abroad, crowd into grandstand at Calgary's fair grounds to watch the world-famous spectacle. Most of the city's 2900 hotel rooms are booked six months ahead. Others are housed in two thousand-odd privates homes, for Stampede officials boast they have never turned anyone away. The crowd is gay in gaudy shirts and Easterners masquerade beneath new 10-gallon hats. Among them are old-timers who recall the first Stampede in 1912, when Calgary was only 37 years old.



Visitors see a three-mile-long parade of Indians, cowboys, Mounties, 20 or 30 bands, stagecoaches and floats depicting city's growth from RCMP post to oil and cattle centres. Excitement of events and crowds of camera-wielding tourists lure 400 Indians to town for what they call The Week.

From youngest to oldest, nearly everyone in Calgary cooperates to make Stampede a prairie Mardi Gras. Merchants put up signs reading "Welcome Pardner." Restaurants put kerchiefs on waiters, hire fiddlers to play cowboy tunes. At one hotel the specialty of The Week is buffalo stew.

National Film Board Photos

Chuckwagon race is Stampede's most spectacular event. Covered wagons careen behind straining thoroughbreds in mad figure eight around centre field barrels. Hubcaps lock, wagons crash, horses tangle and pile up. The climax comes on Saturday night, the most thrill-packed race of all, for the driver with the best average time gets a championship trophy. All told, some 500 cowboys compete for about $40,000 in prize money. Champions gross as much as $50,000 a year, for rodeos today are big business, professional entertainment.

Feed troughs, free breakfasts of coffee and flapjacks, Indian pow-wows and hoedowns on the main street every morning add $20,000 to Stampede costs but create a carnival atmosphere. Expert square dancers, mostly Calgary businessmen, mix with crowd to draw shy female tourists into the fun.

Most bronc riders are showmen, professional athletes who hold cards in a union that pays their medical bills when they're hurt, protects their rights but check-reins rowdy behaviour, and makes them file points from spurs to protect the horses. Five legs were broken in 1951 Stampede.

Interest Rates On Bank Savings To Be Increased

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP) — Owners of some 8,000,000 savings deposits in Canada's chartered banks will share in the banks' increased earnings through the first boost in the savings interest rate in three years.

The rise, announced by the Canadian Bankers' Association at Toronto Monday night, will push the rate to 3¼ per cent from two —about the highest since the early 1930s when it was at a peak of three per cent.

For about 17 years, between 1936 and 1953, the rate was 1½ per cent. The savings on which the interest is paid have more than doubled in the last decade to a current high of some $3,700,000,000.

James Muir, president of the Royal Bank of Canada, says the increase, effective Aug. 1, was long overdue. Finance Minister Harris and A. C. Ashforth, president of the Toronto - Dominion Bank, say it will encourage savings and make more money available for bank loans.

CAN FIX RATIO

Under the Bank Act, the Bank of Canada can fix the chartered banks' ratio of cash to deposits within a range of eight and 12 per cent. Currently the ratio is at eight.

The more money the banks get through deposits, the higher the amount of cash they will hold, and the greater will be the amount available for lending purposes.

However, unless the higher rate attracts more money away from non-bank activities, there may be no over-all change in the banks' deposits.

that under the government's tight-money policy, mortgage money has been more difficult to obtain from banks. The banks have been under central bank orders to restrict their credit expansion.

The banks are traditionally cautious about changing the savings rate. Changes usually reflect long-term economic trends.

Apparently the banks believe that Canada is in for a period of relatively high interest rates generated by a boom that appears to have no end.

National production is running at a record pace. Capital investment is bursting all records. Trade Minister Howe tipped the Commons to a mid-year survey estimate which will show investment intentions are even higher than the $7,500,000,000 forecast last January.

MUST COMPETE

Like other financial institutions, the banks must compete with other investment and savings attractions for their deposits.

Aside from the current competition, the chartered banks may also be looking to the future. A new series of Canada savings bonds will be offered in the fall.

Sinclair Says No Election This Year

OTTAWA (CP)—Fisheries Minister Sinclair said Monday night that in the normal course of events he would not expect a federal general election to be held until next year or perhaps not until 1958.

Mr. Sinclair was interviewed on a CBC television free-lime political broadcast, the Nation's Business.

The minister, in reply to questions by CBC TV interviewer Howard Milligan, reviewed the policies of the Liberal government.

When the interviewer suggested an election might be indicated this year, Mr. Sinclair replied: "You're talking for the Tory

Children Tired After Busy Day At Stampede

CALGARY (CP)—It was a long and busy day for three weary youngsters who could barely keep their eyes open while the grime was washed from their hands and faces before they dropped off to sleep.

The granddaughters of Governor - General Vincent Massey needed no coaxing to go to bed Monday night.

Seven-year-old Jane and her sisters Evva, 6, and Susan, 6, were up at the crack of dawn Monday, so excited about seeing the Calgary Stampede in all its glory—and Indians — that they couldn't stay in bed.

"They were awake at 5:30 in the morning," said Mrs. Lionel Massey, wife of the governor-general's son and secretary, and mother of the three youngsters.

Monday night, the chuck wagon races—the most exciting of all rangeland sports — brought the little girls to their feet to cheer the cowboys.

Susan, with a bruised chin from a bump suffered during the plane ride from Ottawa Saturday and a cut nose from a fall from her new two-wheeled bicycle wore a wild, felt cowboy hat to suit the occasion.

During the parade Susan had to be assured that her grandfather, who had ridden at the head of the parade, would see it. He did, pulling out near the end to watch it go by.

Calgary Stampede Record Is Set

CALGARY (CP)—The Calgary Stampede swamped the opening-day attendance record Monday as droves of visitors filed through the exhibition-ground gates to send the west's greatest rangeland show off to a rollicking start.

A blazing hot day, the normal attractions of the noted event and the added attraction of attendance of Governor-General Vincent Massey brought 97,863 paid admissions to the Stampede grounds, 9,831 more than the record 87,840 persons who came on opening day last year.

The temperature reached an official 82 degrees and the weather office promised at least three or four more days of the same, giving weight to predictions the six-day record of slightly more than 520,000 in 1953 will be broken.

During the parade a three-year-old girl was kicked by a rearing horse and suffered broken ribs, but in general everything went smoothly.

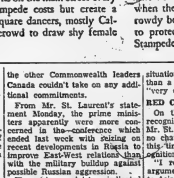
ment in our relations and the development of a greater degree of mutual confidence which would be a more secure foundation for a lasting peace."

POSITIVE STATEMENT

This was a much more positive statement than that made by the prime minister after the previous Commonwealth conference 1½ years ago. At that time, increased military commitments apparently were discussed because Mr. St. Laurent said he had told the other Commonwealth leaders Canada couldn't take on any additional commitments.

From Mr. St. Laurent's statement Monday, the prime ministers apparently were more concerned in the conference which ended last week with doining on recent developments in Russia to improve East-West relations than with the military buildup against possible Russian aggression.

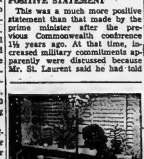


The prime minister indicated to Canada won't fill an Israeli request for two dozen Sabre jet fighters, at least at this time. He said that though the Middle East situation is a "little less acute" than a few months ago it is still "very delicate."

RED CHINA UNCHANGED

On the question of diplomatic recognition of Communist China, Mr. St. Laurent said there will be no change in Canadian policy at this time. The policy is non-recognition. He said:

"I recognize the force of the arguments about the importance to Asia of having its largest country fully participating in the councils of the world. To that view, of course, we must give great weight and we shall.



"But there are other considerations as well which must weigh in determining Canada's policy and course of action. I see no reason strong enough to justify changing our policy on this matter at this time."

Sport Slices

Rare, Medium, Well-Done

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

NEW NAME, NEW TEAM

Likeable Johnny Kelly, sports director of radio station CKOL, Kingston, will have more than airwaves and love-of-community interest in the new Kingston senior "A" hockey club this coming winter. For a report from Keddesville states that Johnny's bosses, the radio station brass, have undertaken the sponsorship of the new entry.

The team will be known as the Kingston "Limestones," which probably will be cut down by space-short headline writers to "Limeys," or "Limes," which an erring compositor could inadvertently change to "Limps."

The Kingston story infers that the management, apart from the sponsor, will be the same, but labor will note a few changes. Hockey-wise Art Casterton, who has mentored many Kingston clubs is back in harness in a managerial capacity while Les Douglas has been retained as coach. Les will likely do his master-minding from the players' bench and not from a pair of skates.

The story goes on: "President Reg Walton and his associates plan to enrol graduates from junior "A" ranks and therefore, it is suspected that some of the veterans who wore Good-year uniforms in the senior "B" group last season will not be invited to return."

Casterton, it is stated, will wield more power and have a much more freer hand with the "Limestones" than he did with the Goodies. In this corner's opinion the powers-that-be made no mistake in re-appointing Douglas as coach. Les has had plenty of experience will fight for his club and players and is popular with the "boys" as well as fandom.

Up to this point the new management has not announced the names of prospective players but Kingstonians say it will be no surprise if Bob Sexsmith, goaltender with the Barrie Flyers and later Toronto Marlboros, becomes the number one boy in the Limestone nets.

The Limestones' management, it is stated, realizes that a team mostly superior to that of last season must be built to meet the challenges of Whitby and Cornwall and other entries. Belleville, if it enters a senior "A" entry must do likewise.

Meanwhile, up around Whitby way, Manager Wren Blair is busy constructing his 1956-57 edition of the "B" champions of last year. He has signed Ken Gagnon again as playing coach and will retain the services of other Dunlop luminaries but five will be dropped to make way for new sponsor.

Blair reports there is no dearth of candidates and makes no secret of the fact that he is out to annex a championship the first time out in "A" company. He plans to open the training season on September 20th and that his players will get a more or less severe test in pre-season exhibition games against top "A" clubs in the province.

MAT SENSATION

Unless the television cameras lie, this Edward Carpentier, the French wrestling champion, is the best grappler to hit Canadian wrestledom in many a moon. He is as quick as a flash, an accomplished gymnast and extricates himself from punishing holds with the swiftness of a striking rattler. Carpentier is said to be a relation to the once-famous Georges Carpentier, French boxing idol who fought Dempsey back in the twenties. More about him later. When The French flash will be here in person Friday night against that old toughie Fred Atlas. Gil Main meets Roberto Fico and Pat Flanagan takes on Frank Valois in the other bouts.

HARNESS RACING

Foggding hoofs, whip-wielding drivers and all the color that goes with harness racing will be on hand at the third Kinsmen meet at Exhibition Park tomorrow evening.

As is noted in the entry list which appears elsewhere all four classes have their full quota of entries with some 35 horses being on hand.

The "A" Class for "green" horses has been converted to a classified handicap race, says Kinsman Don Thomas. This means some of the faster nags will be given a handicap in order to give the slower ones a better chance.

The meet has attracted the best entries of the season thus far and tomorrow evening's card should be productive of some thrilling racing. Already classed by veteran horsemen as the best meet held in Central Ontario, the Kinsmen's effort tomorrow should top its predecessors for sheer thrills and excitement. First heat gets away at six o'clock. Betting privileges will again be available.

Toronto Group May Purchase Detroit Tigers

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says there is a strong possibility a group headed by Toronto millionaire Jack Kent Cooke will be the new owner of Detroit Tigers of the American Baseball League.

The newspaper says Cooke bid $5,180,000 for the franchise. It says this figure is "within $70,000 of the top bid, submitted by the group headed by Bill Veeck, former owner of Cleveland Indians and St. Louis Browns."

The story adds:

"The figures were first published yesterday by Lyle Smith, sports editor of the Detroit Free Press who said there was a third group with a bid in excess of $5,000,000 headed by Robert Goldstein, Hollywood producer.

"Contacted at his home last evening, Cooke would neither confirm nor deny the Detroit report. He pointed out that all bidders had been sworn to secrecy and he felt that he could not make any comment."

Terms of the sale specify that club need not necessarily go to the highest bidder. Cooks owns Toronto Maple Leafs of the International League. The Globe and Mail says there is reported to be much opposition among major league owners to Veeck taking over Tigers.

Odds Favor American League But National Has Power Plus; Musial Will Set Game Record

By JOE REICHLER

WASHINGTON (AP)—The selection of Pittsburgh righthander Bob Friend and Chicago White Sox lefthander Billy Pierce as the starting pitchers for today's annual all-star game brought no change in the 6-5 odds favoring the American League over the National.

A sellout crowd of nearly 29,000 was certain to jam Griffith Stadium for this 22rd playing of the mid-summer contest between the leagues.

In addition, millions throughout the country were to see and hear the game on television and radio with the proceeds going to the player's pension fund. Baseball Commissioner Ford Frick was designated to throw out the first ball at 1 p.m. EDT.

GOOD FORECAST

Fair weather with temperature in the 80s was predicted. Should the weather turn out to be rainy, an attempt will be made to play the game tonight or, failing that, on Wednesday.

Manager Casey Stengel of the American League team had no trouble deciding on Pierce as his starter but Walter Alston, the National's skipper, did not settle on Friend until he was convinced the Pirate ace was fully recovered from a mild muscle pain that sent him to bed Sunday.

Stengel, whose first choice of Pierce over his own Yankee Whitey Ford, said: "Pierce has the best record in the league. I know he pitched Sunday but he went only five innings and that shouldn't bother him at all. I've got to start him after what he did against those guys (National League) before. He has pitched six innings against them and they haven't scored against him yet."

Stengel, a man of many innovations, said he may throw from the southpaws against the power-laden National League. His plan was to follow Pierce with Ford and Herb Score, the Cleveland fireballer.

EARLY CHANGES LIKELY

Stengel's plans were subject to change, however, if Alston decided to send in his switch-hitting righthanded hitting lineup as soon as possible. But the Dodger boss indicated he planned to do just that after the third inning. Under the rules he must play the players named in the fan vote for at least three innings.

Alston said he wasn't sure who would follow Friend to the mound. He thought he would use a lefthander for the middle three innings but added:

"It all depends on the moves Casey makes. That is, what players he has in the games as it goes along."

Friend's work was cut out for him since six of the Americans' starters bat lefthanded, including the switch-hitting Mickey Mantle. The lefthanded Pierce will face five righthanders in the Dodgers' lineup.

Alston defended his choice of the righthanded Friend against the AL's strong southpaw batting order by saying:

"I know they've got a bunch of lefthanded hitters in the American lineup, but it's no advantage pitching a lefthander against guys like Williams, Kaline and Mantle. They'll hit anybody, lefty or right."

NATS HAVE POWER

Stengel's selection of Mantle did not come as much of a surprise since Mickey played four innings against Washington Sunday and reported his injured knee gave him no trouble.

Even with Mantle in the lineup, the Americans can't match the Nationals in power. Alston's wrecking crew has 236 home runs to its credit as compared with 109 for the Americans. Mickey, however, with his 26, is tops individually.

It is generally conceded that the Nationals are equipped with a stronger bench than the Americans. Decorating the dugout at the outset will be such right-handed hitters as Willie Mays, Hank Aaron, Ernie Banks, Roy Campanella, Rip Repulski and Stan Lopata, with the southpaw swingers as Ted Kluszewski, Duke Snider and Eddie Mathews.

The American starters include Gil McDougald, Ray Boone, Charlie Maxwell, Vic Power, Harry Simpson, Sherman Lollar, Billy Martin, Roy Sievers and Jim Piersall.

Although the American holds an overall edge of 13 victories to nine, the National has won five of the last six, including four out of five against Stengel. The Nationals won last year 6-5 in 12 innings on Stan Musial's home run.

Musial was set to play today in his 13th game, a record. Ted Williams was entering his 12th game.

Good Shooting At Bisley

BISLEY Eng. (Reuters)—Near perfect shooting gave an RCAF marksman fifth place Monday in the Southern Railway match of the National Rifle Association Bisley tournament.

Sgt. D. A. Fraser's 34 out of 35 at 200 yards in the main open event of the day topped the scores turned in by members of the official Canadian team.

Fraser, from London, Ont., is a member of a seven-man team of sharpshooters from the RCAF Air Division in Europe. Next best Canadian showing in the event was a 40th place for Maj. H. W. Hampton of the Royal Canadian School of Infantry at Camp Borden, Ont. He had a card of 33.

None of the members of the 20-man team of the Canadian Rifle Association, Canada's official representatives at Bisley, was in the first 50.

Moore Silent Over Prospects Parker Fight

TORONTO (CP) — The usually talkative Archie Moore arrived here Monday for his July 25 outdoor fight with James J. Parker and promptly pulled a switch on reporters. He was practically silent.

In response to questions fired at him at a press conference, the No. 1 contender for the vacant world heavyweight title said he didn't know his present weight, his best fighting weight, what he would weigh for his coming fight or his training plans.

He became almost loquacious when someone asked if he considered the bout with Parker as a shot for the world title as advertised here. I'm only a fighter. I don't make the billboards," he said.

Moore probably was miffed at the reception given him at the airport. He was met by only one newsreel cameraman who eventually acted as chauffeur to get Moore and his sparring partner, Dale Hall of Los Angeles, Calif., to their downtown hotel.

Moore arrived at the hotel about 10 minutes before the press conference was scheduled to start and hopped right upstairs without more than an hour.

He shrugged off questions about Floyd Patterson of New York, No. 2 on the list for Rocky Marciano's vacant title, and reporters eventually sought out Moore's manager, Charley Johnston.

It didn't take Charley long to warm up. "Archie is the best fighter in the world right now and anybody that wants the title has got to beat him. Certainly, he's world champ, if Parker beats him in a couple of weeks they've got to go to Parker, that's all. He'll be the champ."

Mantle, Bailey Top Sluggers Williams May Block Mickey

NEW YORK (AP) — Mickey Mantle of the New York Yankees and Ed Bailey of Cincinnati today held mid-season leads in the major league batting races. But the smoldering bat of Ted Williams may stand in the way of Mantle's bid for the triple crown.

Williams, 37 year - old Boston slugger, is hitting at a .362 clip. He has, however, been to the plate only 155 times and would need to average slightly more than three at bats a game to finish with the 400 necessary for consideration for the title. The Red Sox have 76 games left on their schedule.

Mantle, who returned to the Bronx Sunday following a leg injury sustained in Boston July 4, has a .371 average. The switch-hitting centre fielder is well out in front in homers with 30 and in runs batted in with 71.

Charley Maxwell of Detroit is Mantle's chief batting challenger among the players who have had a minimum of 175 trips. Maxwell, a journeyman outfielder until this season, dropped one point to .361 last week while Mantle added two eight points before he was sidelined.

HAS GOOD LEAD

In the National League, Bailey has a comfortable margin over teammate Ted Kluszewski. The Reds' batboy dropped eight points to 329 but they lost 17 points to fall to .322.

Rip Repulski of the Cards has become a strong after an early season injury and shows a 3.35 mark that has Ballard with 11 homers at bat.

Frank Robinson of the Redlegs remained in third place in the senior circuit at .313. Hank Aaron, advanced three points to fourth at .310. Wally Moon of St. Louis is fifth with .308.

Managers Should Select All-Stars Says Williams

WASHINGTON (AP)—Ted Williams said Monday that the selection of players for baseball's all-star game should be given back to the managers.

The Boston Red Sox power hitter and an older statesman in the major leagues at 37, apparently was directing his comment especially to the fan vote which placed Cincinnati's Ed Bailey in the starting National League lineup.

"They should give the selection of players back to the managers" said the left-handed batting star of the 12th all-star game. "They (the managers) know the players and their leagues. They know whom they should pick. The fans have been doing a right up to now. They've picked some good teams. But this year, the voting was a bit top-sided."

Minor Baseball

The usual three Monday night games were played in the peewee baseball league last night with Parkdale reaching up a 5-0 shutout over Lloyd's Little Giants.

Belle Haven Club picked up their second crayfish win, downing the T.P.T.'s 9-1 while Orphans captured a 10-4 decision from the Deacon Quakers.

GOOD GUESSER

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — The South Carolina tax commission and state auditor J. M. Smith released today the state's 1955-56 tax take by $4,000. And that figures out to an error of .00003 per cent. The prediction, made in December, 1954, was $119,940,000. The take was $119,950,000.

The 265-pounder, who was all-American with Syracuse University in 1954 spent the last two years in the armed forces.

JACOBS ARRIVES

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Playing coach Indian Jack Jacobs arrived in town Monday to put his London Lords of the senior ORFU Info active business.

He has called an informal session Wednesday night of all interested London and district football players. First drill is scheduled for July 16.

First of the four other imports also booked in. He is Jack Conway, former University of Wichita quarter who will spell off Jacobs at the pivot spot, and also will play one of the halfback positions.

Supple, Dower Title Bout All Confusion

MONTREAL (CP). Harry Shephard co-manager of Montreal Pat Suppe, planned to get in touch with promoters in Cardiff Wales, today to straighten out confusion over the matter of a title bout between Suple and Dai Dower of Wales, the British Empire flyweight champion.

Shephard said Monday night that a fight between Supple, the Canadian bantamweight champ, and Dower, with the Welshman's flyweight crown at stake, had been arranged through the promoters for Cardiff July 16.

However, Nat Seller, Dower's manager, denied in London that his fighter and Supple would meet for a title match this month

WORLD BIG A NATURAL

"There has been no suggestion of a Dower-Supple fight, but I think it would be a natural," said Seller. "We would be willing to defend the title in Canada if anyone there was interested in promoting it."

Seller also scoffed at Seller's statement saying he was stalling to get more money for Dower.

Shephard said "we were all to leave for London by plane Friday, but now I guess I'll have to get this thing straightened out first."

He said he planned to talk by telephone to promoter Sid Evans of Cardiff.

Seller said Dower was scheduled to meet Pipo Blonisic of France July 16, but the Supple handlers claim was set for the flyweight title bout.

Eddie Supple, Pat's father and co-manager, said the "mixup" could have arisen over conflicting reports on Pat's age. The British boxing board of control does not recognize title fights unless the fighters are both more than 21 years old.

"The newspapers have often given my age as 19 or 20," said Eddie Supple "and this may have confused the board. I have conclusive proof, however, that Pat is 21."

Hamilton Trims Long Branch

HAMILTON (CP) — Hamilton Lincolns moved into a second-place tie with Peterborough Trailermen Monday night as they trounced Long Branch Monarchs 10-3 in the Senior Ontario Lacrosse Association game.

Ivan Thomas and Roger Smith paced the winners with three goals apiece. Gary Smith, Al Garbutt, Jack Sibbald, Ezra McCausless and Al Doyle scored twice, Ken Carson, Brownie Porter and Pete Bardkis made singles.

Long Branch marksmen were Joe Kapasky, 2, Kapasky, Henry Smith and Jim Brown.

HONOR MUSICAL

WASHINGTON (AP)—Baseball players Monday honored Stan Musial, the St. Louis Cards' outfielder - first baseman, as their "player of the decade." They called him one of the greatest.

Musial, here for his 13th major league all-star game, was the main attraction at a Washington Touchdown-luncheon where he received a grandfather's clock as baseball's best in the years 1946-1955.

Stan won the "decade" poll of players, officials, sportswriters and broadcasters conducted by The Sporting News, the baseball weekly. He topped such stars as Joe DiMaggio of the New York Yankees, Ted Williams of Boston and Bob Feller of Cleveland who finished behind him in that order.

National League Attendance Up, American Down

NEW YORK (AP)—The drawing power of Mickey Mantle and the New York Yankees, renewed fan interest in Pittsburgh and Cincinnati and a tumbling turnstile count in Kansas City are reflected in a mid-season survey of major league attendance figures.

The survey, made by Associated Press, also discloses that the National League, with a total of 4,038,507 customers, is more than 400,000 ahead of its 1955 figures with the Chicago Cubs in front.

The American League, showing an attendance of 3,902,980, is more than 200,000 behind at the gate.

While the tight National League pennant race largely is responsible for the senior loop's gain, the Yankees are the prime reason the AL does not show a more marked decrease. They have attracted 2,052,806 fans for a gain of only 29,082. But with Mantle as the big attraction, the Yankees have played before 797,-161 on the road for an average of better than 42,000 a game.

PIRATES AHEAD

The Pirates, who were in the thick of the National League race until recently, already have surpassed their home attendance of last season. With 352,686 already through the gate, Pittsburgh should double its attendance of '55 when it wound up with 469,297.

Cincinnati's surprising Redlegs have drawn 427,103 fans through the Crosley Field turnstiles for a 1956 total. Milwaukee's Braves, with 373,412 at this time a year ago and finished with 683,960.

Kansas City's sharp decrease may be an indication the novelty of major league baseball is wearing thin in the As backyard. Kansas City was one of the big league clubs to exceed the million mark in 1955, collecting 1,333,054 customers. This year, however, the last-place Athletics have played before only 297,610 for a drop of more than 200,000.

Milwaukee, which has led the majors in attendance in each of the past three seasons since the Braves moved in from Boston, again is on top with a count of 764,154.

District Soccer League Results

A Bay of Quinte league soccer match postponed from July 4th was played last night with 6 R.D. taking a narrow 1-0 victory over Belleville Rotary Club entry.

Critchley booted home the lone goal of the game.

Wednesday, July 18th, has been set for another postponed affair. This game will be played at Stadium between the Shoemen and the RCAF, having been postponed on May 30th.

Other clubs were idle.

The juvenile division attracted the largest number of entries with 21 youngsters vying for the honors. Following the rounds the young golfers were entertained in the club house where prizes were presented to the various winners by T. A. Carruthers of the Bay of Quinte Club.

The finals will be held at the Scarboro Golf Club, Toronto on July 17 for those who qualify in the district rounds. Following the finals a junior team will be chosen to play against a District of Columbia team in an international match in Toronto late in July.

Sizzling Leafs Maintain Win Pace Edge Closer to Top With 9-5 Win

They needed asbestos gloves to handle the Toronto Maple Leafs in the International League these days.

The sizzling Leafs, winning 17 of their last 21 games, have nudged Rochester Red Wings out of second place and today are only a game and a half back of the league leading Montreal Royals.

Their 8-5 decision over Buffalo Monday night snapped a five-game winning streak by the last place Herd.

There never was any doubt as to the outcome as Jim Bunning notched southpaw Fred Hahn for five runs in the first inning before retiring in the first inning.

Bill Wilson hit a homer during the big first inning and Frank Wilson added another off reliever Bill Freats. It marked the 13th game in a row that the Leafs have hit at least one home run.

Lake Easter was the big man for the jiggers, hitting a bases-loaded triple on his second trip to the plate. That made five extra-base hits in a row for the big outfielder. He got a double the first time up and had extra base hits on his last three at-bats Sunday.

Other clubs were idle.

Flash Gordon Seals' Manager

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Jon (Flash) Gordon was named manager of San Francisco Seals Monday shortly after Eddie Joost was fired from the job.

Gordon, once a great second baseman for New York Yankees, quit recently as a Detroit Tiger coach. He managed Sacramento in the Pacific Coast League in 1951 and 1952.

The dismissal of Joost was announced by Lefty O'Doul, president of the Seals, who said: "He is simply not getting the most out of his ball club. I think we should be doing better."

The Seals are in seventh place in the PCL, 14 games out of first place.

DETECTORS FAIL TO FIND BANK LOOT

Police officers R. Smith and Bert Tallon operate a mine detector over the grounds of Constable Harry Read in Welland, Ont., in their search for the missing $73,000 of the postal robbery a year ago. The mine-detector search was made on the chance that the money was buried in a metal box. P.C. Read was arrested after a bill from the stolen money was passed at a bank. Later $5,000 was found on his premises. (Central Press Canadian).

PRINCESS GRACE APPEARS IN PUBLIC

For the first time since her marriage to Prince Rainier III of Monaco 11 weeks ago, Princess Grace Patricia, the former Grace Kelly of Philadelphia and Hollywood made a public appearance in Monaco. The occasion was a special mass in the cathedral of St. Charles. Princess Grace is shown as she left the cathedral carrying a bouquet of flowers bound with ribbons of the American and Monegasque national colors. (Central Press Canadian).

Bogart Getting Back to Old Self After Major Chest Surgery

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — When I told Judy Garland I was going to pay a call to her neighbor Humphrey Bogart, she said:

"I hear he's growing at people again. That's awfully good news. I went to visit him after he got home from the hospital, and he was very sweet and nice. I said to myself, 'Now, dear, he really is sick!'"

His other pals will be happy to know that Bogart is getting back to his old self these days and is grumbling and surly once more.

But it has been a long haul. On March 1 he underwent major chest surgery.

He still hasn't recovered. He is a slim 120 pounds. The months of treatment having destroyed his appetite. But 16 days aboard his yacht had brought color back to his face.

And he's growing again.

ALL COPTING BRANDO

"Television!" he snorted. "I don't go out at night, so there isn't much to do but watch television. Most of the stuff is pretty lousy. Stupid stories acted by guys who are trying to be Marlon Brando. Oh, once in a while you see something good, but not very often."

This put him onto a tirade about the new school of so-called realistic acting.

"They fed up with this bunch of back-scratching, nose - picking actors," he said. "I think that's acting, just to make themselves look repulsive."

His wife, Lauren Bacall, entered, her hair in curlers—she was stenting a premiere that night. They had a squabble over how much he was allowed to drink. He said two cocktails before lunch and two before dinner; she said one at lunch and two before dinner.

He won, but she supervised the making of his drink: one ounce only of scotch, two ice cubes and filled to the top with water.

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Generals, admirals, and captains of industry play an expert game of bridge. There is no wonder at this. They are sharp in the coups and squeezes, and long range planning.

Take the deal you see here:

South became the declarer at seven spade grand-slam contract. Opening lead from west was a diamond. A finesse right with dummy's deuce and the grand slam and south knows it.

In the long range planning of how to take 13 tricks, every bit of possibilities must be explored. South must get rid of two diamonds and two clubs. So, he needs four stuffing vehicles in north.

Timing and entries and the pulling of trumps must be hinged into a combined smack operation. All of which must be blueprinted ahead of time in the head of declarer.

The trick one was grabbed fast with dummy's diamond ace and the club jack return entered south with club king. The lone south heart was led and finessed with the dummy deuce. It worked.

So, ace and king of hearts were cashed. On these were stuffed the remaining two south diamonds. Diamond queen was then led. East's king covered to keep south's diamond ten from south ruffed.

Club ace was cashed on which dummy stuffed a small diamond. Dummy was entered with a trump. A south heart from dummy was ruffed high by south. All trumps were pulled and dummy had the rest.

Would you avoid the dangerous heart finesse and establish long hearts for ruffing? Or ruff south's clubs and hope to establish the long hearts? What would you use for entries to have diamonds?

Or would you hope the opponents make a mistake and throw away their best diamond? No. The long range planning calls for daring the heart finesse. It is seen as in war manoeuvres, they tell me.

RUSSIA UP TO PAR

AMSTERDAM (Reuters) —Professor S. A. Wouthuysen, Dutch acting secretary of an international conference on nuclear reactions, said Monday night the conference had shown that Russian atomic research was on a level with that of the West. Canadian atomic scientists were among representatives of 36 countries attending.

MOMENT OF BLISS FOR BLIND BOY

Few boys can compare with that experienced by sightless John Milan of New York City on the return of his dog Rocky. For two days the dog was missing and newspapers printed pictures of the dog and of John. A boy in the neighborhood spotted Rocky and brought about this reunion. (Central Press Canadian).

Your Horoscope

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

FOR WEDNESDAY, JULY 11, 1956

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—There is much to be said for the kind of day and situation that keeps one on his toes, makes him think. Today may require more effort mentally than you feel the giving, but when you must you must.

April 21 to May 21 (Taurus)—Don't let others distract you from duties. Think logically, and don't be careless about details. In other words, don't think today by halves.

May 22 to June 21 (Gemini)—Mildly generous aspects. You may have a break your openings, so be friendly and sensible in sound style. Harmony, meeting the other fellow half-way will bring results

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—Distractions, deviations are likely tendencies now. You be careful, and do not let others divert you from the straight and safe path. Keep smiling and be gracious, however.

July 24 to August 23 (Leo)—Well placed words will do wonders today. You can carve a pleasant personal niche during this healthy period. Rumors, hearsay can often deceiving; rely on known facts.

August 24 to September 23 (Virgo) — Well placed words will do wonders today. You can carve a pleasant personal niche during this healthy period. Rumors, hearsay can often deceiving; rely on known facts.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra) — You can progress and dowed with a quiet but potent wit and humor. Sometimes the homespun type...you can be proficient- at story-telling, after dinner speeches, sought-after as a conversationalist. This is excellent for business and home life. Just don't try to live "by your wits." And don't get into discussions that cause the disinclination you inwardly abhor. Children, elders love your company; animals usually take to you. Study consistently, not spasmodically. Don't fret about trifles. Birthdate: John Quincy Adams, 6th U.S. pres.; John Wanamaker, merchant.

October 24 to November 23 (Scorpio) — You are the capable, all-round sensible kind, yet do foolish things at times to your own detriment. Reason matters out carefully, then act reasonably slowly — not with haste or anxiety.

November 24 to December 21 (Sagittarius) — Avoid making hasty decisions or drastic moves, especially in plans and activities now working out painfully. But be alert and acquisitive when opportunities come your way.

December 22 to January 20 (Capricorn)—This day's aspects stress a need for poise and forethought, but benefits can be derived from well-managed activities.

January 21 to February 19 (Aquarius) — Carry out your ideas, but don't go out on a limb without knowing what you are doing and why. Some aspects suggest that you control tendencies toward restlessness and anxiety.

February 20 to March 20 (Pisces) — Carefully examine your schedule. Don't rush into situations which require study, and into long-range planning.

Industrial Talks Making History At Oxford

By ROBERT RICE

OXFORD, England (CP) — A question marks hangs over the newest experiment in industrial relations now taking place in this college city.

Everybody agrees there is a perpetual need to discuss the human problems of industrial communities. This subject has summoned to Oxford 208 persons, workers, unionists and managers, from far-off Fiji in the Pacific and remote Tanganyika in East Africa; in fact from every area of the Commonwealth.

But the results fill the whole thing is too idealistic—that all the talk in the world won't reduce such a complex problem to simple, common reality.

They ask: Can any new people, even so widely drawn and so representative of all sides of industry, really do anything about the difficulties man made for himself when he stopped farming and became factories?

With the Duke of Edinburgh as active patron resident, the conference started Monday optimistically and suspiciously. Some members, 30 of them from Canada, seemed to share his hopes when he said:

"The conference will have achieved its object if each one of you goes home just much more aware of what industry does to people and with perhaps a feeling that as you get better informed when and if your turn comes, to smooth out the difficulties of industrialization."

"You know," said one observer, "I can't help feeling nothing but good can come of this if they don't understand industry any better, at least they'll understand the Commonwealth better."

Peter Peacock, 19, conference secretary, looks back on Britain's industrial revolution two centuries ago for the reason and purpose of the present meetings.

"Progress can be," he says, "a more abundant life—roomier houses and more to put them in, less dreary housework for the wife, more opportunities for the children."

It is on this level that those who gather hope for the best results. They feel that the members, by contributing their own ideas from their own experience, will come up—for the benefit of all—with at least a clearer understanding of humans and their work.

Prosperity No Asset if Nation Is Not Happy

OXFORD, England (Reuters)—The Duke of Edinburgh said Monday he saw no advantage in a prosperous and powerful nation if it achieved its power at the expense of human freedom and happiness."

The duke addressed some 300 men and women from almost every part of the Commonwealth at the opening of a Commonwealth conference on human problems in industry. He is president of the three-week conference.

"It may not be very easy to decide quite what we are aiming at in this modern world of ours," he said, "but whatever the target we must take into account that all people are primarily citizens and not just workers with a bit of private life."

FOUR QUESTIONS

The duke suggested four basic ideas for the conference to develop:

1. Are there lessons from the past which can help overcome the problems of present industrialization?

2. Can the new industries of the Commonwealth help each other?

3. What things make for a good factory, a happy community and a satisfied individual?

4. What is the viewpoint in industrial problems of the board room, the factory floor, the labor union, and the research, production, and personnel departments?

Pageant Officials Deny Entrant Was Disqualified

HAMILTON (CP) — Miss Canada pageant officials denied today that 24-year-old Linda Hagen of Windsor had been disqualified for making an unauthorized statement to a Toronto newspaper on Friday.

The blonde children's nurse who came to Canada from Austria four years ago is said to have told a reporter that European women are more intelligent than Canadian women. Later, it is claimed, she said she had been disqualified from the contest because of these remarks, made while she was unchaperoned.

Today Mrs. S. Radcliffe Weaver, wife of the pageant organizer, said that after she read the opinions attributed to Miss Hagan she told her that she could be disqualified for breaking one of the pageant rules, which says contestants must be chaperoned while making statements to the press.

"However, she was not disqualified. If she had been she would not have paraded on the runway on Saturday night."

MAY LOSE AWARD

Mrs. Weaver said that if Miss Hagen persisted in her claim that she had been disqualified, then she would not be eligible for the $100 scholarship awarded to each contestant.

"To remain eligible for the $100 she will have to write pageant officials a letter disclaiming the report that she has been disqualified and saying she has been misquoted," said Mrs. Weaver.

Steel Companies And Union Await Government Move

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Both parties involved in the country-wide steel strike which has left some 730000 workers idle today awaited a government decision on plans for reopening negotiations.

The strike now is in its 16th day and it was expected officials of the United States mediation service would call together heads of the industry and the United Steelworkers, probably within a day or two.

During the long weeks of contract debate the federal government stayed out of the picture. But after exploratory talks in Pittsburgh, it decided to take the initiative as neither party made any effort to resume contract talks nor indicated a change in their respective positions.

Negotiations collapsed six hours before the strike July 1, leaving idle 650,000 steelworkers and cutting steelmaking profuction by the U.S. by 90 per cent.

TO SUGGEST MOVES

Mediators hope to confer separately with the union and industry and suggest moves to both sides that may lead to a compromise settlement.

The industry offered a 53-month contract at terms it valued at 17 3-3 cents an hour per employee for the first year. The union pegged the offer at about 14 cents. Steelworkers had earned $2.46 an hour.

In another development, the government acted again Monday to conserve steel products for essential defence work by increasing the plant area that operating steel mills must devote to production for defence

The move doubles the space that the 33 or more steel mills not affected by the strike must devote to defence production.

Shirt Firms Merge

PRESCOTT (CP) — Plans were announced Monday for the merger of Wellington of Canada Ltd., and C. F. Hathaway Co., two North American shirt manufacturers. Company officials said the agreement is expected to result in sharp expansion of Wellington's plant in this town some 50 miles south of Ottawa.

BUSY SEASON

PORT ARTHUR (CP) — The Lakehead is expecting a record year in tourist travel. During June 18,325 American cars crossed the border at Pigeon River compared with last year's 10,826 in the same month.

DAMP DUFF

WELLAND (CP)—Visitors to Kinsmen-sponsored carnival here threw baseballs at some of the town's leading citizens. A prominent Kinsman sat suspended in a split seat over a tank of water. Anyone who could hit the release-pin on the seat could give the gentleman a dunking.

Girl Of Ten Dies In Fire But Sister Saves 6 Of Family

Blaze Destroys Farm Home North of Sudbury

KMSDALE, Ont. (CP) — A 10-year - old girl died Tuesday in flames which destroyed a Northern Ontario log home despite the heroic efforts of a teenage sister who saved six other members of the family.

Shirley Leith, 17, led six of her younger brothers and sisters to safety and was trying to guide another sister, Rita, out when the young girl panicked, ran back into a room and hid under a bed.

Shirley said she was beaten back into the room to try to find her young sister but was driven out by smoke and heat.

The seven-room house in this community, 60 miles north of Sudbury, was burned to the ground while the children's mother and a 15-year-old brother were picking berries. The father, Ed Leigh, is a patient in a tuberculosis hospital at Malton, near Toronto.

The fire was discovered by Raymond, 5, who went to the kitchen to get a drink and ran back upstairs screaming: "there is a fire in the kitchen."

Shirley rescued her brothers and sisters and told Brian, 9, and Raymond to carry their three-year-old sister to safety. When they found the front door locked she encouraged them to run through six-foot flames in the kitchen.

Shirley threw the baby Sharon, 2, from a second-storey window. The child landed uninjured on the ground in the front yard.

The children's 32 - year - old grandmother escaped by climbing out a back window on to a shed and jumping to the ground.

Shirley's sister, Rita, 8, and Rita, to lead them out. Linda was the last to be found in the burning home. She was found under a bed by police.

Mrs. Leigh said she could not understand how the fire began. She said the children were playing in the house and there was no fire in the kitchen at the time.

Bomber Explodes Seconds After Crew Escapes

COMOX, B.C. (CP)—A Mitchell bomber exploded in flames, circled back to the RCAF air base here Tuesday and then exploded again in the air almost after the four men aboard landed it, said flight.

The men, all from Calgary, escaped unharmed. The explosion shattered nearby plate parts that surrounding bush areas as it returned to the runway shortly after take-off. The resulting bush fires took four hours to control and the planes fired burned to a crisp on the runway.

Pilot Douglas Anderson and co-pilot M. A. Taylor, both employed by Canadian Pacific Air Lines, gave the alarm when they saw a fire in flight from Calgary. They picked up Flt. Lt. R. D. Scotter and Flt. Sgt. M. Labine, who had flown a T-33 jet trainer here from Calgary and were getting a ride home.

Daring Canadian Airman Battles Tanker Blaze

MONTREAL, France (Reuters) — A daring Canadian airman is an asbestos suit leaped onto a blazing tanker last night in a blaze that destroyed 30,000 gallons of jet-fuel here.

The base commander, Group Capt. James Somerville, today revealed that Flight Lieutenant K. Stevenson's heroic act prevented another 70,000 gallons of jet fuel from exploding.

The fire broke out Tuesday as the fuel for Canadian Mark VI Sabre jets at the Montmedy RAF base here was being discharged from a tanker into storage tanks.

Stevenson, 27, who is married and has three children, dashed on top of one tanker and opened valves to stem the flow, blowing up from expanding fumes inside.

He then leaped onto an adjacent tanker which was already consumed in flames. Most of the fuel line connected to the gasoline truck. Firemen later uncoupled 10 tankers containing 70,000 gallons of jet fuel from the two blazing tankers.

Sgt. - Stevenson, formerly of Montreal, enlisted in 1945. His wife and children live at the base married quarters.

One airman, 25-year-old LAC Thomas Robert Wilson, formerly of Montreal, in charge of one of the gasoline trucks, was burned. He was removed to the base hospital. His condition is serious.

The base's 30 firefighters worked with three brigades and rolled unlitches 10 coupled rail tankers, containing 70,000 gallons of jet fuel, standing on the other tankers.

The cause of the fire is not known.

Somerville, whose parents live at Midland, ont., described the fire as an "inferno." It spread rapidly as the tankers cracked under the heat. Fuel seeped from the cracks and formed rivulets on the track. It was a race against the clock to stop the lot from blowing sky high.

Shirley and her grandchild Linda, 8, and Rita, to lead them out. Linda was the last to be found in the burning home. She was found under a bed by police.

Mrs. Leigh said she could not understand how the fire began. She said the children were playing in the house and there was no fire in the kitchen at the time.

Atlantic Union Not Feasible Now Says Pearson

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Pearson said today that Atlantic union is not a reasonable proposition at this time.

He added that any move toward Atlantic union by the federal states comprising the Atlantic nations—would be slow and gradual if, indeed, it ever took place at all.

He made the comment during a wide-ranging discussion following the work of the three-man NATO committee seeking ways of increasing co-operation among the members of the Atlantic alliance. Mr. Pearson, Foreign Minister Lange of Norway and Foreign Minister Martino of Italy comprise the committee.

The minister said the "bitter controversy" among Britain, Greece and Turkey, all NATO members, over the Cyprus issue is unfortunate.

But the fact that disputes occur within NATO makes it all the more desirable to strengthen the alliance.

CPR Train Seized for $216 Debt, But Stays on Run Until 'Bailed Out'

HULL, Que. (CP) — The CPR's Ottawa-Manitwaki, Que., train, under seizure nearly 24 hours and in danger of being sold at public auction, has been bailed out by order of legal action.

Tre train and other CPR equipment were seized Tuesday because the Canadian Pacific Railway company had not paid a $216.75 bill. The bailiff's seizure closed late Tuesday after CPR lawyer Joseph St. Marie of Hull paid Notary Jean Paul Lavallee of the bailiff's fee of $14.25.

The bond—Fee—Number 2514 —lender, one baggage and two passenger cars were seized by Maurice Chevalier, Quebec Superior Court bailiff on the application of lawyer Harold Maloney. Mr. Chevalier also seized six locomotive, four chairs, one table and one typewriter.

Mr. Maloney obtained a writ of execution on behalf of Raymond Foucault, awarded $202.50 court costs against the CPR earlier this month. The writ of costs when the Quebec Superior Court dismissed the action which had launched against him by the railway.

The train was seized as it stood in Hull station. However, it could not be moved as the 90-mile Ottawa-Manitwaki run because it was during the closed of its crew.

"I thought I had seized pretty nearly everything in my time as a bailiff," Mr. Chevalier said. "But I'll be the first I ever seized a railroad train."

When Mr. Chevalier served papers on J. R. Thibaudeau, CPR telegraph operator at Hull station, Mr. Thibaudeau was unable to make payment. Mr. Chevalier said the train and other property would be sold at public auction July 23 at 5.35 p.m. unless the railway paid up.

House of Lords Votes Down Bill to End Death Penalty

LONDON (Reuters)—The House of Lords Tuesday night voted down a bill passed by the House of Commons to abolish the death sentence for murder.

After a two-day debate in the Upper Chamber, during which the lord chief justice called the bill "a gamble with lives," they decided against it by 238 votes to 95, a majority of 143.

Their decision means only delay—and an end to the move to outlaw the gallows in Britain. The bill, which is sponsored by a private member and opposed by the government, will now go back to the House of Commons, where members can insist on its becoming law a year from now.

Argument over the rights and wrongs of letting murderers live rocked back and forward in the Upper Chamber. Tension mounted on the red plush benches as the vote approached. As in the Commons, the Lords were allowed to vote according to their individual consciences and not along party lines.

The controversy has particular point at a time when Britain is worried by an outbreak of gang warfare in London and a countrywide increase in crimes of violence.

A key speaker in the debate was Lord Goddard, lord chief justice, who has presided over many murder trials. He said he thought the time is ripe for consideration of amendments in the law of murder. But he still believed that where a man deliberately murdered he should pay the supreme penalty for his crime.

Many other speakers in the debate urged a change in the murder laws as an alternative to outright abolition of the death penalty.

Among them was Dr. Geoffrey Fisher, Archbishop of Canterbury and Primate of the Church of England, who said he accepts the church's doctrine that the state has the right, in the name of God and society, to impose the death penalty. But the present law was "clumsy" and should be changed to introduce categories of murder for which the death penalty should remain—such as murders of policemen and prison warders, and murders which showed deliberation and premeditation.

Lord Jowitt, former Labor Lord Chancellor, and Lord Salisbury, lord president of the council, replying to the debate for the government, said he has received mail bags of letters—and against the bill.

He said the letters came from "humble folk who have often only a frail hitch between themselves and violence."

Lord Salisbury said he agreed that the law of murder should be amended, and the government would give every support to the points of view that had been put forward.

Lord Salisbury was asked whether the government would reintroduce the bill in the House of Lords rejected the bill. There have been no executions during the three months Parliament has been debating the issue, He answered that the government would consider the implications of the vote. He could not say more.

Canadian Korean Force Lost One-Fifth Before Sailing

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada's Korean Infantry Brigade lost one-fifth of its strength through discharges and desertions before it sailed for Korea, says an official army account of the operation.

The 108 - page booklet, entitled "Canada's Army in Korea — A Short Official Account," is being published by the Queen's printer and will go on sale Wednesday for 75 cents. It is illustrated with 40 black-and-white photographs and the Bavarian wing of Adenauer's Christian Democratic Union, the Christian Social Union.

These four groups control 255 of the 487 Bundestag, or lower house, where a vote of 244 is needed to name a new chancellor.

The opposition proposed that Schaeffer, who often clashes with Adenauer, should take over the government.

was the last, or that the next war, if there is one, will not be another "peripheral" and local conflict of the same sort, or whether it will be a worldwide struggle fought with devastating nuclear weapons.

"Indeed, the former type of war is very much more probable, just as another nuclear war would probably mean a world conflict and virtually world suicide."

The first Canadian unit in Korea cost the combatants more than 250,000 casualties, of which nearly 1,600,000 were North Korean and Chinese communists. South Korea suffered 525,000 battle casualties, 60,000 of them fatal. The United States 142,081, of which 33,629 were fatal.

Canada suffered 1,537 battle casualties, 312 of them fatal. The Canadian Army had all but 14 of the casualties, which included three fatalities.

The official account does not go into the recall and enforced retirement of Brig. J. A. B. Connolly who headed the Canadian military mission in Tokyo in 1952. He was apparently retired because he did not inform Ottawa quickly enough that a rifle company was being detached from the Canadian brigade to help guard Communist prisoners of Koje Island off the south coast of Korea.

COMMONS TALKS SUMMER RECESS WITHOUT SUCCESS

Non-Confidence Motion Defeated by 122 to 71

OTTAWA (CP) — Parliament talked about a summer recess Tuesday but that was as far as it got—just talk.

Two Liberals and a Social Credit member — representatives from Canada's widely-separated areas—all agreed something should be done to get them out of the hot Ottawa summer and home to their families. But their urgings brought no immediate reply from government spokesmen.

The proponents of taking the summer off were British Columbians George Hahn (SC — New Westminster) and James A. Byrne (L—Cowichan-Malahat) and Newfoundlander C. W. Carter (L—Burin-Burgeo).

Mr. Hahn said members own it to their constituents to look after their families to get home for a time during the year. Mr. Carter said his $8,000 a year—$4,000 tax-free annual allowance as a Commons member — hardly compensates for the "sacrifice I have to make in family life."

IN SIX MONTHS

Mr. Byrne did not go all the way for summer recesses but he said he believes Parliament should be in session for not more than six months.

Liberal Ray Thomas (SC—Wetaskiwin) did not agree at all. He said so far as meeting constituents is concerned, summer is not a good time because many are away on holidays.

The present session of Parliament opened Jan. 10 and current speculation is that it will last until the end of July or perhaps early into August. The 1955 session —longest of modern record— lasted from Jan. 7 and ended May 26.

Earlier Tuesday, the House was engaged in an economic debate, mostly partisan. Opposition leader Drew's motion of want-of-confidence in the government demanding adoption now of a Canada-first policy of national development was urged, among other things, the processing of more of Canada's raw materials at home and reducing the trade deficit with the United States.

The motion was defeated 122 to 71, the Liberal majority supported by the CCF, Social Credit and Jaw-Lake Centre) out-voting the Tory Conservatives and three Quebec Independents.

Russians Charge U.S. Planes Fly Over Soviet Cities

U.S. Silent on Reds' Claim 'Invasions' Made on 3 Days

WASHINGTON (AP) — United States officials remained silent today on a Russian protest that American military aircraft flew over Soviet cities on three different days this month.

Officials said they had "no immediate comment or information" about what Russian Ambassador Georgi N. Zarubin described as incidents of "gross violation of Soviet air space."

Zarubin handed a formal protest to State Secretary Dulles late Tuesday. The state department said it was a military matter and promptly turned it over to the defence department.

Zarubin told reporters the flights took place July 4, 5 and 8. He described them as "an invasion of our air" and said "some of these planes remained there two hours' and one half."

A Moscow radio broadcast heard in London said the planes came from Western Germany by way of Communist Czechoslovakia and Poland. Moscow said two of the planes were twin-engine medium bombers.

"FOR RECONNAISSANCE"

The alleged violations of Soviet air space can only be assessed as deliberate and carried out for reconnaissance purposes, the broadcast quoted the protest as saying.

The protest note said "The Soviet government expects the U.S. government to take measures to punish those guilty of these violations and to prevent such violations in the future."

The deepest penetration alleged by the Russians was over the city of Minsk, some 250 miles from the Polish border. Two of the points, Vilna and Kaunas, once belonged to the independent country of Lithuania which was taken over by the Soviets during the Second World War. The United States has never recognized this annexation.

FBI Forces Tackle Baffling Case Of Kidnapping

WESTBURY, N. Y. (AP)—Powerful FBI forces today tackle the baffling case of kidnapped Peter Weinberger.

Under federal law the FBI has to hold off entering the case for seven days after a kidnapping. Government agents could have moved into the case earlier but they had evidence the five-week-old victim was spirited across state borders. After seven days the law presumes such a crossing.

But a week ago that a bold kidnaper snatched the tiny boy from his crib in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Weinberger's ranch-style home here. The little snipper left a note demanding $2,000 ransom. Later a man believed to be the kidnaper visited the home of the family and raised the demand to $5,000.

Police have found no trace of kidnapper or-child. There is no evidence the infant is still alive. He needed special nourishment for a baby formula and expound to survive.

Meanwhile, cranks and crackpots have-called the heartbroken mother and tormented her with reports that they have the child or know where he is.

Many telephone calls were received at the Weinberger home Tuesday. All were anonymous. They came as far away as Chicago and Pontiac, Mich.

Political Storm Rages Over Lords' Action

LONDON (Reuters)—A political storm raged today over the House of Lords' rejection of a bill, approved by the House of Commons, to abolish the death sentence.

Press and public are bitterly divided over the action Tuesday night by a 238 to 95 vote of the House of Lords.

The Labor party's Daily Herald says: "Bravely, and with a touching dignity, the House of Lords marches to the scaffold.

They rejecting the bill to abolish capital punishment, and once again refusing to bow to the will of the elected Commons, the Lords have given their own consent in the noose. Abolition of the peers' hereditary power of obstruction becomes a live political issue."

MANY APPLAUD

But many influential newspapers applauded the Lords' action. The Daily Mail says: "The peers gave effect to "the unquestioned will of the people" and acted within the limits of "the undefineads . . . and the understeals . . . ."

The vote climaxed a two-day debate which attracted to London many peers who normally take little interest in the activities, of o. the House of Lords. Nevertheless, some 540 Lords did not cast a vote on the issue.
